Digital Television

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assistance will be provided to those who are unable to take up digital television in Suffolk on the grounds of (a) affordability, (b) access and (c) reception. [50584]

Dr. Howells: The Digital Television Action Plan, posted on www.digitaltelevision.gov.uk and agreed by stakeholders, sets out a framework of actions to be taken by Government and industry, in partnership, to enable the take-up of digital television and achieve the tests of accessibility, availability and affordability announced in September 1999. The Government are committed to ensuring that terrestrial analogue broadcasting signals are maintained until those tests are achieved.

Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to maintain diversity in the ownership and provision of digital television services. [49794]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 15 April 2002]: The Independent Television Commission is responsible for licensing commercial digital television services in the UK. One specific criterion to which the commission must have regard when awarding the multiplex licence is the capacity of the digital programme services proposed to appeal to a variety of tastes and interests. The Government's consultation paper on media ownership proposed that specific limits should not be placed on the ownership of digital services. Competition law should ensure that there is effective competition between digital platforms and the Government will continue to act to ensure open access to gateways on these markets.

Television Licence Payments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions she has had with the Director General of the BBC on the guidelines for enforcement by the Television Licensing Authority of television licence payments. [49083]

Dr. Howells: I have had no such discussions. The BBC has statutory responsibility for the administration and enforcement of the television licensing system. As Licensing Authority, it is for the Corporation to set enforcement guidelines for its agent TV Licensing.

National Lottery

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she had with Camelot on the new National Lottery logo; and if she will make a statement. [49929]

Mr. Caborn: The National Lottery logo is owned by the National Lottery Commission. There is no new logo, although Camelot have been discussing with the commission minor modifications to the current design. Camelot have recently introduced a new corporate logo; that is wholly a matter for them. The Department has not been involved in either matter.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her answer of 28 February 2002, Official Report, column 1539W, on National Lottery funding for football and rugby stadiums, if she will break down the 2001 National Lottery expenditure on Rugby League stadiums by (a) type of work undertaken and (b) venue. [48647]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 15 April 2002]: Since my answer of 28 February to my hon. Friend the Member for St. Helens South, Official Report, column 1539W, Sport England has informed me that the National Lottery funding for Rugby League in 2001 was £512,142. The breakdown requested is as follows:

Leeds Rugby Ltd. (Leeds Cricket Football and Athletic Co) at Headingley—lottery award of £53,617.

Safety/security control box that serves the rugby and cricket grounds.

Batley Bulldogs RLFC at the Heritage Road ground—lottery award of £200,000.

Retaining walls, bases and foundations; concrete terracing and apron; structural frame and front handrail; roof and wall cladding; seating for 2,410; and disabled toilet block.

Hull Kingston Rovers FC at the Craven Park ground—lottery award of £58,525.

Turnstile replacement; turnstile monitoring system; additional safety rails; enhancement to perimeter fencing; undercroft conversion; public address system upgrade; safety signage; control room shutters; and other small works.

Leigh Centurions (Leigh at Hilton Park Ltd.) at the Hilton Park Ground—lottery award of £200,000.

Public toilets to the south stand and under the north stand; replacement of wooden seats with plastic moulded seats, public toilet refurbishment throughout the stadium; provision of turnstiles; upgraded public address system and closed circuit television system; provision of perimeter lighting and safety barriers; upgrade to the car park surface; reconstruction of a boundary wall; overlay concrete terracing in the east stand; and the provision of directional signage.

Coin Machines

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the value of transitions through coin-in coin-out machines in unlicensed premises. [50011]

Mr. Caborn: We have made no such assessment.

Better Quality Services Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which of the services of her Department have not been reviewed under the Better Quality Services Initiative; and when they will be reviewed. [50324]

Dr. Howells: So far reviews of 8 per cent. of departmental services have been completed. A recent project carried out jointly with the Treasury and the Centre for Management and Policy Studies will lead to the completion of reviews of core support functions by 2003. IT technical support in the Department will be reviewed by 2004. The Department is on course to meet its service delivery agreement target of conducting Better Quality Services reviews of 50 per cent. of its activities by the end of 2004. Other services do not form part of the programme under the current service delivery agreement and a programme of reviews post 2004–05 has yet to be drawn up.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her answer of 25 March 2002, regarding replies to parliamentary and public correspondence, what percentage of letters (a) from hon. Members and (b) from members of the public were answered in 2001–02 within 18 working days. [50550]

Mr. Caborn: Provisional figures for the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002 indicate that 90 per cent. of letters from hon. Members and 93 per cent. of letters from members of the public were answered within 18 working days. Final figures will not be available until the beginning of May.

Part-Time Employees

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many and what proportion of the staff of her Department are part-time employees. [47175]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 11 April 2002 by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office, Official Report, column 553W.

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many special advisers there were in her Department; and what their salaries were in each of the last five years. [46957]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Department has one special adviser in post at 12 April 2002. On salaries, I refer the hon. Member for West Chelmsford to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 11W.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners (Children)

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the placing of children of imprisoned fathers and mothers into care with special reference to the length of time they spend in care. [42942]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply.

It is not possible to identify this information from the data collected.

Job Sharing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the extent of job sharing in his Department. [41044]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 336W.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the policy of his Department is towards age discrimination. [42584]

Angela Eagle: The Home Office has made a commitment to provide staff of all ages and backgrounds with opportunities to maximise their skills and achieve their potential. This is incorporated into our employment policy on discrimination and is set out in our new equal opportunities statement. Continuing work to promote a diverse work force will include monitoring of recruitment, selection and appraisal statistics to ensure that age discrimination is not taking place.

The Department has recently completed a comprehensive review of its age retirement policy, resulting in a change in age retirement policy throughout the Home Office (including agencies), except for the prison service which is carrying out its own separate review. The new policy, which will come into force on 1 April 2002, will allow staff in all grades below the senior civil service to retire at any point between the ages of 60 and 65.

The Home Office (including agencies but excluding the prison service) has also changed its recruitment policy as of 1 April 2002, to allow the recruitment of staff up to the age of 64 subject to their meeting normal standards of health. Provided that there is an expectation of a reasonable period of employment and a return on recruitment and training, the primary criterion for selection will be the ability of a candidate to carry out the duties of the vacant post. If the most suitable candidate happens to be over sixty years old, this should not prevent a candidate being offered the post.

In making these various changes, the Home Office is implementing the recommendations of the Performance and Innovation Unit (PIU) report "Winning the Generation Game".

Drugs

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans to tackle drug taking and drug-related crime in (a) Wales and (b) the north-west. [44050]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: My right hon. friend the Home Secretary has an overarching role in monitoring progress against the United Kingdom drugs strategy, taking account of differences in approach where responsibility is devolved. The National Assembly for Wales has devolved responsibility for setting the strategic direction in Wales and monitoring its progress.

Criminal justice policy, however, is not devolved and I am pleased to report that arrest referral schemes and drug testing and treatment orders—both of which aim to help break the link between drug misuse and crime by helping offenders access treatment services—are now available throughout Wales.

Also, to help the police and local communities in England and Wales tackle neighbourhood drug problems and the crime associated with them, the Government have allocated "Communities Against Drugs" funding worth over £220 million over three years. Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships will use this money to finance locally determined actions, including in Wales.

In the north-west, there are 22 drug action teams implementing a wide range of measures to address problems of drug misuse at a local level. These include:

The drawing up of young people's substance misuse plans to deliver better and integrated services for young people;

Arrest referral schemes in all five police forces;

The roll-out of drug testing and treatment orders across all five probation service areas;

The development of treatment plans, in conjunction with Drugs Prevention Advisory Service and the National Treatment Agency, to reduce the time in accessing treatment and expand the range of support provision within each drug action team area.

Police Officers

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) special constables there were in (i) Wales and (ii) Lancashire in each year since 1997. [44046]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is set out in the table.

	Wales		Lancashire constabulary
Year[1]	Police	Special Constable	Police	Special Constable

[1] As at 31 March
[2] Figures are those for 31 January 2002

UK Security

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reviews of UK security he is undertaking; and when he expects to report on them to Parliament. [44691]

Mr. Blunkett: The Government keep all aspects of the security of the United Kingdom under continuous review. My hon. Friend will appreciate that it would not be appropriate to make the details of these matters public. However, the provisions of the Terrorism Act 2000 and the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 are both subject to independent reviews and the reports arising from these reviews will be laid before Parliament.

Irish Terrorism

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many incidents connected with Irish terrorism, excluding murder, have taken place in Great Britain between 1969 and 10 April 1998 for which nobody has been convicted; and if he will list them; [44333]

(2) how many murders connected with Irish terrorism have taken place in Great Britain between 1969 and 10 April 1998 for which nobody has been convicted; and if he will list them. [44332]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 20 March 2002]: The answer to this question can be provided only at a disproportionate cost. However, from March 1973 to 31 December 2001, there were 371 devices in London, and 17 shootings. In the rest of Great Britain there were 583 devices and 34 shootings. A total of 164 arrests were made in London and 261 in the rest of Great Britain during the same period. I understand that Deputy Assistant Commissioner (DAC) (Alan Fry) of the Metropolitan police would be happy to meet with you to discuss these matters if you wish.

Extradition

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those people subject to extradition proceedings for offences committed in Great Britain in connection with Irish terrorism before 10 April 1998; and for what offences extradition is being sought. [44334]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 20 March 2002]: It is not our policy or practice to list the names of those who are the subject of extradition proceedings. I understand from the Attorney-General that the United Kingdom has sought the return of three fugitives under the backing of warrants arrangements in place as between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland. Those cases involve charges of conspiracy to murder; conspiracy to cause explosions; escape from lawful custody, and unlawful wounding.

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the processes are of (a) recruitment, (b) training and (c) assessment of the welfare of the Criminal Cases Review Commission's expert staff. [45574]

Mr. Keith Bradley: At 31 March 2001, 47 Case Review Managers (CRMs) were in post; 50 CRMs are expected to be in post at 31 March 2002. During 2001–02, eight CRMs will have joined the Commission, together with one recruited from within, and six will have left; a net increase of three.

Salary scales affect the Commission's ability to recruit, motivate and retain CRMs, and other staff of appropriate standards, against growing outside competition. Discussions have been held within the Commission and with the Home Office concerning the current scales.

One of the Commission's two Legal Advisers left at the end of September 2001, and recruitment of a successor is under way.

Process Improvement Project 3 is concerned with the development of an integrated training programme for all staff. Particular developments include training on induction and mentoring, and for the roles of Assigned Commission Member and of Reviewer in the Commission's Personal Development Review programme.

The Commission will continue to ensure that its diversity policies are in line with best practice, and ensure that diversity issues are included in its integrated training programme. It is conducting a staff attitude survey the results of which will be available early in 2002–03.

Victim's Charter

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who the special representative of road traffic victims is on the main Victim's Charter Implementation Group. [46490]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Victim's Charter Review and Implementation Group does not include a special representative of road traffic victims. However, RoadPeace, Brake and the Campaign Against Drinking and Driving are each represented on the Road Deaths and Injuries Working Group, a subsidiary group considering the inclusion of road traffic victims within the scope of the Victim's Charter.

The Victim's Charter Review and Implementation Group receive periodic updates on the progress made by the Working Group and fully recognise that the specialist knowledge and experience of the voluntary organisations should strongly influence any emerging recommendations on how best to meet road traffic victims' needs. This is achieved through the subsidiary group.

More generally, the Home Department is setting up a separate and permanent Victims' Advisory Panel in order to advise on all current and future developments for victims. The terms of reference and membership of the panel are currently being actively considered, and an announcement will be made later this year.

Life Prisoners

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases regarding life prisoners who maintain their innocence referred to the Court of Appeal by the Criminal Cases Review Commission have been rejected; and if he will make a statement. [48654]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The specific information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. It is possible to provide figures relating to those with convictions for murder where it might be assumed that a life sentence was involved. The latest available figures show that there have been 59 such referrals since the establishment of the commission. Of these, 31 are awaiting an appeal hearing. Of the 28 appeals against a murder conviction that have been heard, the conviction was quashed in 19 cases, and judgment reserved in one case. Of the eight such convictions that were upheld by the Court of Appeal, one went on to the House of Lords where it was quashed.

Legislation requires the Court of Appeal to allow an appeal against conviction if they think the conviction is unsafe and to dismiss such an appeal in any other case. In each case the Court of Appeal's written judgment sets out the reasons for their decision on the safety of the conviction.

Almost all of those applying to the Criminal Cases Review Commission to have their convictions reviewed do so because they are maintaining their innocence.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with members of the Criminal Cases Review Commission about the treatment of life prisoners who maintain their innocence; and what the outcome was of these discussions. [48650]

Mr. Keith Bradley: There have been no such discussions. Since the establishment in 1997 of the Criminal Cases Review Commission, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has had no role in the review of alleged miscarriages of justice. The commission is an independent body and it would therefore be inappropriate for the Home Secretary to intervene in this way.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Job Advertisements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will list the job advertisements placed by her Department in the last 12 months specifying where the advertisements were placed and the cost in each case. [39054]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 4 March 2002]: Staff in my own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, are on secondment from other Government Departments and external advertising is not used.

As for the Departments for which the Attorney General is responsible, details have been placed in the Library.

Energy Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will make a statement on energy costs incurred by her Department in each of the last 10 years. [42437]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 14 March 2002]: Details of the figures available on energy costs incurred are as follows:

Special Advisers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will list the number and expected cost to her Department of special advisers in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [43265]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 18 March 2002]: None of the Departments for which the Attorney-General is responsible employ special advisers.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Solicitor-General, pursuant to the answer of 23 January 2002, Official Report, column 878W, on stolen equipment, whether the computer equipment stolen from her Department was (a) new and unused and (b) used; and what was the nature of the data stored on such items in each case. [42644]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 20 March 2002]: I am not aware of any equipment having been stolen from my Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, since 1 May 1997.

In the Departments for which the Attorney-General is responsible, details are as follows:

Crown Prosecution Service

Since May 1997, six computers and one printer have been stolen from the Crown Prosecution Service. Details of the equipment stolen are as follows:

1998–99

One computer—new and unused.

One laptop computer—used—contained administrative data.

1999–2000

Two computers—used.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

Computer memory chips stolen from the Treasury Solicitor's Department in 1997 were new and unused.

A laptop computer stolen in 2001 had been used, but contained no data other than the standard office word processing package.

Serious Fraud Office

A password protected computer stolen from Counsel's chambers was in used condition.

The data contained on the computer were case related, consisting of miscellaneous lists, statements and documents. The loss was considered by the Case Controller and its impact was assessed as insignificant.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will list the (a) private finance initiative and (b) public private partnership projects which have been delayed. [44890]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 25 March 2002]: My own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, the Treasury Solicitor's Department and the Serious Fraud Office have not entered into any public-private partnerships or private finance initiatives.

No private finance initiatives or public-private partnership projects entered into by the Crown Prosecution Service have been delayed. The CPS's private finance initiative IT project, 'Compass', has been managed well and is on track. A new PFI contract was agreed with Logica plc in December 2001.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General what the difference was between the price offered in reaching referred bidder stage and the final contract price for the five largest PFI contracts let by her Department in each of the last four years; and if she will make a statement. [45680]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 25 March 2002]: My own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, the Treasury Solicitor's Department and the Serious Fraud Office have not entered into any public-private partnerships in each of the last four years.

The Compass project, which is a private finance initiative, is the only relevant contract let by the Crown Prosecution Service in the last four years. The price for the Compass project at preferred bidder stage and the final contract price were identical. There is an allowance of 1 per cent. built into the contract price to take into account any findings arising from a further period of due diligence. The actual contract price is subject to commercial confidentiality.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General what the percentage level of income recovery was in 2001–02 from clients of the Treasury Solicitor's Department within 30 days of their receipt of a validated invoice. [47889]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 9 April 2002]: Information about progress on PSA targets will be published in the Department's 2002 Departmental Report.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Press and Public Relations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the annual budget for communications activities, including press, public relations, marketing and internal communications, was for her Department for each financial year from 1997–98 to 2001–02. [39919]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The figures for staff, administration and related costs are as follows:

1997–98	[1]2,540
1998–99	[1]2,891
1999–2000	3,386
2000–01	3,971
2001–02	3,945

[1] Prior to 1999–2000 the internal communication function was subsumed within other parts of the Department, and costs cannot be identified separately.

Expenditure from the Department's central advertising and publicity budget is as follows.

1997–98	10,879
1998–99	13,426
1999–2000	9,902
2001–02	11,688

In addition to expenditure from this central budget, expenditure from budgets allocated to individual programmes will also include spend on publicity related activity. It is not possible, except at disproportionate cost, to separately identify all such publicity related expenditure. It is possible to identify expenditure on advertising and on public relations drawn from all budgets and this is as follows:

£000

	Advertising	Public Relations
1997–98	9,992	0
1998–99	15,673	549
1999–2000	11,900	88
2000–01	29,066	794
2001–02	17,665	655

Special Advisers

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many special advisers were employed by her (a) between 1 May and 31 December 1997 and (b) in each year from 1998 to 2001 inclusive; and what the total amount spent on special advisers by the Department was for each of those years. [41259]

Estelle Morris: From May 1997 to June 2001, up to three full-time equivalent special advisers have been in post at any one time; from September 2001 this dropped to two.

In relation to special adviser costs I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 11W.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the number and expected cost to her Department of special advisers in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [43266]

Estelle Morris: My Department has two special advisers in post as at 13 March 2002.

In relation to special adviser costs I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 11W.

Departmental Contracts

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by her Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999, (c) May 1999 to April 2000, (d) May 2000 to April 2001 and (e) May 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the values of the contracts and the companies with which the contracts were placed. [43675]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Creche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what creche facilities are provided by her Department; and at what cost. [44854]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department for Education and Skills is committed to promoting equality of opportunity for its staff and supports a range of child care provision, which helps staff balance family and working life.

100 full-time work place nursery places are available to staff working in Sheffield and Runcorn; 112 full-time playscheme places, operating during the school holidays for children in full-time education aged up to 12, are available to staff working on all DfES sites. In 2001–02 these arrangements were provided at a cost of £230,000.

IT Contracts

Valerie Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many contracts her Department has with ICT suppliers; how many ICT suppliers have contracts with her Department, and what the names of these ICT suppliers are. [49930]

Mr. Ivan Lewis:

(a) The Department has 60 contracts with ICT suppliers;

(b) 47 ICT suppliers have contracts with the Department;

(c) The names of the Department's ICT suppliers are shown in the following table.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many times Ministers in her Department have travelled abroad at taxpayers' expense since March 2001; what countries they visited; and what the total cost of each visit was. [47118]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister on 11 April 2002, Official Report, column 552W.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of 25 February 2002, Official Report, columns 722–3W, on statutory instruments, what assessment she has made of the cost effectiveness of each of the statutory instruments listed in the document placed in the Library. [50017]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Costs associated with regulatory proposals are considered at the policy development stage. A Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) is completed for regulatory proposals unless there are no or negligible costs, and sets out the impact, in terms of costs, benefits and risks of the proposed regulation which could affect businesses, charities or the voluntary sector. RIAs are available from the Libraries of the House.

Departmental Underspend

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of 3 December 2001, Official Report, column 81W, regarding end year flexibility, if the remaining sum was spent in 2001–02. [50333]

Estelle Morris: £530 million of the underspend remained available on 3 December 2001. £130 million of this amount has been drawn down for use in 2001–02 and the remaining amount will be carried forward for use in 2002–03 or later years.

NVQ Level II Funding

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of the 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 902W, regarding NVQ level II funding, what steps her Department has taken with the Department of Health to ensure that all those individuals who qualify for (a) grants and (b) funds have knowledge of and access to them; and if she will make a statement. [50564]

Mr. Timms: This Department and its partners such as the Learning and Skills Council, education and training providers, local authorities and the Connexions Service take a wide range of steps to ensure that individuals have knowledge of, and access to, grants and funds to pursue education and training at all levels. Examples include: local marketing strategies developed by partners to reflect local needs and priorities; national leaflets on financial support while studying; other national and local marketing and careers material; advice and guidance from the Connexions Service and other information and guidance services; and the national learndirect telephone help-line.

The Learning and Skills Council and other partners are working with the Department of Health, the Training Organisation for Social Care (TOPSS) and social care employers to ensure that the maximum number of care staff receive supported NVQ training.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 902W, regarding NVQ level II funding, what (a) funds and (b) grants are available to individuals over the age of 24 years to obtain NVQ level II. [50560]

Mr. Timms: The Government provide 75 per cent. of the standard national course costs to the Learning and Skills Council to pass on to colleges. Additionally, students in further education can seek financial help towards the additional costs associated with study, ie transport, fees, books and equipment, and exam costs from the discretionary Access Fund, if they can demonstrate particular need. It also helps with short-term child care and, to a limited extent, emergency payments for living expenses. The Childcare Support Fund offers help to lone parents and others who are on low incomes with the cost of registered child care while studying. Career development loans are also available to individuals undertaking vocational courses, to cover the cost of fees and associated costs which are not supported from other sources. However, colleges at their discretion may remit some or all of the tuition fee for adults where there is financial hardship or they may offer access to a college hardship fund.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

High Court Judges

Lady Hermon: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what measures are being taken in Northern Ireland to ensure that more women and more members of the ethnic minorities become High Court judges. [46368]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Arising from recommendations in the Northern Ireland Criminal Justice Review, the Lord Chancellor, in December of last year, appointed Mr. John Simpson as Commissioner for Judicial Appointments for Northern Ireland. The Commissioner will oversee the development of a strategy of equal opportunity and outreach designed to broaden the pool of potential applicants for judicial office. Particular emphasis will be placed on the introduction of measures designed to encourage applications from sectors of the community that have been historically under-represented or where applications have been disproportionately low. All appointments, however, will continue to be made on merit and merit alone. The Commissioner will publish his first annual report to the Lord Chancellor early next year.

Marriage and Relationship Support

Bob Spink: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much money was awarded under the Government's marriage and relationship support programme to (a) National Marriage Week, (b) the Family Matters Institute and (c) the Lesbian and Gay Foundation, in the two most recent annual rounds. [48859]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Total funding under the Marriage and Relationship Support Grant Programme was £4.5 million in 2001–02 and is £5 million in 2002–03.

National Marriage Week 2001–02 was supported through the grant of £31,500 paid to Oasis Media (the PR company employed by Futureway Trust). Oasis Media and Futureway also received advisory support and guidance from officials in the Lord Chancellor's Department. The bid for 2002–03 did not score sufficiently highly against the published grant criteria to receive funding.

The Lesbian and Gay Foundation was supported for the first time in 2002–03 with a grant of £48,000.

Family Matters Institute has never received funding from the Marriage and Relationship Support Grant. It applied this year, but did not score sufficiently highly against grant criteria.

Court of Protection

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if she will make a statement about delays at the Court of Protection; whether they derive from the recent re-location of that service; and whether its filing systems have been affected by the move. [48734]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Court of Protection, which is the Judicial 'arm' of the PGO, continues to deal with any work that it receives very speedily. In 2001–02, over 90 per cent. of submissions received from the PGO were processed within five working days. However, there have been recent delays in the PGO (which provides the administrative support to the court) which have impacted on the overall service delivery received by the court's clients.

It is correct to say that the recent relocation of the court and the PGO, which is now complete, has been a contributing factor to the cause of the delays. The PGO is very conscious indeed of the need to improve its services and reduce delay and much work is being done to address this.

All 25,000 plus case dossiers were moved from the PGO's old location to Archway and the new filing system has taken some time to bed down. A pilot of an electronic file scanning system, using bar codes, is about to start which it is hoped will considerably improve the ability to manage records more effectively. This will be a precursor to the development and implementation of the new electronic case record management system ('MERIS') which is due to be operational within the next 18 months and will ultimately reduce reliance on paper dossiers.

Press Office

Mr. Burns: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the total cost of running the Department's press office was in (a) 1996–97 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available. [46810]

Mr. Wills: The Lord Chancellor's Department's communications functions were incorporated into a new group in 1998. The annual costs for arrangements before 1998 are no longer available. The total cost of press office activity for FY 2001–02 which includes indirect costs to 31 December 2001, salaries and other staff costs, and expenditure on press office services is £503,135.

This figure does not include the costs of any work undertaken in other parts of the communications group on publications, internal communications and the staff journal, the LCD website and general administration activities.

Parental Leave Directive

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what estimate she has made of the (a) financial costs and (b) benefits to her Department of the Parental Leave Directive. [42486]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Staff in the Lord Chancellor's Department and agencies have always benefited from generous flexible working and leave arrangements, and have been able to take unpaid leave and career breaks with the agreement of local managers. We have incorporated the employer's obligations under the Parental Leave Directive in our flexible working policies, and staff are able to take up their entitlement under the directive. We keep no separate record of this and therefore have not recorded costs separately.

Flexible Working

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many and what proportion of the staff of her Department are (a) job sharing, (b) term working and (c) engaged in another form of flexible working. [42427]

Ms Rosie Winterton: (a) 2,291 staff currently work reduced hours, a large proportion of whom are engaged on a job-share or job-split arrangement.

(b) While some staff may arrange to work term times only, we keep no separate central records for staff working that particular arrangement, as it would be recorded centrally as an individual working reduced hours.

(c) There are a number of other alternative and flexible working patterns that employees are welcome to take up under the Department's work-life balance policies, such as flexi-time, home working and compressed hours. The flexibility of the pattern is decided in conjunction with local management to suit an individual's need and the needs of their work. Other than those working reduced hours (see (a) above), no central records are kept of these arrangements.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what his Department's policy is towards age discrimination. [42570]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has incorporated age into its equal opportunities policies, and is reviewing its employment policies in line with the recommendations in the Performance and Innovation Unit Report, "Winning the Generation Game".

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will take steps to improve the response time to parliamentary questions. [47716]

Mr. Wills: In its response to the Public Administration Select Committee's Second Report of Session 2000–2001 on Ministerial Accountability and Parliamentary Questions, the Government made clear its commitment to providing prompt and accurate answers to Parliamentary Questions. This continues to be the Government's position.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

London Development Agency

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans the Government have for the role of the London Development Agency in promoting a model of economic growth that would discourage further in-migration from (a) the regions of the UK and (b) overseas into London. [50051]

Alan Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

None. The London Development Agency is a functional body of the Greater London authority, reporting to the Mayor of London. It is for the Mayor to approve and publish the London Development Agency's strategy, which sets out the agency's objectives and regional priorities.

TREASURY

Forms P85 and P85S

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many completed versions of forms (a) P85 and (b) P85S the Inland Revenue has received in each of the last five fiscal years; and if he will make a statement. [38261]

Dawn Primarolo: I regret the production of such statistics in a form which would enable me to say how many completed versions of forms (a) P85 and (b) P85S the Inland Revenue has received in each of the last five fiscal years would involve disproportionate cost.

Special Advisers

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many special advisers were employed by the Treasury (a) between 1 May and 31 December 1997 and (b) in each year from 1998 to 2001 inclusive; and what the total amount spent on special advisers by the Department was in each of those years. [41255]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 11 February 2002, Official Report, column 115W and 16 April 2002, Official Report, column 857W, and the answer given to the hon. Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans) on 11 May 2001, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many special advisers there were in his Department; and what their salaries were in each of the last five years. [46943]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by the Prime Minister on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 11W. I also refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 16 April 2002, Official Report, column 857W.

Children's Tax Credit

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families have applied for the children's tax credit; and how many of these applications have (a) been successful and (b) failed. [42518]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue have invited claims for the children's tax credit from PAYE taxpayers. They have received about 3.7 million forms to date and it is estimated that 3.3 million taxpayers have CTC in their tax codes. The latest survey data suggest that around 3.7 million families might be expected to claim through PAYE and that an additional 900,000 taxpayers will be expected to claim the CTC later, via self-assessment.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families are in receipt of the children's tax credit, broken down into (a) those who receive the full credit, (b) those who receive a partial credit because they have a comparatively small tax liability and (c) those who receive a partial credit because they earn too much to receive the full credit. [46472]

Dawn Primarolo: It is estimated that about 3.3 million taxpayers have the children's tax credit (CTC) in their 2001–02 tax codes. On (c) about 0.1 million have a reduced value in the code adjustment because it is estimated that they are on the CTC taper. On (b), it is not known for how many families the CTC eliminates the tax deducted from their earnings; this depends on their total earnings in the year.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are expected to apply retrospectively for the children's tax credit for 2001–02 because they are self-employed. [46473]

Dawn Primarolo: It is estimated that there are about 0.8 million families with income from self-employment who will benefit from the children's tax credit.

Landfill

Ian Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will consider changes to the landfill tax to support the achievement of the Government's waste policy. [47161]

Mr. Boateng: The landfill tax contributes to the achievement of the Government's waste targets by making waste producers take account of the environmental costs they impose when they discard waste to landfill.

Efficiency Savings

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the target has been in each of the last five years for efficiency savings as a percentage of total running costs for each of the non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible; and if the target was met. [49639]

Ruth Kelly: The Chancellor of the Exchequer is not responsible for any non-departmental public bodies that set their own efficiency savings targets.

Office for National Statistics

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many different questionnaires were sent out to (a) UK companies, (b) manufacturing companies and (c) distribution and services companies by the Office for National Statistics in 2001. [48926]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. John Whittingdale, dated 17 April 2002:

As National Statistician I am responding to your recent question concerning statistical questionnaires sent to businesses by the Office for National Statistics (ONS). (48926)

Of the 1.57m forms issued to UK companies in 2001, 29% went to the manufacturing sector and 66% to the distribution and services sector.

Sector definitions have been based on the Standard Industrial Classification (SIC)(92)).

Taxation

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated annual loss to the Exchequer arising from (a) tax avoidance and (b) tax evasion in offshore jurisdictions. [49296]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 April 2002]: I regret that this information is not available.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost was to his Department of answering written parliamentary questions in 2001; and how that cost was calculated. [49105]

Mr. Boateng: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer the President of the Council and Leader of the House gave him on 17 April 2002, Official Report, column 929W.

Press Conferences

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 4 March 2002, Official Report, column 10W, on departmental events, if he will list the press conferences which have taken place on departmental premises in each of the last five years; and what was the purpose of each of them. [50547]

Ruth Kelly: Information in the format required could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Offshore Investments

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated total of UK assets invested in offshore jurisdictions. [49295]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 April 2002]: I regret that this information is not available.

Wanless Report

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he received the final Wanless report. [50664]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Derek Wanless formally submitted his final report to the Chancellor on 15 April. The report was published this morning.

Annuities

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many responses he has received to his consultative document "Modernising Annuities"; and if he will list those who responded and place copies of the responses in the Library. [50021]

Ruth Kelly: The number received up to 12 April was 615. Responses are still arriving. The list of respondents and copies of the responses will be placed in the Library in due course.

Structural Funds

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) discussions he has had with ministerial colleagues and (b) representations he has received from the National Assembly for Wales, regarding securing (i) the full amount of European Structural Funds for the National Assembly for Wales above the Welsh block grant and (ii) full public match funding for the projects over and above the Barnett formula during the period of the next Comprehensive Spending Review. [49813]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Treasury Ministers hold discussions with their ministerial colleagues on a variety of matters, and receive representations from the National Assembly for Wales on a range of issues. Funding decisions taken in this year's spending review will be announced in due course.

Westfield Shopping Centre Company

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations his Department has received from the Westfield shopping centre company since 1997. [48809]

Mr. Andrew Smith: HM Treasury can find no trace of any representations from Westfield shopping centre company since 1997.

Non-domicile Status

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have been granted non-domicile status by the Inland Revenue in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [38259]

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on jobs in the City of London of a change in the taxation arrangements of those who reside in the United Kingdom but who are domiciled overseas; [49472]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact on the Baltic Exchange of a change in the taxation arrangements for those who reside in the United Kingdom but who are domiciled overseas; [49474]

(3) if he will make a statement on taxation arrangements for those who reside in the United Kingdom but who are domiciled overseas. [49475]

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the potential effect on inward investment were the UK to cease to grant non-domicile status to UK taxpayers; and what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) reviewed in respect of this matter; [49291]

(2) how many UK residents enjoyed non-domicile status for tax purposes in (a) 2001, (b) 2000, (c) 1999, (d) 1998, (e) 1997 and (f) 1987; [49286]

(3) on how many occasions since 1992 the Inland Revenue has (a) rejected and (b) approved an application by a UK resident to be given non-domicile status; [49289]

(4) how many UK taxpayers have enjoyed non-domicile status for (a) more than five years, (b) more than 10 years and (c) more than 20 years; and for each category, what percentage of those enjoying non-domicile status this constitutes; [49287]

(5) what estimate he has made of the potential income tax revenue lost in each of the last five years as a result of the granting of non-domicile status to some UK taxpayers; and what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) reviewed in respect of this matter; [49290]

(6) how many UK taxpayers with non-domicile status were (a) born in the United Kingdom and (b) carry British passports; and for each category what percentage of those enjoying non-domicile status this constitutes. [49288]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answers 15 April 2002]: We announced today as part of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Budget statement that we are reviewing the residence and domicile rules as they affect tax liabilities of individuals. I refer to Chapter 5 of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report 2002, paragraph 5.83.

Inland Revenue

Dawn Primarolo: Costs associated with regulatory proposals are considered at the policy development stage. A Regulatory Impact Assessment is completed for regulatory proposals unless there are no or negligible costs, and sets out the impact, in terms of costs, benefits and risks of the proposed regulation which could affect businesses, charities or the voluntary sector. RIAs are available from the Libraries of the House and have been available on departmental websites from 1 January 2001.

Sunset Clauses

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Bills introduced by his Department in the last five years have contained sunset clauses; and what plans he has for the future use of such clauses. [49621]

Ruth Kelly: None has contained sunset clauses applying to the Bill as a whole. Section 107 of Finance Act 2001 incorporates a sunset clause (sub-section (5)) applying to that section alone. The need for any such provision would be considered on a case-by-case basis.

WALES

Consignia

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what correspondence he has had with Consignia in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement on what was discussed; [49324]

(2) what meetings he has had with Consignia in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement on what was discussed at these meetings. [49737]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have not received any correspondence or held any meetings with Consignia in the last 12 months.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the cost was to his Department of answering written parliamentary questions in 2001; and how that cost was calculated. [49104]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to you today 17 April 2002 by my right hon. Friend Robin Cook, Leader of the House.

Ministerial Duties

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) site visits and (b) official openings (i) he and (ii) the Under- Secretary of State for Wales have attended in each month since July 1999. [49329]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Since July 1999 both my hon. Friends the Parliamentary Under-Secretaries and I have undertaken a wide range of visits and official engagements in Wales. These have included site visits and official openings as well as equally important visits to local authorities, police authorities, farms, tourism outlets, universities and voluntary organisations.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what meetings (a) he and (b) the Under-Secretary of State for Wales have had in the National Assembly for Wales since 17 March. [49330]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Since my Department has offices in the National Assembly building at Cardiff Bay, my hon. Friend and I meet regularly there both with Assembly Members and with other people.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what planned meetings (a) he and (b) the Under-Secretary of State for Wales have not attended in the National Assembly for Wales in the past month; and if he will state the reasons for non-attendance. [49331]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Both myself and my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under Secretary attend a large number of formal and informal meetings in the National Assembly. However we are both aware that there will be an enormous number of meetings held in the Assembly and we are only invited to a small fraction of them.

Foreign Trade Missions

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many foreign trade missions (a) he and (b) the Under-Secretary of State for Wales have attended in each month since July 1999. [49332]

Mr. Paul Murphy: One, a mission led by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary Member to the Czech Republic. The reports of this visit from those companies accompanying my hon. Friend were very positive. The companies concerned have reported many new contacts made during the mission, which have directly resulted in some cases in requests for business partnerships and quotations for work in the Czech Republic.

Structural Funds

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he had with the Treasury on ensuring that (a) the full amount of European Structural Funds is drawn down to the National Assembly for Wales above the block grant and (b) full public match funding for the projects over and above the Barnett formula is provided during the next period of the next Comprehensive Spending Review. [49812]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I refer my hon. Member to the answers I gave the House on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 9.

Criminal Damage

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the cost has been of criminal damage to his Department's buildings in each of the last four years. [44825]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Since my Department came into existence in July 1999 such costs have been de minimis.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

University Students

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many and what percentage of the British population attended (a) Oxford or Cambridge universities, (b) independent schools and (c) both, pursuant to his answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 822W, on permanent secretaries in the Home Civil Service, what steps are being taken to ensure that there is equality of opportunity for appointment to senior posts; and if he will make a statement. [48702]

Mr. Leslie: The figures are not available in the form requested. However, in 2000 2.4 per cent. of students in higher education were studying at Oxford or Cambridge University, and 7 per cent. of pupils aged 14 were attending assisted or independent schools. Also in 2000, 45 per cent. of the 5,900 students entering Oxford or Cambridge University came from independent schools.

All appointments to senior posts, as with all permanent civil service posts, are made on the basis of merit and an individual's ability to do the job.

Consultants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 821W, regarding the use of external consultants, if he will list each of the projects, and the purpose for which external consultants were used, in each of the last four years. [50392]

Mr. Leslie: In the last four years my Department has used external consultants on a number of projects and assignments, which have included work on: e-Government; Y2K; civil service and public sector reform; the new civil service pensions scheme; social exclusion; and domestic IT systems.

Details of individual projects are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many private finance initiative projects have been subject to refinancing after the contracts have been signed; and what has been the financial effect in each case. [50291]

Mr. Leslie: The Cabinet Office does not currently have any PFI projects for which contracts have been signed.

Engineering Technology Board

Mr. Page: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many civil servants have member status of key institutions which are represented on the Engineering Technology Board. [49299]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 15 April 2002]: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

PRIME MINISTER

Lord Levy

Mrs. May: To ask the Prime Minister what are the official title and responsibilities of Lord Levy. [49890]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Stockport (Ms Coffey) on 9 July 2001, Official Report, column 350W.

Mrs. May: To ask the Prime Minister how many Government press conferences Lord Levy has attended in his capacity as a representative of the Government. [49893]

The Prime Minister: Lord Levy has attended press conferences when accompanying me or the Foreign Secretary.

Mrs. May: To ask the Prime Minister whether Lord Levy is obliged to report gifts, hospitality and services he receives in the course of his duties to a (a) permanent secretary and (b) representative of the Cabinet Secretariat. [49892]

The Prime Minister: Lord Levy passes any gifts of value to my office, which handles them according to the usual procedures for Government gifts. Any hospitality and services provided to Lord Levy in the course of his duties as my envoy are known to the FCO and the UK diplomatic missions involved.

Mrs. May: To ask the Prime Minister if Lord Levy adheres to the Ministerial Code. [49891]

The Prime Minister: Lord Levy is not a Minister.

Mrs. May: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list (a) each foreign visit that Lord Levy has undertaken acting as a representative of the Government and (b) the cost of each trip to public funds since 23 October 2001. [49895]

The Prime Minister: Lord Levy has visited Israel, the Palestinian Authority, Egypt, Jordan, France and Germany in his role as the Prime Minister's envoy since 23 October 2001. Lord Levy received no remuneration and travels at his own expense. The FCO and diplomatic missions overseas provide him with practical support, the cost of which is not separately itemised.

Mrs. May: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will list the speeches that Lord Levy has made since his appointment as a representative of the Government; [49894]

(2) if speeches by Lord Levy on foreign policy issues are cleared by the Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary of State. [49897]

The Prime Minister: Yes. Lord Levy has given one public speech in his capacity as my envoy, to the Foreign Affairs and Finance Committees of the Venezuelan National Assembly during his visit to Venezuela in November 2000.

Mrs. May: To ask the Prime Minister if Lord Levy informs the Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary of State before making any foreign visit on behalf of the Government. [49896]

The Prime Minister: Lord Levy's foreign visits as my envoy are agreed in advance by the Foreign Secretary and me.

Iraq

Harry Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister what Her Majesty's Government's requirements are of Iraq to avert the threat of military action. [49809]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave to hon. Members at Prime Minister's Questions, and to the statement I gave to the House on Wednesday 10th April.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister what Her Majesty's Government's requirements are of Iraq for the lifting of economic sanctions. [49810]

The Prime Minister: The international community's requirements for lifting sanctions on Iraq is clearly laid out in UNSCR 687 (a copy of which can be found at www.un.org/Departments/unmovic/documents/docslist.htm).

Free Travel and Accommodation

Mr. Collins: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions since 1997 he has accepted free travel and accommodation from overseas Governments. [48783]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 15 April 2002]: It has been the policy of successive Governments to provide hospitality for official visits by Foreign Heads of State who come as guests of Her Majesty's Government.

It has also been the policy of successive administrations that when Prime Ministers and Ministers make official visits abroad some accommodation and travel arrangements may be provided for by foreign Governments. Wherever costs to HMG occur they are laid out in the lists of overseas visits undertaken by Cabinet Ministers. These were placed in the Library of the House and published in the Official Report on 17 June 1999, columns 196–97W; on 28 July 2000, column 969W; and on 20 July 2001, column 467W.

All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the "Ministerial Code" and "Travel by Ministers", copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

With regard to my private visits all occasions have been registered in the Register of Members Interests.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Ethiopia

6. Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what link the Government make between UK aid to Ethiopia and improved implementation of rights for women there. [46045]

Clare Short: We are developing a partnership with Ethiopia to help reduce the very high levels of poverty there. It is impossible to reduce poverty without empowering women and educating girls. Because, as Kofi Annan said, poverty has a woman's face and 70 per cent. of the poor of the world are female.

Uganda

7. Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement about progress in reducing international debt in Uganda. [46046]

Hilary Benn: Uganda became the first country to benefit under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative, receiving $347 million dollars worth of debt relief in April 1998. Under the enhanced HIPC framework agreed in 1999, Uganda received additional debt relief of $656 million dollars when it reached its second Completion Point in May 2000, bringing its total HIPC relief to $1 billion dollars in net present value terms.

Zimbabwe

8. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her Department's future aid projects in Zimbabwe. [46047]

Clare Short: The people of Zimbabwe face a bleak future under President Mugabe's policies. We are working with the international community to urge policy changes in order to halt the catastrophic decline in agriculture, the economy, and social services. We are also providing humanitarian assistance through the UN and non-governmental channels, and helping to address the HIV/AIDS epidemic that affects one in three adults.

17. Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the humanitarian situation in Zimbabwe. [46056]

Clare Short: The humanitarian situation in Zimbabwe is likely to worsen later this-year. The maize harvest in April and May is forecast to meet only 30 per cent. of national needs and the Zimbabwe Government has no credible plan to source food for its people. Drought has compounded the already serious problems caused by mismanagement of the economy, farming, and food markets. The UK is one of many urging policy changes on the part of the Zimbabwe Government, while providing emergency assistance through international and non-governmental channels.

Tanzania

9. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on aid to Tanzania. [46048]

Clare Short: We work with the Government of Tanzania to promote growth and reduce poverty. Britain is one of Tanzania's major development partners. Our bilateral assistance programme stands at £80 million for 2002–03. This goes towards strengthening economic and political governance, improving public services including health and education, and helping to provide key infrastructure such as water and roads in rural areas.

12. Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make statement on her policy on aid to Tanzania. [46051]

Clare Short: DFID works with the Government of Tanzania to promote growth and reduce poverty. Britain is one of Tanzania's major development partners. Our bilateral assistance programme stands at £80 million for 2002–03. This goes towards strengthening economic and political governance, improving public services including health and education, and helping to provide key infrastructure such as water and roads in rural areas.

Afghanistan

10. Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made on the implementation of the Bonn agreement with respect to women's human rights. [46049]

Clare Short: The inauguration of the Afghan Interim Authority laid the foundations for progress on realising women's rights in Afghanistan. This includes the formation of a Ministry for Women and the announcement of the procedures for the Emergency Loya Jirga in June 2002, which will include 11 per cent. women.

13. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much aid has been given to Afghanistan by the Government since the conflict began. [46052]

Clare Short: My Department has committed over £60 million since September 2001 to support both the Afghan Interim Authority and the United Nations-led humanitarian and recovery effort. This assistance is being channelled through United Nations agencies, the Red Cross movement and non-Governmental organisations. In addition, at the Tokyo Conference on the Reconstruction of Afghanistan, we pledged £200 million from the DFID budget over the next five years for both reconstruction and humanitarian assistance.

14. Valerie Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress is being made to ensure that humanitarian aid is reaching those in greatest need in Afghanistan. [46053]

Clare Short: Despite three years of drought and 23 years of conflict, and the recent insecurity and population displacement, widespread famine in Afghanistan has been averted by the early and effective actions of the humanitarian community. Over 6.6 million people have been provided with food aid over the past six months, as well as other essential relief supplies such as tents, clothing and cooking equipment. Pockets of need remain in isolated or insecure areas, but agencies are using every means available to deliver assistance to those in need.

Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the humanitarian situation in Afghanistan. [46060]

Clare Short: The humanitarian situation remains fragile in Afghanistan. After 23 years of conflict and three years of drought, as well as continued limited access to some areas of Afghanistan, our assessment is that significant needs will remain for at least the coming year in challenging and volatile operating conditions. The latest assessment by the United Nations and the Afghan Interim Administration estimates that approximately 9 million Afghans, including over 1 million internally displaced persons (IDPs), will be in need of assistance in Afghanistan in 2002.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with the multilateral institutions regarding the development of a PRSP for Afghanistan. [48794]

Clare Short: My Department is in contact with the multilateral institutions about Afghanistan's reconstruction, and is also providing support to the Afghan Assistance Coordination Authority, which developed the recently announced National Development Framework, to develop its capacity to manage the process of reconstruction. There are no immediate plans for the development of a PRSP for Afghanistan. However, the design and implementation of a National Development Framework could pave the way for a PRSP in due course.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) how much of the money committed to the reconstruction of Afghanistan over the next two years at Tokyo will be invested in the long-term funding of a civilian police force and judicial system; [48762]

(2) how much of the money committed to the reconstruction of Afghanistan over the next two years at Tokyo will be invested in (a) police training programmes and (b) demobilisation, disarmament and reintegration of ex-combatants programmes. [48761]

Clare Short: The UK is closely engaged with the Afghan Interim Authority (AIA) and international partners to develop an integrated framework for security sector reform encompassing the police, military and judicial systems. This includes discussions with Germany, who are acting as the national lead on police training programmes in Afghanistan. We have so far allocated £7 million to the Afghan Reconstruction Trust Fund, which will be used to fund recurrent costs of the AIA's budget, including the civil police force, judicial system and the re-integration of combatants into society.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much of the money committed to the reconstruction of Afghanistan over the next two years in Tokyo has been contributed to UN agencies working on the ground in Afghanistan, broken down by (a) agency and (b) amount. [48760]

Clare Short: At the Tokyo conference on the reconstruction of Afghanistan in January 2002, my Department committed £200 million over the next five years (from 1 April 2002) towards the country's reconstruction and humanitarian needs. The specific allocation of these resources is currently being finalised.

Since September 2001, we have contributed over £40 million to UN agencies working in Afghanistan. We intend to continue to contribute to humanitarian and recovery programmes implemented by UN agencies, as well as channelling funds through the new World Bank-run Afghanistan Reconstruction Trust Fund, to which we are making an initial contribution of £7 million this financial year.

Sustainable Development

11. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the UK's contribution to the three preparation committee for the world summit on sustainable development. [46050]

Clare Short: The Government's strategic objective for the World Summit is "to make globalisation work for sustainable development, especially for the poorest". We see the Summit as part of a broader process that includes the Millennium Declaration, the WTO Doha Development Agenda and the agreement reached at the Financing for Development Conference in Monterrey. Priority areas for action at Johannesburg include fresh water, sanitation and energy.

Officials from DEFRA, the Cabinet Office, DTI, FCO, the Scottish Executive and my Department attended the 3rd Prep Com in New York from 25 March to 5 April. The UK worked closely within the EU and in discussion with other countries in pursuit of our objectives. We will continue to do so in the run up to the Ministerial PrepCom in Indonesia from 27 May to 7 June.

Africa

15. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the future of the new partnership for African development. [46054]

Clare Short: The New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) is an African owned and led initiative that the UK Government strongly supports. Its central principle is that it is Africa's responsibility to advance African development. NEPAD has identified as initial priorities the areas of peace and security and political and economic governance, which include an African peer review mechanism. I am placing in the Library of the House a recent speech outlining my views on priorities for NEPAD.

24. Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what policies her Department is pursuing to reduce poverty in Africa. [46064]

Clare Short: We are pursuing a wide range of policies to reduce poverty in Africa, including more and better aid and greater coherence among policies which affect African nations.

Bilateral aid to sub-Saharan Africa stands at over £630 million a year and is increasingly provided in the form of assistance to reforming Governments—to enable them to implement nationally-owned poverty reduction strategies. Bilateral aid to Africa has almost doubled since 1997 and is set to rise further.

The UK has been at the forefront of efforts to set up a system for providing debt relief to countries with unsustainable debt levels. So far 19 countries in sub-Saharan Africa have reached decision point on the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative, and are receiving interim debt relief and three have completed the HIIPC process and are receiving full debt relief; we are working with African countries and with the international community to tackle conflict in the continent, including seeking resolution of existing conflicts as well as finding ways to prevent future disputes; working with the international community and partner countries to tackle key development challenges, including fighting HIV/AIDS, investing in health and education, investing in rural economies and infrastructure, promoting private investment and sustainable development, improved information and communications technology, and improving governance and service delivery; promoting changes in policies of wealthy countries which impact on Africa's development, such as trade and market access, agricultural subsidies, arms proliferation, corruption and bribery by international companies; working with African leaders and institutions to promote closer partnerships between Africa and the rest of the world, and supporting African owned development strategies, including the New Partnership for Africa's Development; and providing funds to, and working with, multilateral bodies such as the World bank, International Monetary Fund, the European Commission, the African Development bank, United Nations agencies, and others.

25. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the future of the new partnership for African development following the election results in Zimbabwe. [46065]

Clare Short: The situation in Zimbabwe highlights the need for African nations to improve standards of economic and political governance in the struggle to eliminate poverty. The proposed African peer review system has an important role to play. These proposals are being developed under the New Partnership for Africa's Development. It is clear that the Zimbabwe elections did not meet the standards already laid down by the Southern Africa Development Community.

28. Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the new partnership for African development. [46068]

Clare Short: The New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) is one of the most important initiatives that has come from Africa in recent years. It represents a consensus among African countries that Africa should take responsibility for African development. NEPAD countries have identified economic and political governance and peace and security as their initial priorities.

Nigeria

16. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of progress towards better governance and curbing corruption in Nigeria. [46055]

Clare Short: Nigeria has a history of poor governance and very high levels of corruption which is the major cause of very high levels of poverty in this oil rich country. Nigeria transferred from military to civilian rule in 1999 amidst considerable optimism for reform. Improvements in the performance of Government and impact on corruption have been slow.

Freedom of speech has generally been observed but on corruption the Government have not done enough. The introduction of anti-corruption legislation and an anti-corruption commission are important but not sufficient. Strong implementation is needed.

My Department has expanded its involvement in Nigeria significantly since 1999. We are focused on improved governance at federal, state and local level but Nigeria is a difficult place to work and progress is slow.

Sierra Leone

18. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the actions of her Department to help strengthen democracy and economic recovery in Sierra Leone. [46057]

Clare Short: Much of our work in Sierra Leone aims to strengthen democracy and promote economic recovery. We are providing technical assistance to the National Election Commission to help ensure that May's Presidential elections are free and fair. We are providing long-term support for wide-ranging public sector reforms, working with the police, the Ministry of Defence, the judiciary and the Anti-Corruption Commission to promote democratic values, including greater transparency, accountability and the rule of law. A copy of my speech in Sierra Leone in February outlining our priorities for action will be placed in the Library of the House.

Economic recovery is one of the two main planks of the Sierra Leone Government's interim poverty reduction strategy. We are providing technical support to develop this into a full strategy, guiding Government policy and expenditure over the next few years to promote growth and poverty reduction. And we have been successful in pressing for early relief on Sierra Leone's unsustainable international debt under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries initiative, a key step towards attracting renewed foreign investment.

Mozambique

19. Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her Department's priorities are for Mozambique within the context of the new development plan for Africa. [46058]

Clare Short: Our priority in Mozambique is to support the development, implementation and monitoring of the Government of Mozambique's own Action Plan for the Reduction of Absolute Poverty, known as the PARPA. Many of the central themes of the New Partnership for African Development, including the need for local ownership of development processes and for sound policies, better governance and accountability to citizens, are strongly reflected in the PARPA.

The New Partnership for African Development also calls for donors to re-examine their ways of working and, in particular, to focus their resources on agreed priorities and to ensure that funds are increasingly channelled through Government's own systems. In Mozambique, DFID and other key donors have established a common mechanism for disbursing aid funds via the Government's central budget, supported by measures to improve capacity. This is vital to improve accountability and the effectiveness of aid, by ensuring that funds are allocated via the budget to the priority areas set out in the PARPA, and we are committed to increasing the proportion of our Mozambique programme which is channelled in this way.

Sudan

21. Mr. Patrick Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her Department's policy towards Sudan. [46061]

Clare Short: Sudan needs peace above all else. The UK is playing an increased part in the international effort to bring about peace. We have appointed a UK Special Representative for Sudan who will head a Unit made up of DFID and FCO staff. Their task will be to co-ordinate the UK contribution to the international efforts for peace in as many ways as possible.

In the meantime we continue to address urgent humanitarian needs arising from conflict and drought, and we have provided over £40 million of humanitarian assistance to Sudan through NGOs and UN relief agencies since 1997. A more substantial UK development programme depends on an end to the war.

22. Paul Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action her Department is taking to promote peace in Sudan. [46062]

Clare Short: Since my visit to Sudan in January my Department, in consultation with the FCO, has endeavoured to raise the profile of the peace process in Sudan within the international community, and identify areas where the UK can play a key role in promoting peace.

We are making some progress and our influence is growing, particularly through the recent appointment of a Special UK Representative for Sudan, Alan Goulty. He will be supported by a joint FCO/DFID-staffed unit responsible for co-ordinating and participating in dialogue between both sides in the Sudanese conflict. The new unit will also ensure continuing links with other important international partners who share our wish for lasting peace in Sudan.

Angola

23. Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the humanitarian situation in Angola. [46063]

Clare Short: The humanitarian situation in Angola has deteriorated further over the last 12 months. The humanitarian suffering as a result of the internal conflict has been huge and millions of people are living in life-threatening conditions. NGOs are providing some basic services, but their capacity is heavily over-stretched.

I hope that the recent peace agreement between the Government and UNITA will lead to an early improvement in the humanitarian situation in Angola. Some benefits are already apparent. Aid agencies have been able to use roads which have been unsafe for many years to get food to the needy. Easier access to the worst affected areas could dramatically ease the humanitarian crisis facing the country.

I recently visited Luanda and discussed the humanitarian situation with the Government and the need to follow up the peace agreement with urgent measures to assist all displaced people, and to help them return to their homes as rapidly as possible.

Somalia

26. Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department has recently given to Somalia. [46066]

Clare Short: My Department continues to provide humanitarian assistance to Somalia in response to International Agency appeals and in support of NGO initiatives. We have provided over £3 million of assistance in the past year.

The pursuit of a lasting peace agreement in Somalia remains a priority. We, with the international community, continue to support regional and national efforts to promote dialogue and political reconciliation in Somalia.

Cameroon

27. Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what effect the Monterrey talks will have on reducing poverty in Cameroon. [46067]

Clare Short: The Monterrey meeting did not discuss the situation in specific. Whether Cameroon will benefit from the extra development assistance pledged at Monterrey will depend on the degree to which the Government of Cameroon implements a strong poverty reduction strategy.

Older People

29. Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action her Department is taking to help older people living in developing countries. [46069]

Clare Short: My Department's aim is the elimination of poverty in poorer countries. Older people are often among the poorest.

We adopt a rights-based approach. We seek to ensure that poor people are consulted on policies and decisions that affect them and use participatory methods to understand people's perception of their rights and the obstacles they face in accessing entitlements.

We are supporting the African Union's leadership in promoting and guiding national policies on aging in their membership, working to strengthen Government and civil society capacity for addressing aging issues, and assisted the policy development process in the preparations for the Second World Assembly on Aging earlier this month.

Palestine

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what projects in the West Bank and Gaza have received financial support from her Department during the last five years. [49912]

Clare Short: The following table lists the projects funded since 1997, the start date, and the total allocation.

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what projects in the west bank and Gaza have received financial support from the European Union during the last five years. [49911]

Clare Short: The European Commission (EC) has compiled a table of its assistance provided to the Palestinians since 1994. I will place a copy in the House of Commons Library. The UK contributes 19 per cent. of the EC budget.

Bushmeat

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions her Department has had with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs about bushmeat. [48152]

Clare Short: DFID staff meet regularly with DEFRA staff for Inter-Departmental Conservation Co-Ordination meetings. They have not held formal discussions about bushmeat.

New Partnership for Africa's Development

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions she has had with the Government of South Africa regarding the New Partnership for Africa's Development. [46059]

Clare Short: On 4 April, I held discussions in Johannesburg with Professor Wiseman Nkuhlu, President Mbeki's Economic Adviser, who chairs the Steering Committee of the New Partnership for African Development. I also gave a speech titled "Can Africa Halve Poverty by 2015?—the challenge for NEPAD" to which Professor Nkuhlu replied.

Poverty Diseases

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what information she has received on how the European Union budget line B7–6211 on the fight against poverty diseases is to be spent. [48994]

Clare Short: The 2002 European Community budget includes euro 25.2 million for budget line B7–6211 (HIV/AIDS Policies and Programmes). Euro 20 million is intended to support specific projects with a focus on programmes targeting HIV prevention in youth. Euro 5.2 million will support a number of specific initiatives including the Barcelona HIV/AIDS conference, the Asia-Pacific Leadership Forum and the AIDS Vaccine Preparedness Project (with International AIDS Vaccine Initiative and the World bank).

The Commission have tabled a draft regulation to cover the diseases of poverty (HIV/AIDS, Malaria and Tuberculosis) which sets out how it is proposed to spend the funds in budget line B7–6211 in 2003–06. This draft regulation is currently under consideration and is being discussed by UK officials with other member states.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much expenditure has been committed for this year of budget line B7–6211 (fight against poverty diseases) in the European Union; and what the projected spending under this budget is for this financial year. [48995]

Clare Short: Allocations for budget line B7–6211 (Aid for poverty-related diseases) for 2002 are:

Commitments—euro 26,123,000

Payments—euro 18,080,000.

In addition, euro 60 million allocated to this budget line in 2001 will be paid to the Global Fund to fight AIDS, TB and Malaria in 2002. There is no 2002 payment outturn projection available but by the end of February euro 0.8 million had been spent.

Departmental Report

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when the 2002 Departmental Report will be published. [49590]

Clare Short: DFID's Departmental Report 2002 will be published on 24 April.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many Private Finance Initiative projects have been subject to refinancing after the contracts have been signed; and what has been the financial effect in each case. [50281]

Clare Short: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on January 2002, Official Report, column 224W.

Staff Pay

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the cost in 2001–02 was of the pay increase to staff in her Department, agencies and the non-departmental public bodies for which she is responsible; and what the cost of the forthcoming increase will be in 2002–03. [50420]

Clare Short: The overall cost of the pay increase 2001–02 was 4.75 per cent. for staff below the senior civil service and 4.6 per cent. for senior civil servants. The overall cost of the 2002–03 increase for staff below the senior civil service will be 3.9 per cent. We are unable to confirm the overall increase in 2002–03 for senior civil servants at this time as we are still assessing the impact of the new senior civil service pay system. The Department is not responsible for any agencies or non-departmental bodies.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what have been the total salary costs of each of the non-departmental public bodies for which she is responsible in each of the last five years. [50305]

Clare Short: We do not pay a salary to any of the members of our public bodies; they receive reimbursement of travel expenses.

As from December 2001 an honorarium of £5,000 was paid to the Chair of the Commonwealth Scholarship Commission and from January 2002 and honorarium of £200 per meeting was paid to members who take part in a Scholarship Selection Committee.

One of my civil servants holds an ex officio post on the Overseas Service Pensions Scheme Advisory Board. His salary costs, estimated as a percentage of the amount of time spent dealing with the work of the board, are as follows:

2001–02	898.67
2000–01	878.92
1999–2000	1,059.23
1998–99	1,034.00
1997–98	971.96

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to her answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 872W, on the new deal for young people, how many people have been employed by her Department under the scheme in each of the last four years. [50425]

Clare Short: The information is as follows:

1998 and 1999: nil

2001: two.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to her answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 872W, on the New Deal, how many people employed on the scheme in each of the last four years have subsequently found subsidised employment for more than 13 weeks. [50424]

Clare Short: None.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to her answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 887W, on correspondence, for what reasons 13 per cent. of letters from hon. Members and 10 per cent. of letters from members of the public were not answered within the target period. [50342]

Clare Short: Delays occurred for a variety of reasons. These include, while seeking agreement across Whitehall on a reply when more than one Department had an interest, when letters were transferred between Departments when the lead responsibility to reply was unclear and while waiting for an agreed standard line to campaign letters. Less frequently replies were not sent within the target period because the information required was not immediately available, for example when seeking information from sources overseas.

Creche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to her answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 888W, on crèche facilities, what the costs are of the holiday playschemes at East Kilbride and London. [50423]

Clare Short: Further to my answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 888W, on créche facilities, the costs of the holiday playschemes for our staff in East Kilbride and London are as follows:

East Kilbride

£10 annual registration fee for first child and £5 for each additional family member plus £8.50 per child per day, paid wholly by the parents.

London

£26 per child per day of which the parent and DFID pay £13 each. For 2001, the cost to DFID on subsidising DFID parents' use of the Whitehall Holiday Playscheme was £1,373.56.

Overseas Projects

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the value for money achieved by the management of the Natural Resources System Programme. [49256]

Clare Short: The programme was most recently assessed last year. We concluded that the management is cost-effective and that good progress is being made towards achievement of the programme's objectives.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the value for money achieved by the Local and Regional Government Institutional Strengthening Project in the Ukraine. [49204]

Clare Short: DFID awarded the contract for the management of the Local and Regional Institutional Strengthening Project in 1999 and value for money was a key consideration when selecting the management agents by competitive tender. A comprehensive review of the performance of the project was conducted by the Eastern Europe and Central Asia Department in October 2001. The review team concluded that the project is successfully assisting central and regional government to deliver local services more efficiently and represents good value for money.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the value for money achieved by the Gansu Basic Education Project in China. [49160]

Clare Short: The Gansu Basic Education Project began implementation in December 1999 and currently is scheduled to end in December 2005. Regular monitoring visits are carried out by our Education Adviser in the DFID Beijing office. We also assess progress and value for money through six-monthly project reports and through our consultants. Specific annual review missions are also carried out by a DFID London and Beijing team to assess progress against the project purpose and outputs.

The last annual review took place in October 2001. Good progress has been made. There has been an improvement in net enrolment rates. Drop-out rates have reduced and there has been an improvement in transfer rates from primary to junior middle school. A number of reform-orientated innovations piloted in the project have been noted by the Education Ministry and adopted by other western provinces (eg. participatory teacher training in Shaanxi), donors (eg. school development planning by UNICEF) and NGOs working in China (eg. Plan International). The next annual review will be the project's mid-term review in October.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the value for money achieved by the Sustainable Rural Livelihoods pilot project in Russia. [49183]

Clare Short: DFID awarded the contract for the management of the Sustainable Rural Livelihoods Pilot Project in 1999 and value for money was a key consideration when selecting the management agents by competitive tender. A mid-term review of the performance of the project was undertaken by a team of officials from DFID's Eastern Europe and Central Asia Department, accompanied by representatives from the World Bank and Russia's Federal Ministry of Agriculture in October 2001. The review team concluded that the Project was influencing policy making at both the regional and federal level, making a very useful contribution to the implementation of the land reform policy in Russia, helping with market reform in the rural sector, and represented good value for money.

Reproductive Health

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on steps that have been taken in the European Union to strengthen the administration of reproductive health programmes; what staffing provisions are in place to deal with reproductive health programmes; and what the budgeted amount for this financial year is for such programmes. [48997]

Clare Short: One of my Department's objectives for EC reform has been to improve the mix of skills in the Commission in order to strengthen the EC's contribution to meeting the Millennium Development Goals. The Commission's central staffing for health issues has significantly increased over the past year. Within DG Development there are now four (and soon to be five) full-time health professionals, and a seconded UK health expert has a specific remit to lead on reproductive health. Within EuropeAid there are approximately 20 staff working exclusively on health.

EC expenditure on reproductive health is provided both from a specific budget line (B7–6312) and—the majority—through country programmes in the form of projects and budget support. Budget line B7–6312 is intended to support innovative approaches and the development of new knowledge. Work is underway to link EC expenditure to specific categories but at present the Commission do not have full details of their overall spending on reproductive health. The allocations for budget line B7–6312 in the 2002 budget are:

commitments[1]—8,584,000 euros

payments—9,141,900 euros.

[1] Commitments made in one year are usually implemented, ie paid, over a series of subsequent years.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement about (a) the budgeted amounts in the European Union for reproductive health spending in each of the past five years, (b) the actual spending and (c) steps being taken to ensure that budget allocation and expenditure match each other in the future. [48993]

Clare Short: EC expenditure on reproductive health is provided both from a specific budget line (B7–6312) and—the majority—through country programmes in the form of projects and budget support. Budget line B7–6312 is intended to support innovative approaches and the development of new knowledge. Work is under way to link EC expenditure to specific categories but at present the Commission do not have full details of their overall spending on reproductive health.

Commitments and payments information for budget line B7–6312 is readily available only for the past four years.

The EC are taking steps to increase their efficiency through a programme of reforms begun in 2000. The reforms include restructuring the Directorates General responsible for external actions and development, simplifying internal procedures and strengthening the capacity of country offices.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on what assessment she has made of whether the European Union is adequately organised and staffed to spend budget line B7–6312 on reproductive health. [48992]

Clare Short: My Department has not made any formal assessment of the Commission's organisation and staffing in relation to budget line B7–6312 (Aid for population and reproductive health care). However, we understand that three health professionals (one in DG Development and two in EuropeAid) have specific responsibility for management of this relatively small budget line[1], and that during the evaluation of proposals they are supported by additional external technical experts.

[1] Commitments allocation of euro 8.5 million for 2002.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the performance of the European Union has been in spending this year's budget line B7–6312 of 8.6 million euros on reproductive health. [48991]

Clare Short: The EC financial year runs from 1 January. As of 28 February, no new commitments from the euro 8.6 million budgeted had yet been approved but euro 1.9 million of a possible euro 9.7 million payments had been spent.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Departmental Secondments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff in his Department have been seconded to jobs in the (a) private and (b) public sector in each of the last four years. [31779]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office (Mr. Leslie) on the 7 February 2002, Official Report, column 1130W.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to amend the Housing Benefits (General) Regulations 1987. [37302]

Malcolm Wicks: Work has already begun on consolidating the housing benefit regulations and we plan to lay consolidated regulations before the House as soon as practicable.

Technical amendments will also be made to reflect changes to other benefits. These include:

Consequential changes that support the introduction of the loss of benefit provisions (known as Two Strikes) as contained in the Fraud Act 2001 and the Loss of Benefit Regulations 2001. Two Strikes is designed to be a deterrent against continued abuse of the benefit system by introducing a benefit sanction for those convicted separately of two benefit offences; housing benefit and council tax benefit are both covered by the Two Strikes provisions.

The phased introduction from April 2002 of provisions under the Fraud Act 2001, including the powers for authorised officers from DWP and local authorities to require information from prescribed organisations such as banks and building societies. The information-gathering powers are covered by a statutory Code of Practice, which has been subject to a three-month public consultation and has been laid before both Houses of Parliament.

With the introduction of the pension credit, we are making changes to remove the need to re-claim HB every year for pensioners aged 65 and over. For those over 65, we will be making awards for five years. The HB income threshold will also be raised by the maximum amount of the pension credit savings reward, to an expected level of £113.80 for single pensioners in 2003 and we will treat pensioners' capital more generously.

In addition, the following amendments are also planned:

Amendments to the regulations governing the eligibility of child care cost in the calculation of housing benefit;

Amendments to bring the income related benefit provisions for war widowers' pensions in line with those for war widows; and Annual uprating student disregards and student rent deduction.

These proposed changes have been considered by local authority representatives in the Housing Benefit Regulation Scrutiny Group.

Fair Trade

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether fair trade products are sold in his Department. [39829]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Department has outsourced catering services and the suppliers are responsible for sourcing products sold to staff. A review of the sale of fair trade products with the primary catering supplier on 13 March (during Fair Trade Fortnight) confirmed that fair trade products, such as coffee and tea, are sold in the Department. This review also confirmed that, while the supplier currently operates ethical, environmentally appropriate procurement policies, they are also working to develop and introduce a specific fair trade strategy. The Department supports this initiative and will monitor progress closely.

Mr. Tom Mann

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the compatibility of the practice of sessional doctors sitting on tribunals with the European Convention on Human Rights, following the complaint lodged with the officer of the Benefits Agency by Mr. Tom Mann; and if he will make a statement. [39413]

Maria Eagle: My noble Friend the Lord Chancellor appoints appeal tribunal members. The qualification requirements are set out in regulations and do not exclude sessional doctors. The regulations preclude doctors from hearing an appeal in which they have previously given advice to a decision maker in the Department or prepared reports on a claimant's medical condition.

Maternity Benefit

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many UK employees were in receipt of maternity benefit in each of the last five years. [44366]

Maria Eagle: There are two maternity payments available to expectant mothers in work; statutory maternity pay (SMP) paid by employers to their employees, and maternity allowance (MA) paid by the Department to employees who do not qualify for SMP, the self-employed and those women who have recently left their jobs.

It is estimated that around 0.3 million[1] women in Great Britain will have received SMP from their employer in 2001–02.

The available information on maternity allowance awards to employees is in the table[2].

	Number[1,2]
5 April 1999 to 1 April 2000	28,000
6 April 1998 to 3 April 1999	29,000
7 April 1997 to 4 April 1998	25,000
1 April 1996 to 5 April 1997	28,000

[1] The estimated number of SMP cases in 2001–02 is derived from case load estimates underlying forecast expenditure on SMP but may be subject to revision once information from the National Insurance Records System 2 is available.

[2] Maternity allowance figures for 2000–01 are due to be released on 25 April.

[3] Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.

[4] Figures for Northern Ireland are not included. Social Security matters in Northern Ireland are the responsibility of the Northern Ireland Assembly.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of those who left the gateway of the New Deal for Young People without proceeding to any of the options were in full time employment 12 months later. [44897]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Up to the end of December 2001, 68 per cent. of the young people who had left the New Deal for an unsubsidised job at the Gateway stage had not reclaimed jobseeker's allowance within 12 months.

Source: New Deal Evaluation Database.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the (a) number and (b) proportion of people leaving the new deal for young people who were in sustained jobs (i) six and (ii) 12 months later. [44900]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Up to the end of December 2001, of the 264,100 new deal leavers who had moved into jobs, 214,700 (81 per cent.) had not reclaimed jobseeker's allowance within six months and 180,600 (68 per cent.) had not reclaimed it within 12 months.

Note: The figures include those leavers who have been in employment for less than 6–12 months, but who have not yet returned to JSA.

Welfare Bill

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of the total welfare bill was spent on those living on below 60 per cent. of median income in each year since 1997. [45285]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested is not available.

ONE Service

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if the four ONE pilots will cease to run after March. [46100]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: In October 2001 the ONE pilots in south-east Essex, Calderdale and Kirklees and part of the Clyde Coast and Renfrew pilot became Jobcentre Plus pathfinders. All of the remaining ONE pilots will continue to operate after March 2002 and will be converted to Jobcentre Plus offices in due course.

Lone Parents

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the New Deal for Lone Parents advertising campaign. [46470]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Advertising is one of the methods used to make sure that lone parents are aware of the help and support available through the new deal for lone parents (NDLP) to help them move into work.

So far, over 300,000 lone parents have volunteered to participate in NDLP and over 130,000 of these have found work.

Maladministration

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what payments have been made to individuals following findings of maladministration by ombudsmen with responsibility for agencies under remit of his Department in the last 12 months; and what plans he has to review the powers to increase the level of awards that can be made. [47934]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Comprehensive details of financial redress paid in cases where the Parliamentary Ombudsman has completed an investigation and issued a formal report are not held centrally. However, based on such records as are available, payments amounting to £155,866.51 have been agreed in 94 cases during the 12 months to 31 March 2002. This figure excludes cases where a statutory resolution has been found.

Each case is judged on its individual merits. Where the Ombudsman finds that maladministration has occurred and that financial redress is appropriate, the general principle adopted is to provide redress which is fair and reasonable in the light of all the facts and circumstances of the case. Where the complainant has suffered actual financial loss as a result of the maladministration, or faced costs which would otherwise not have been incurred (and which are reasonable in the circumstances), the general approach is to restore the complainant to the position he or she would have enjoyed had the maladministration not occurred. Where there is not an actual financial loss or cost, careful judgment is used to decide whether financial redress is appropriate and, if so, what constitutes fair and reasonable financial redress. There are no plans to alter these principles.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects the new CSA rules to come into force for new cases. [47818]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 20 March 2002, Official Report, columns 315–16.

Action Teams for Jobs

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in which locations Action Teams for Jobs are in operation. [47926]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The 63 Action Teams for Jobs are in the following locations.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what new initiatives his Department has taken in 2001–02 to assist in achieving its Public Service Agreement targets. [47178]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Information about progress on PSA targets will be published in the Department's 2002 departmental report.

Medical Assessment

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action he is taking to harmonise and disseminate national definitions of disability for statistical and policy purposes. [48815]

Maria Eagle: Different definitions of disability and conditions of entitlement are in use within UK legislation and for relevant schemes and services. There are no plans to seek to harmonise these because they serve different purposes and reflect the fact that disability affects people in many different ways and to greatly differing degrees.

Vocational Rehabilitation

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to enhance input by psychologists into the vocational rehabilitation service. [48820]

Maria Eagle: Jobcentre Plus employs approximately 80 occupational psychologists in its disability service. Their role is partly to help clients with disabilities who have particular problems in finding or keeping suitable employment, and partly to assist the network of disability employment advisers and access to work advisers. The psychologists' work has been reviewed over the past three years. As a result improvements have been introduced, especially to their work with clients who have mental health problems, dyslexia and other specific learning disabilities and with people who have sustained head injuries.

Job Retention

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a progress statement on the job retention pilot studies. [48821]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Nine organisations were funded to develop and test the feasibility of their proposals for the job retention pilot studies during the three months ending on 15 March 2002. The detailed bids are currently being considered, together with a report on the evaluation methodology.

Correspondence

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he intends to reply to the letter dated 4 March from the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan regarding his constituent, Mr. Light, of Banffshire. [50072]

Alan Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

I am currently considering the matters raised by the hon. Member as they more appropriately fall within my responsibility and will write to him shortly.

Minimum Income Guarantee

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the rise in the minimum income guarantee has been since 1997 after taking account of inflation. [45913]

Mr. McCartney [pursuant to the reply, 10 April 2002, c. 228W]: The minimum income guarantee was introduced in 1999. Since 1999, annual rises in the minimum income guarantee have been linked to earnings. The rises, after taking into account inflation increases and the differences in the premiums paid, are shown in the table.

Percentage increase

April 2000	3.0	3.0
April 2001	15.9	13.7
April 2002	4.8	4.9

Departmental Projects

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which of his Department's projects have received sponsorship since 1997, including (a) details of the sponsor, (b) the nature of the project, (c) the date of the project, (d) the total cost of the project and (e) the amount of money involved in the sponsorship deal. [48400]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 11 April 2002]: In line with the Government's commitment in its response to the Sixth report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life, details on individual amounts of sponsorship valued at more than £5,000 will be disclosed in Departmental annual reports.

HEALTH

Public Services

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings he has had and representations he has received, by date and subject, from Members of the National Assembly for Wales and the Welsh Assembly Executive, regarding the increased use of private sector funding on delivering public services, broken down by date and subject. [43219]

Mr. Hutton: No meetings have been held with Members of the National Assembly for Wales, or the Welsh Assembly Executive, nor representations received from them regarding the increased use of private sector funding on delivering public services.

Advertising

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on advertising by his Department in each of the last five years: and if he will give a breakdown of the largest items of expenditure in each year. [37607]

Ms Blears [holding answer 20 February 2002]: Major advertising campaigns commissioned by the Communications Directorate are in the table as follows.

£ million

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	[1]2001–02

Others	0.58	—	—	2.08	4.20	2.52
Total	2.39	2.04	8.53	15.31	20.97	19.81

[1] Planned (to be updated).
[2] The Department's spend on blood donation advertising reduced in 1999–2000 because most of this activity was funded directly by the National Blood Authority, who took over full responsibility for this expenditure on 1 April 2000.
[3] Prior to 1999–2000 advertising on smoking was undertaken by the Health Education Authority (HEA).
[4] Including Asian specialist press.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the publicity and advertising campaigns run by his Department in each of the last four years, specifying the (a) purpose, (b) cost to public funds, (c) number of staff involved and (d) method of evaluation in each case. [39101]

Ms Blears: I refer the hon. Member to an answer I gave the hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham (Tim Loughton) today, which listed, with costs the major advertising campaigns run by the Department for the period in question.

The table shows the purpose and method of evaluation for each campaign.

Campaign and purpose	Evaluation
Antibiotics To encourage the public not to over use antibiotics and thus reduce their effectiveness	Pre and post tracking research of advertising campaign
Blood donation[1] To encourage more members of the general public to become blood donors	The number of people registering to give blood, calls to the blood donation helpline and amount of blood given
CALM To promote the CALM mental health helpline to young men on the onset of depression	Feedback from regional co-ordinators in the active zones, calls to the helpline, pre and post launch campaign research
Drugs To publicise services provided by National Drugs Helpline	Calls to the helpline monitored
Flu To advise general public that those at risk (people 65 and over and others suffering from specified illnesses) should see their GP for a free flu jab	Returns from health authorities on immunisation take up among the target age group. Pre and post campaign tracking research

Campaign and purpose	Evaluation
Mind Out Campaign to reduce the stigma associated with all those with mental health problems	Quality and quantity of editorial coverage generated; assessment of attitude shifts identified by key campaign partners
NHS including nurse recruitment To encourage new recruits to apply for training in nursing and other professions in the NHS and those who are qualified and have left to return to the NHS	Volume and analysis of helpline response. Pre and post campaign tracking, analysis of volume and quality of recruitment and retention related editorial. Returner recruitment assessed through report from regional offices
NHS Direct Promotion of 24-hour nurse led health advice telephone service	Pre and post tracking research of advertising campaign and number of calls to helpline
Organ donation To encourage more people to enlist on the Organ Donor Register	Pre and post campaign tracking research of advertising campaign and calls to the Organ Donation Literature Line
Prescription fraud Advertising, publications and helpline to inform service providers and users about the new penalty charges enforced for fraudulent claims for free or reduced costs of treatment	Analysis of helpline response
Preventing teenage pregnancy National campaign aimed at halving the rate of teenage conceptions among under-18s by 2010 and lower the incidence of STIs among 13 to 18-year-olds	Pre and post advertising tracking research, calls to Sexwise helpline and visits to the related websites
Adult sexual health To decrease the rates of sexually transmitted infections among 18 to 30-year-olds and raise awareness and understanding, providing information so people can make informed choices about their own sexual health	Analysis of calls to helpline, visits to related website and some pre and post advertising tracking research
Social work recruitment National advertising and marketing campaign to encourage applications to be a social worker	Volume and analysis of helpline response, qualitative and quantitative analysis of recruitment related editorial generated. In the long term assessment of impact on the number of applications
Smoking[2] To encourage smokers to give up smoking	Pre and post tracking research of advertising campaign and calls to the NHS Smoking Helpline
Walk in centres To raise awareness of a new health care choice	Number of visitors to centres measured constantly to track changes. Patients asked how they found out about the service on arrival at centres. Street poll of 5,000 patients outside four NHS walk in centres to discover views on service conducted 2000–01
Winter To encourage the general public to make appropriate use of NHS services and other sources of health advice including NHS Direct	Pre and post tracking research of advertising campaign and number of calls to NHS Direct

[1] The National Blood Authority (NBA) took over full responsibility of this campaign on 1 April 2000.
[2] Prior to 1999–2000 advertising on smoking was undertaken by the Health Education Authority.

It is not possible to provide a breakdown of staff by each individual campaign. However the numbers of staff employed in the project management of advertising campaigns and publicity campaigns on 1 January each year are as follows:

1 January 1999: 15

1 January 2000: 21

1 January 2001: 28[1]

1 January 2002: 31.

[1] The Department took on direct control for a number of public health campaigns including Smoking Cessation with the closure of the Health Education Authority on 31 March 2000.

Children's Services

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many whole time equivalent NHS (a) consultant child and adolescent psychiatrists, (b) clinical psychologists working with children and (c) psychotherapists worked with children in each year since 1997. [41717]

Jacqui Smith: Whole time equivalent numbers for child and adolescent psychiatrists, clinical psychologists and psychotherapists are shown in the tables. Information is not collected about the numbers of clinical psychologists and psychotherapists who work with children.

1. The data are derived from the Department of Health Statistical Bulletin "Statistics from the Regional Drug Misuse Databases for six months ending March 2001".

2. The Office for National Statistics have derived an area classification of health authorities for Great Britain which includes the category "coalfields" published as "The ONS classification of local and health authorities of Great Britain: revised for authorities in 1999—ISBN 1 85774 355 5".

Intermediate Care

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the allocation of funds for intermediate care planned for each financial year; and if he will list the commitments to spend made by each (a) health authority, (b) health trust and (c) Government office region. [42951]

Jacqui Smith: The NHS Plan announced an extra £900 million annually by 2003–04 for new intermediate care and related services to promote independence and improve quality of care for older people.

Further details are in HSC 2002–01, LAC (2001) 01, published in January 2001, a copy of which is in the Library.

Spending commitments for future years are not available by health authority (HA), trust and region. However, annual performance monitoring within a given financial year provides details of expenditure by HA and region and projections to the relevant year-end.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the number of parliamentary questions yet to be answered by his Department; how many members (a) are waiting for replies to parliamentary questions and (b) have suffered delays of six months or more in waiting for responses to parliamentary questions; and how many parliamentary questions tabled before the Christmas Recess 2001 have yet to be answered by his Department; [44448]

(2) if he will make a statement on the investigation into the falsification of answers to parliamentary questions within his Department; what measures he will take to ensure that parliamentary questions are replied to promptly; and what measures he will take to ensure that falsification of answers to parliamentary questions does not recur. [44449]

Mr. Hutton: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health (Mr. Milburn) gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Ellesmere Port and Neston (Mr. Miller) on 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 756–59W.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to WPQ numbers (a) 9416, (b) 9403, (c) 8710, (d) 10282, (e) 10262, (f) 11000, (g) 10998, (h) 11957, (i) 12914, (j) 12918 and (k) 13108. [17827]

Ms Blears [pursuant to the reply, 5 March 2002, c. 275W]: Replies to the hon. Member's questions were given as follows:

WPQ number	Date	Official Report column
9416	21 January 2002	665W
8710	21 January 2002	665W
9403	20 November 2001	242W
10262	15 January 2002	248W
10282	18 January 2002	530W
11000	23 November 2001	568W
10998	5 December 2001	363W
11957	25 February 2002	938W
12914	12 March 2002	992W
12918	25 February 2002	934–36W
13108	31 January 2002	560W

Justices of the Peace

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many members of staff at his Department are Justices of the Peace; and if he has a strategy for his Department to encourage members of staff to become Justices of the Peace. [44547]

Ms Blears: The Department does not record details of civil service staff who are Justices of the Peace.

Section 50 of the Employment Rights Act 1996 (ERA) requires employers to allow their staff reasonable time off for public duties. The Civil Service Management Code (paragraph 9.2.5) also requires Departments to allow time off for attendance required by section 50 of the ERA 1996.

Special leave policy rests with individual Departments and agencies who are free to decide on the amounts of special leave, the circumstances for which it is granted and whether such leave is paid or unpaid.

As part of its commitment to encouraging staff to be active in the community, the Department has a special leave policy that allows staff who are Justices of the Peace an annual limit of 18 days paid leave as well as reasonable time for travelling to permit up to 26 attendances.

Mental Health

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the pledged (a) secure beds, (b) 24-hour staffed beds and (c) assertive outreach teams with patient access available 24 hours a day, seven days a week for those with complex mental health needs are in place; and how many he estimates there will be by April. [46285]

Jacqui Smith: The targets set in the NHS Plan for April 2001 were all achieved on time. These included over 500 additional secure beds, over 320 additional 24-hour staffed beds, 170 assertive outreach teams and access to services 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, for all those with complex mental health needs. At April 2002 the latest forecast figures show that there will be:

199 assertive outreach teams in operation

4,435 24-hour staffed beds.

Forecast figures for the number of secure psychiatric beds at April 2002 have not been collected. The outturn figure for beds at various levels of security for 2000–01 was 4,860. Current monitoring arrangements for secure beds do not include provision of forecasts. The mental health service mapping provides numbers of secure beds as at September 2001, and the bed availability and occupancy annual returns provide bed occupancy rates by ward classification, of which "secure unit: other ages" is a mental illness ward classification.

NHS Finance

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much money was lent under the NHS brokerage system in each of the last five years; and (a) by whom and (b) to whom; [45846]

(2) how much money is owed and (a) by whom and (b) to whom, under the NHS brokerage system; [45847]

(3) how much money was repaid under the NHS brokerage system in each of the last five years; and (a) by whom and (b) to whom. [45845]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested has been placed in the Library. All brokerage within the national health service is managed centrally and not between individual health bodies. Information for 2001–02 is not yet finalised.

Correspondence

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the target time is for his Department to reply to letters from (a) hon. Members and (b) members of the public; and what the time is that it has been taking his Department to reply to letters from (i) hon. Members and (ii) members of the public in the last six months. [46972]

Ms Blears: Information is published annually by the Cabinet Office on the volume of correspondence from Members of Parliament received by Ministers and agency chief executives, Departments' and Agencies' handling targets, and their performance in meeting these targets. The report for 2001 is due to be published shortly.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will respond to the letter from the hon. Member for Leominster dated 17 January, concerning the payment of widows' pensions under the NHS Pension Scheme. [48694]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Department has no record of receiving this correspondence. The Department's Ministerial Correspondence Unit is seeking a copy of this correspondence.

Cottage Hospitals

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the cottage hospitals which have been (a) opened and (b) closed since 1997. [47019]

Ms Blears: Information on hospital closures ceased to be collected in 1991 following the introduction of the national health service internal market and trusts.

Community and cottage hospitals play an important role in providing care closer to home, for example in carrying out day surgery, minor procedures and caring for patients in the recuperative phases of recovery from illness or accident. These hospitals will help us meet our target of introducing an additional 5,000 intermediate care beds by 2004, of which more than 2,400 are already in place.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds in cottage hospitals there were in each of the past five years. [47029]

Ms Blears: The information is not collected centrally.

Data on bed numbers are collected annually at national health service trust level, rather than by individual hospital site. Information on bed availability and occupancy is available on the Department's website www.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity.

New Hospital Beds

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many extra NHS beds have been introduced in (a) total, (b) general and (c) acute wards since the publication of the national plan. [47828]

Mr. Hutton: In the general and acute sector in England, the number of beds available in 2000–01 increased by over 700 to 135,794 compared with the year before. This represents a third of the target of 2,100 extra general and acute beds set out in the NHS Plan. Further information is shown in the table.

Average daily number of available beds by certain sectors, England, 1999–2000 to 2000–01

	Available beds
Sector	1999–2000	2000–01	Net change
All ward types	186,290	186,091	−199
Acute	107,218	107,956	738
Geriatric	27,862	27,838	−24
General and acute (acute plus geriatric)	135,080	135,794	714

Hospital Food

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many unannounced inspections of the quality of hospital food have taken place since the introduction of the NHS National Plan. [47004]

Ms Blears: The NHS Plan said that there would be unannounced inspections of the quality of hospital food.

These inspections have been undertaken by patient environment action teams (PEATs) as part of the wider assessment of the quality of the environment in which patients are treated.

The programme of PEAT visits commenced in 2000, and a further round of inspections is currently in process. To date a total of 1,060 unannounced inspections of the quality of food have been carried out, this figure will rise to 1,172 by the end of the current round of PEAT inspections.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many requests for each category of snack boxes there have been, expressed as a percentage of the overall number of requests; [47030]

(2) what percentage of hospitals make the full range of snack boxes available 24 hours of the day. [47031]

Ms Blears: The requirement for hospitals to introduce a 24-hour catering service was included in the NHS Plan. The better hospital food programme, launched on 8 May 2001, set out details of the 24-hour service which should include a ward kitchen service, a snack box service and, by 2004, a light bite service. £4 million was issued to NHS trusts in January 2001 to assist in setting up 24-hour services.

The implementation pack issued to all national health service trusts in support of the better hospital food programme included three examples of snack boxes. However hospitals are not required to introduce these exact versions—each hospital should determine the types of snack box(es) used, and their precise contents, taking into account patient-mix and the advice of catering managers, nursing staff and dietitians.

Information relating to the types of snack boxes in use, and the numbers of requests, is not collected centrally.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what role dieticians play in (a) advising and (b) checking on nutritional values in food in the NHS. [47006]

Ms Blears: The better hospital food programme, announced in the NHS Plan, is a long-term initiative designed to improve the quality, availability of and access to food in NHS hospitals. It is supported by the investment of £38.5 million over four years.

It is increasingly being recognised that ensuring patients, many of whom enter hospital malnourished or over-nourished, receive and can benefit form adequate and appropriate nutrition plays a key part in the overall healthcare they receive and can lead to speedier recovery, reduced length of stay, reduced incidence of post operative complications such as pressure sores and poor wound healing and may lead to reduced expenditure on drugs, particularly antibiotics, used to combat these.

Hospital dieticians have a crucial role to play in ensuring that these benefits are realised through: advising on the formulation of hospital menus to ensure that nutritional standards are delivered for all patients, including those with specific dietary need; monitoring the nutritional intake of patients, particularly those at greatest risk; and advising individual patients on the nutritional values of foods, in order to help them make informed choices about their food intake to meet both their dietary needs and those of their clinical condition.

To this end NHS Estates has been working closely with representatives of the British Dietetic Association who are developing a consensus statement on "Food Service and the State Registered Dietitian" which will cover standards for the professions in a number of key areas: nutritional analysis of recipes and menus; diet coding definitions and standard glossary of terms. This will be a key document enabling standard criteria to be applied across the NHS.

Additionally, an ad hoc working group which includes nutritional experts, representatives of the British Dietetic Association, NHS dietitians and nurses is devising principles for nutritional screening which will facilitate the measurement of both under and over nutrition on entry to hospital. This will allow early intervention of clinical and dietetic staff to address problems which, unchecked, may lead to prolonged ill health. In addition research will be undertaken to establish the clinical outcomes of improved nutrition and to provide a tool to ensure that the nutritional aims of the better hospital food programme are taking effect.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of NHS trusts have introduced a 24-hour catering service. [47829]

Ms Blears: The requirement for hospitals to introduce a 24-hour catering service was included in the NHS Plan. The better hospital food programme, launched on 8 May 2001, set out details of the 24-hour service which should include a ward kitchen service, a snack box service and, by 2004, a light bite service. £4 million was issued to national health service trusts in January 2001 to assist in setting up 24-hour services.

The most recent returns from acute NHS trusts shows that 69 per cent. of hospitals have introduced ward kitchen services and 66 per cent. provide snack boxes. No figures are yet available regarding the number that have introduced light bite services.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of hospitals have successfully adopted the new NHS menus. [47024]

Mr. Hutton: The Better Hospital Food programme, which was launched in May 2001, is supported by the provision of £38.5 million over four years. It is a longer term initiative designed to improve the quality, availability of and access to food in hospitals.

The programme has set a number of targets for the national health service to achieve, including the incorporation into menus of dishes designed for the NHS by a team of leading chefs.

Latest returns from acute hospitals show that by the end of April two thirds of hospitals will include at least three of the 'leading chef' dishes in their menus.

The majority of those hospitals which are still working towards this target are those which use external suppliers. NHS Estates are working closely with the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency and the external manufacturers to increase the availability of 'leading chef' dishes from these sources so that hospitals with delivered meals services can move swiftly to incorporate them in their menus.

Toothbrushes

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many free toothbrushes have been handed out under the Brushing for Life campaign; and what has been the cost per toothbrush. [47837]

Mr. Hutton: To date 186,050 packs have been distributed as part of the Brushing for Life scheme. Each pack contains a toothbrush, a tube of toothpaste and a leaflet.

The toothbrushes in the packs cost 44 pence each.

Cystic Fibrosis

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason adult cystic fibrosis sufferers are not entitled to free prescriptions. [47863]

Ms Blears: No adult is entitled to free prescriptions unless they fall within one of the following groups:

people aged 18 who are in full-time education;

people aged 60 and over;

people who hold an exemption certificate on maternity or medical grounds; people who get, or whose partner gets, income support, income-based jobseeker's allowance, full tax credit or credit reduced by £72.20 or less; people who are named on an HC2 charges certificate issued under the NHS low income scheme.

Cystic fibrosis sufferers who fall into these categories will be entitled to free prescriptions, but cystic fibrosis is not one of the conditions which, of itself, can lead to the issue of a medical exemption certificate. These conditions are set out in the National Health Service (Charges for Drugs and Appliances) Regulations 2000 (SI 2000/620).

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 15 March 2002, Official Report, column 1291W, on cystic fibrosis, what plans to has to reduce the number of conditions which entitle the sufferer to free prescriptions. [47129]

Ms Blears: We have no plans to reduce the number of conditions which entitle the sufferer to free prescriptions.

Cleanliness

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how the board member nominated to take personal responsibility for monitoring hospital cleanliness will be held responsible for any failure; [47008]

(2) what percentage of NHS trusts have not nominated a board member to take responsibility for monitoring hospital cleanliness. [47007]

Ms Blears: It was a requirement of the NHS Plan that every national health service trust should nominate a board member to take responsibility for monitoring hospital cleanliness and report to the board following regular check-ups. Each NHS trust board takes collective responsibility, and overall accountability rests with the chief executive. The new national standards of cleanliness for the NHS, issued by NHS Estates in April 2001, set out clearly what is required.

There have been no reported instances where a trust has failed to nominate a board member to monitor hospital cleanliness.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the National Standards of Cleanliness for the national health service applies to the cleanliness of individual patients; and if he will make a statement. [48890]

Mr. Hutton: The National Standards of Cleanliness for the national health service apply to buildings in which health care is delivered, not patients.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been waiting over 15 months on the in-patient waiting list for (a) each quarter since March 1997 and (b) each month since January 2001. [47856]

Mr. Hutton: The data requested are shown in the tables. Table 1 provides quarterly statistics from March 1997 onwards and table 2 provides monthly statistics from January 2001 onwards.

NHS Funding

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in relation to the £120 million in his Department's spring supplementary estimate 2001–02 designated for take-up of end year flexibility, how much relates to (a) NHS trusts, (b) health authorities and (c) other NHS bodies; and which trusts, health authorities and other bodies received end year flexibility and the amount involved in each case. [46412]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 26 March 2002]: The £120 million end year flexibility related to the Department's unallocated provision and was not allocated to individual NHS bodies in 2000–01. It did not form part of the end year flexibility arrangements for NHS bodies.

Adjustments to health authorities resource limits in 2001–02 as a result of health authorities and NHS trusts underspending in 2000–01 are set out in tables, copies of which have been placed in the Library. There were no adjustments for other NHS bodies.

Appointments

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of appointments were booked electronically in the last year. [47002]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not currently available centrally.

The NHS Plan states that there will be electronic booking of appointments for patient treatment by the end of 2005. Implementing electronic booking systems is being taken forward as a long-term, four-year, implementation project as part of the NHS Modernisation Agency's National Booked Admissions Programme. Monitoring arrangements for electronic booking are being developed as part of the implementation project work programme.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many GP appointments were missed in each year since 1997; and how his Department plans to reduce this. [47542]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 April 2002]: These data are not collected or held centrally. However, we are concerned by the impact of missed appointments on primary care services and have funded "Doctor/Patient Partnership" campaigns on this since 1997. In addition, the national primary care development team is now working with general practitioners to help them to offer more responsive and timely access for patients. For participating practices this approach has led to substantial reductions in missed appointments.

Ophthalmology Waiting Times

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average outpatient ophthalmology waiting times have been for each quarter of the last five years. [47866]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Marfan Syndrome

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many post mortems revealed Marfan syndrome in each of the last 10 years for which records are available. [48843]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Nigel Jones, dated 17 April 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question concerning how many post mortems revealed Marfan's syndrome in each of the last 10 years for which records are available. (44843)

The figures requested are given in the table below. The data are only available in this form from 1993 onwards.

Number of deaths where a post mortem was carried out and Marfan's syndrome was subsequently noted on the death certificate, England and Wales, calendar years 1993 to 2000[1,2]

	Number of deaths where Marfan's syndrome was:
Calendar year	The underlying cause of death[3]	Mentioned on the death certificate only[4]
1993	12	3
1994	12	4
1995	20	4
1996	14	3
1997	15	5

[1] Data relate to deaths occurring per calendar year.
[2] No inference can be made from these data as to whether Marfan's syndrome was diagnosed before or after death.
[3] The underlying cause of death is the disease or condition that initiates the train of morbid events leading directly to death.
[4] When a disease or condition was not the underlying cause of death but was noted on the death certificate but not coded to the underlying cause.

Psychiatric Wards

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 811W, on ward refurbishment, which hospitals and institutions will have their psychiatric wards refurbished as a consequence of the dedicated budget established in 2001–02. [47443]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The £15 million total consists of two separate funding sources. £10 million additional funding for mental health was allocated to regions on a weighted capitation basis for the refurbishment/redecoration of psychiatric wards; updating information technology; the provision of alternatives to acute admissions; and voluntary sector support. Details of how this funding was allocated locally are not held centrally.

The remaining £5 million was the first tranche of a special budget of £30 million over two years and those NHS trusts which benefited from this are listed.

Portsmouth Healthcare NHS Trust (St. James Hospital)

Berkshire Healthcare NHS Trust (Fairmile Hospital)

Avon and Wiltshire Partnership Mental Health Trust (Barrow Hospital)[1]

East London and City Mental Health Trust (St. Clements)

Barnet, Enfield and Haringey Mental Health Trust (St. Anne's)

County Durham and Darlington Priority Services NHS Trust (the Gables and County Hospital, the Pierremont Unit)

Tees and North East Yorkshire NHS Trust (St. Lukes, Middlesbrough)

Worcester Community and MH NHS Trust (Redditch, Bromsgrove, Worcester and Kidderminster)

Coventry Healthcare Trust (Caludon Centre)

Shropshire Community NHS Trust (Telford and Wrekin, Shrewsbury)

North Birmingham Mental Health NHS Trust (Small Heath)

South Birmingham Mental Health NHS Trust (Queen Elizabeth Hospital)

Hertfordshire Partnership NHS Trust (Lister and QE2 Hospitals)[1]

Rotherham Priority Health Services NHS Trust (Rotherham)

Doncaster and South Humber Healthcare Trust (Scunthorpe)

North Sefton and West Lancashire Community NHS Trust (Ormskirk and District General)[1]

Tameside and Glossop Community and Priority Services NHS Trust (Wards 35–36)

St. Helen's and Knowsley Hospital NHS Trust (Whiston Hospital).

[1] Scheme spans more than one year and full allocation not spent in 2001–02.

Firework-related Injuries

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) steps are being taken and (b) investment is being made, to reduce firework-related injuries. [47841]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

The comprehensive measures introduced by the Firework (Safety) Regulations 1997 and actively enforced by Trading Standards Departments are supplemented by robust and targeted safety campaigns to warn consumers of the dangers of misusing.

Prescriptions

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of prescriptions were issued electronically in the last year. [46999]

Ms Blears: The proportion of prescriptions produced by computer and issued electronically by general practitioners in the last year was between 60 and 80 per cent. dependent on which health authority area the GP was situated.

Mixed-sex Wards

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether newly constructed hospitals comprise (a) wards assigned solely to either male or female patients and (b) subdivided bays. [47839]

Mr. Hutton: Guidance on the requirements for new accommodation is given in Health Building Notes and Design Guides HBN 4 "In-patient accommodation—options for choice". The guidance provides national health service trusts with design solutions to meet the requirements of privacy, dignity and safety. Additional guidance on achieving single sex accommodation "Enhancing Privacy and Dignity" has been issued.

Out-patients

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of patients awaiting their first out-patient appointment have been waiting over six months. [47830]

Mr. Hutton: Information regarding the total stock of out-patient waiters is not collected. However, published out-patient activity statistics show that 5 per cent. of patients referred by general practitioners who were seen during the period October to December 2001 had been waiting longer than 26 weeks.

Primary Care Trusts

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he expects primary care trusts to devolve control of budgets to practice level. [47865]

Mr. Hutton: Primary care trusts (PCTs) may develop indicative budgets at practice or locality level to make explicit resource use within a PCT, encourage fairer more transparent allocation of resources and enable primary care to lever strategic change within local health communities.

Incentive schemes created in conjunction with the development of indicative budgets encourage general practitioners to understand and reflect on their current practice and innovate. PCTs in consultation with practices and through the development of a local health improvement and modernisation programme should develop and agree a commissioning plan for the PCT as a whole, reflecting the health needs of local communities. This two-way dialogue allows PCTs to secure services for their populations that general practitioners and other primary and community health professionals identify as being necessary. Work is in hand to scope how PCTs and practices could be supported to develop indicative budgets at practice level. This could be through developing a national framework or local models of good practice.

Learning Disabilities

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on the provision of village communities for people with learning disabilities. [47503]

Jacqui Smith: Our policy on services for people with learning disabilities, their families and carers is set out in the White Paper "Valuing People: A New Strategy for Learning Disability for the 21st Century" published in March 2001. This was supplemented by guidance to local authorities and the national health service in August 2001.

Our objective for housing is to enable people with learning disabilities and their families to have greater choice and control over where and how they live. People with learning disabilities can live successfully in different types of housing including small-scale ordinary housing, supported living and village and residential communities as well as residential care. We expect local authorities to ensure that all housing options are considered when they are exploring the future housing, care and support needs of people with learning disabilities and their families.

Councils should respect the preferences of individuals and their families, wherever the preferred options will meet individuals' assessed needs and are affordable. Where there is limited demand for a particular option, councils and housing authorities may need to consider joining with neighbouring authorities to encourage the development of a greater range of provision.

Learning disability partnership boards have been set up in each local authority area to oversee and advise on implementation of the Valuing People programme. Boards have been asked to produce local housing strategies for people with learning disabilities by winter 2002–03. The Department and the Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions will issue shortly guidance about this for learning disability partnership boards.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the expenditure on the NHS was as a proportion of the GDP of England in the last 12 months; and to what extent he collates information about NHS expenditure in Scotland as a percentage of Scottish GDP in order to assess his progress towards meeting his targets. [46917]

Mr. Hutton: The gross domestic product (GDP) for England is not yet available for 2001–02. The latest available GDP for England is for 1999 and is published by the Office of National Statistics in 'Regional Trends' which is available in the Library. Figures for later years are available on a United Kingdom basis only.

The Government's target for health care investment is for the whole of the United Kingdom. NHS expenditure in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland is therefore collected by the Department in order to calculate total national health service expenditure in the United Kingdom.

Planned NHS expenditure in the United Kingdom for 2001–02 was 6.3 per cent. of GDP. This means that total healthcare expenditure, including private healthcare, as a percentage of GDP last year was 7.3 per cent. rising to 7.6 per cent. by 2003–04 based on latest expenditure plans.

Woodside Adolescent Unit

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the proposed closure of the Woodside Adolescent Unit at West Park Epsom. [47498]

Ms Blears: The changing need for child and adolescent mental health services is expected to render the in-patient service at Woodside Unit unviable, in its current form, from April 2003.

Surrey Oaklands NHS Trust is continuing to work with the health authority and local primary care trusts to explore options for the reprovision of services, retaining locally accessible services where possible. This will be linked to continuing work to develop local care models with alternatives to hospital admission.

Drugs

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what drugs approved by NICE are unavailable nationwide; and if he will make a statement; [48669]

(2) what regulations apply to (a) local community care trusts, (b) health authorities and (c) hospital trusts regarding the prescription of drugs accepted by NICE; and if he will make a statement; [48670]

(3) what powers doctors possess to prescribe drugs in contravention of local authority policy; and if he will make a statement. [48671]

Ms Blears: Health authorities and primary care trusts are under a statutory obligation set out in Directions to provide appropriate funding for treatments recommended by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE). The Directions were made using powers in the National Health Service Act 1977 and came into force on 1 January 2002. The Directions were introduced as part of the Government's strategy to ensure consistency of access to treatments recommended by NICE and deemed appropriate by clinicians for their individual patients. Funding is provided in baseline allocations to meet these commitments.

Brain Injury

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much of its research budget is allocated for research into traumatic brain injury rehabilitation. [48812]

Jacqui Smith: The main Government agency for research into the causes of and treatments for disease is the Medical Research Council (MRC) which receives its funding via the Department of Trade and Industry. The MRC supports a large amount of basic underpinning work on how the brain responds to injury of all types and on neural regeneration, which will inform research on rehabilitation after traumatic head injury. The MRC's expenditure specifically on rehabilitation after traumatic head injury (i.e. excluding the underpinning work) was £835,000 in 2001–02.

The Department commissions research to support policy and the delivery of effective practice in health and social care. The Department has directly funded projects relating to brain and head injury, some of which are on rehabilitation, with total estimated expenditure of about £125,000 for 2001–02. The Department funded a major project on rehabilitation of brain injured adults, which was completed in 1997, at a total cost of approximately £1.2 million.

In addition to specific projects, the Department also provides support for research commissioned by charities and the MRC that takes place in the NHS. Management of much of the research supported in this way is devolved, and expenditure at project level is not held centrally.

Details of ongoing and recently completed research projects taking place in, funded by, or of interest to, the national health service are available on the National Research Register (NRR) at www.doh.gov.uk/research/nrr.htm. The NRR shows that there are considerable number of research related to brain and head injury.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the timetable is for the publication of NICE guidelines on the handling of brain-injured patients; whether the guidelines will include long-term rehabilitation issues; and if he will make a statement. [48824]

Jacqui Smith: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence provisional publication date for their Head Injury Guideline is February 2003. I understand that the guideline will not address the rehabilitation or long term care of patients with a head injury, but the guideline will provide criteria for the early identification of patients who will benefit from rehabilitation.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the proposed National Service Framework for long-term conditions will include those arising from head injury; and what interim action will be taken to improve rehabilitation services before publication of that framework. [48814]

Jacqui Smith: Ministers will decide the scope of the National Service Framework (NSF) for long-term conditions shortly. The Government's response to the Health Select Committee third report, "Head Injury: Rehabilitation", states that the NSF is expected to set standards for the care and treatment of people with long-term conditions, including head injury. The National Institute for Clinical Excellence is producing a clinical guideline for the initial assessment, management and first referral of patients with head injury, which is likely to inform the development of standards for the NSF.

In the meanwhile we will continue to work with the voluntary and professional organisations to identify and consider how to address shortfalls in rehabilitation services for people with head injury.

NHS Staff (Assaults)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 15 March 2002, Official Report, column 1289W, on assaults on NHS staff, when he expects to complete the analysis of the reported violent incidents on NHS staff; when he expects to publish the report; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [50079]

Mr. Hutton: The analysis of data collected on the levels of reported violent incidents, together with data on the levels of reported accidents and sickness absence should be complete by the end of May and a copy placed in the Library.

Nursing Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 172W, on nursing care, when he expects to publish the core contract; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [50075]

Jacqui Smith: The model contract was issued to the national health service on 8 March. A copy is available on the Department's website at www.doh.gov.uk/jointunit/freenursingcare.htm. Copies have also been placed in the Library.

No Secrets Guidance

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 941W, regarding no secrets guidance, when he expects the Centre for Policy on Ageing to conclude its analysis; and if he will put this document in the Library. [50500]

Jacqui Smith: We expect that the Centre for Policy on Ageing is to conclude its analysis by the beginning of July 2002 and it will be placed in the Library. At that time we will consider what good practice issues have emerged and decide whether some dissemination of the findings would be beneficial.

NHS Professionals

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on contracting with the private sector to undertake functions of NHS Professionals; and if he will make a statement. [39682]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 1 March 2002]: The aim is that NHS Professionals will be used by all NHS organisations as the primary supplier of all temporary staffing requirements for the NHS with, as and when necessary, contracts agreed with commercial agencies to meet any surplus demand.

Plans are currently being developed regarding the undertaking of framework agreements across regional and national boundaries for a number of staff groups.

Hospital Repairs

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the hospital repairs backlog is; and what his estimate is of the cost of eliminating it. [46110]

Ms Blears [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The NHS Plan made clear our objectives of improving the patient environment and announces further significant investment in the national health service estate.

The currently available figure (2000–01) for the total backlog maintenance cost to bring NHS Trust property in England up to an acceptable condition is £3.16 billion.

The cost required to eliminate this backlog depends on a number of factors, including the extent to which major capital investment and disposals of property impact upon the amount of additional capital required. Since investment plans are currently under review it is not possible to provide a cost for the elimination of backlog costs at this point in time.

Health and Safety

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the NHS estate is compliant with health and safety requirements. [46117]

Ms Blears [holding answer 25 March 2002]: In 1999, we set targets for the reduction in health and safety backlog within national health service trusts in England one of which required health and safety backlog costs to be reduced by 90 per cent. by 31 March 2002. In addition, we planned to invest £7 billion in the NHS estate to bring the quality and safety of NHS buildings up to acceptable levels.

We have an ongoing monitoring and performance programme to support the NHS in delivering these targets. The speed at which NHS trusts are meeting these targets depends on a number of factors, including the pace of investment and disposals, and figures are constantly changing.

Health Services (Barnet)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the availability of out of hours health services in (a) Barnet and (b) Hendon. [45828]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 25 March 2002]: General practitioner (GP) out of hours services are provided in Barnet and Hendon by three GP co-operatives and by two commercial deputising services. Out of hours health services are also provided by NHS Direct and by local accident and emergency departments, as well as by the urgent treatment centre at Edgware hospital.

London Ambulance Service

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of (a) the capacity and (b) the performance of London Ambulance Service answering 999 calls in Barnet at night; and if he will make a statement. [45819]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The borough of Barnet is principally served by three London Ambulance Service (LAS) stations—Friern Barnet, Barnet and Mill Hill. The LAS will always send the nearest available ambulance to every call, so resources based at these stations will sometimes also be supported by vehicles from other areas.

Between the hours of 11 pm and 7 am the LAS always plans to have at least four ambulances covering the area—one each running out of Barnet and Friern Barnet and two from Mill Hill. Three other ambulances are also operated until the early hours, finishing between midnight and 2 am. As well as these and ambulances based in other local boroughs, the service also runs an extra ambulance, deployed by Central Ambulance Control, to provide additional operational cover where it is most needed in any area of the LAS north-west sector.

During the month of February LAS performance in Barnet between 11 pm and 7 am was above the London average for LAS performance.

Efficiency Gains

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what, in equivalent percentage terms, the efficiency and other value for money gains in the operation of his Department were in (a) 1999–2000, (b)2000–01 and (c) 2001–02. [45724]

Ms Blears [holding answer 25 March 2002]: Information is not available in the form requested, as direct comparisons in percentage terms would not be meaningful. Since 1999, the Department's work has altered significantly in the light of the changes set out in the NHS Plan and a subsequent review of the Department's operation.

Over the period in question, the Department has made the savings necessary to deliver its business plan within the running costs limits agreed in the comprehensive spending review. The Department's activities have been refocused on delivery of the NHS Plan. In addition, efficiency savings have been achieved through improved purchasing procedures to deliver improvements in value for money, improved project management, and reviewing accommodation use to improve the utilisation of space.

Contractor Fraud

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list over the period 1999–2000 to 2001–02 the savings that were made on action on contractor fraud broken down by (a) cash recoveries and (b) prevention savings. [45722]

Ms Blears [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The answer is set out in the tables:

Pharmaceutical contractor fraud outputs—Prevention[1]

December 1998 to March 1999[2]	52,882
April 1999 to March 2000	2,103,119
April 2000 to March 2001	3,189,111
April 2001 to March 2002	3,972,342
Total	9,317,454

Pharmaceutical contractor fraud outputs—Recoveries

December 1998 to March 2000	[3]2,251,815
April 2000 to March 2001	3,097,676
April 2001 to February 2002[4]	2,130,260
Total	7,479,751

[1] Figures relate to the prevention of continuing fraud.
[2] Progress tracked since December 1998 when PSA targets on pharmaceutical contractor fraud for the period to the end of 2001–02 were published.
[3] Figure relates to all recoveries December 1998 to March 2000.
[4] Recovery figures for March 2002 not yet available.

NHS Targets

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from health authorities, PCTs and NHS trusts as to their ability to achieve NHS Plan and NSF targets in 2002–03. [45930]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The annual planning cycle provides opportunity for dialogue between the national health service and the Department in relation to delivery of priorities, financial pressures and the management of risk. The process of agreeing service and financial frameworks involves a round of negotiations through which we aim to agree, in aggregate terms, a plan for the NHS to maximise performance while identifying the contribution of individual health systems.

From April 2002 onwards the responsibility for performance management of the NHS is being devolved to 28 new strategic health authorities (StHAs). Chief executives of the new StHAs will be accountable for delivery of national priorities as part of 3-year franchise agreements. StHAs will hold the ring for NHS organisations in their respective patches and need to ensure that the commitments to which they will be held to account for delivering are achievable.

Invoice Payment

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of undisputed invoices were paid by his Department within 30 days or the agreed contracted terms otherwise specified in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000, (d) 2000–01 and (e) 2001–02. [45725]

Ms Blears [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The number and proportion of bills paid within 30 days by the Department were as follows.

	On Time		Late
	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Total
2001–02 (to Feb)	324,006	96.24	12,666	3.76	336,672

NHS Direct

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the annual cost of providing NHS Direct over the last two years for which figures are available. [46719]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The table states the costs incurred in 2000–01 on a cash basis, and an estimate for the cash outturn for 2001–02 for comparative ease. The actual outturns have not been finalised yet.

The costs include the full running costs of all NHS Direct activity, all set-up costs for establishing the call centre environment, developing and setting up new projects, the development and maintenance of the national clinical decision support system, and costs incurred centrally.

	£ million
2000/01	90.1
2001–02[1]	110.9

[1] Estimate

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints have been received from callers to NHS Direct about the service they received. [46716]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: In the Financial Year 2000–01, 148 written complaints were received about NHS Direct in England. This equates to one complaint in over 20,000 calls made to NHS Direct. Details of all written complaints can be found on the Department website: www.doh.gov.uk/nhscomplaints.

National surveys conducted between December 1998 and January 2001 have consistently shown caller satisfaction levels between 90 and 97 per cent. This compares well with performance in private sector call centres and with similar services within the National Health Service despite the particularly demanding nature of NHS Direct's work.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many calls NHS Direct received between 24 December 2001 and 3 January. [46701]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Between 24 December 2001 and 3 January 2002, NHS Direct handled 205,000 calls, 20 per cent. more calls than the same period in 2000–01.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many calls NHS Direct received in each of the last two years for which figures are available. [46699]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Between 2000–01 and 2001–02, calls handled by NHS Direct increased by over 50 per cent. In the 2000–01 financial year, NHS Direct handled around 3,400,000 calls. In 2001–02, NHS Direct handled around 5,270,000 calls.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS Direct nurses came from (a) NHS hospitals and (b) accident and emergency departments. [43551]

Mr. Hutton: Specific information, such as the previous employment of NHS Direct nurses, is not collected centrally.

Hospital Patients

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many routine NHS patients were treated in English NHS hospitals in the last quarter of (a) 2001 and (b) 1997. [46708]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The number of elective admissions to National Health Service hospitals from October to December 1997 was 1,236,609. The figures are not yet available for 2001, but for the same period in 2000 there were 1,352,035 elective admissions.

Edgware Urgent Treatment Centre

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the impact the proposed overnight closure of Edgware UTC will have on (a) public confidence and support for the NHS in Hendon and (b) the willingness of the public to participate in NHS consultations and as lay representatives on consultative bodies; and if he will make a statement; [46879]

(2) what assessment he has made of the outcome of the public consultation exercise over the proposed night-time closure of Edgware Hospital UTC, indicating (a) the number of responses, (b) those supporting the closure and (c) those opposing the closure; and if he will make a statement. [45824]

Mr. Hutton [holding answers 25 March and 10 April 2002]: In the light of the representations received, I have asked that the decision to close the overnight service at Edgware UTC be reviewed by the newly formed North Central London Strategic Health Authority.

The review will be conducted in discussion with local stakeholders about how the best interests of patients and the NHS locally can be met.

Pending the outcome of this review and Ministers' decisions, the UTC night time service will be maintained.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the number of people attending the Edgware Hospital UTC and walk-in centre (a) in total and (b) between 10 pm and 7 am who are not registered with a GP; and if he will make a statement. [45825]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 25 March 2002]: We do not collect information on patients not registered with general practitioners. The national health service walk-in centres are not open between 10 pm and 7 am. On average, around 10 patients a night attend the urgent treatment centre after 10 pm.

Agencies (Maladministration)

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what payments have been made to individuals following findings of maladministration by ombudsmen with responsibility for agencies under the remit of his Department in the last 12 months; and what plans he has to review the powers to increase the level of awards that can be made in the last 12 months. [47980]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: There have been three payments totalling £33,100 for findings of maladministration made by the Department's agencies in the last 12 months. The judgments were all made by the pensions ombudsman.

We have no plans to review the agency chief executives' delegations, which give them the powers to incur expenditure in this area. The pensions ombudsman's awards are binding and only subject to the Court of Appeal on a point of law. We have no powers to increase these awards.

NHS Estate

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the value of the NHS Estate is less than 15-years-old. [47824]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The current available percentage of the national health service estate, by value, that is less than 15-years-old, as established by the Valuation Office Agency in their survey carried out in the year 2000, is 11.5 per cent.

Implementation of the planned capital investment in the NHS of around £7 billion by 2010 should see the achievement of the NHS Plan target of 40 per cent. of the NHS Estate, by value, being less than 15-years-old by the year 2010.

Elective Surgery

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals in England and Wales regularly use their operating theatres for elective surgery over weekends. [47454]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Figures on the numbers of national health service trusts who use their operating theatres at the weekend are not collected centrally for England. Information relating to health services in Wales is a matter for the devolved Administration.

Drugs (Theft)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 15 January 2002, Official Report, column 255W, on drugs theft, what the cost to the NHS has been of damage to property due to theft and fraud in each year since 1997. [47536]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Figures on the cost to the NHS of damage to property due to theft and fraud are shown in the table.

Year	£000
1997–98	1,662
1998–99	1,204
1999–2000	1,270
2000–01	1,383

Internal Fraud Investigators

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many internal fraud investigators his Department employs; and what plans he has to increase this number. [47555]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Department has recently expanded the remit of the national health service counter fraud service to cover internal fraud within the Department. The number of staff needed to carry out this work is under consideration.

Patient Consultations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 25 February 2002, Official Report, column 938W, on patient consultations, what plans he has for a GP work load survey to be conducted by his Department to measure GP average consultation times. [47535]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Previous surveys have been conducted jointly by the English, Welsh and Scottish Health Departments and the British Medical Association. A further joint work load survey is planned once the new GP contract has been agreed.

Hospital Cleaning Contracts

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department holds a central list of recommended cleaning contracting companies that local health authorities work from when awarding hospital cleaning contracts. [47548]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Department does not hold such a list. Contract cleaning services are procured by NHS trusts against the new national cleaning standards. Trusts will procure this service through advertisements placed in the European Journal. Health authorities are not involved in awarding contracts for cleaning NHS hospitals, only for their own administrative premises. A trust will award contracts on best value, taking into account operational and economic issues.

Epsom and St. Helier NHS Trust

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the London Regional Office will conclude its review of the Epsom and St. Helier NHS Trust in respect of its management of in-patient waiting lists; and if he will publish the findings. [32665]

Mr. Hutton [pursuant to his reply, 12 February 2002, c.334W]: I regret that my previous reply was incorrect. It should read as follows.

Epsom and St. Helier NHS Trust validates both its active and suspended list on a regular basis and is confident that their waiting lists are robust and accurate. A further validation was carried out by the trust themselves as a result of being identified as having a suspension rate greater than 10 per cent. Epsom and St. Helier was not identified as having adjusted inappropriately their waiting list figures.

The regional office conducts robust validation of waiting list data from trusts and health authorities including following up any irregularities. The regional office does not consider that there is any reason to review waiting list information at Epsom and St. Helier NHS Trust. In the light of the National Audit Office report on 'Inappropriate Adjustment to NHS Waiting Lists' the Department of Health has asked the Audit Commission to introduce spot check of individual trust's waiting list and waiting time information during 2002. Details are still being finalised, but the work is scheduled to begin early in the new financial year.

Long-term Care

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 817W, on long-term care, what is the maximum length of time which payment of proceeds arising from the sale of a house can be deferred after entrance into residential care. [47130]

Jacqui Smith: The deferred payments scheme does not have any time limit that is set for a property to be sold. During their stay in residential accommodation the resident is the only person who can end the deferred payment. If a resident passes away then the deferred payment agreement is terminated, but their estate is not obliged to pay the amount owed to the council for a further 57 days.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 18 April 2002

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what estimate she has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the provision of a catering service for the British Library by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49670]

(2) what estimate she has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the Corporate Bibliographic Service for the British Library by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative; [49663]

(3) what estimate she has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the Pembroke Lodge for the Royal Parks Agency by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49664]

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Yeovil (David Laws), of 20 July 2001, Official Report, column 741, and also to my letter to him of 18 November 2001, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what the cost was to her Department of answering written parliamentary questions in 2001; and how that cost was calculated; [49106]

(2) how many staff were involved in each of the last three years in preparing draft answers to written parliamentary questions. [49148]

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council yesterday Official Report, column 929W.

"Pride of Place"

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost of the publication of the Arts Council's publication "Pride of Place" was. [48875]

Dr. Howells: "Pride of Place" cost the Arts Council £78,000. I understand that this figure includes authors' fees, photography, production of the accompanying CD, design and print. The Arts Council have produced 7500 copies of the report in partnership with the media company August at a cover price of £12. Complimentary copies have been offered to all the projects who received an award under the first capital programme.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her answer of 8 March 2002, Official Report, columns 574–76W, on statutory instruments, what assessment she has made of the cost effectiveness of each of the statutory instruments listed. [50325]

Mr. Caborn: Of the statutory instruments listed, a regulatory impact assessment (RIA) was published for the Regulatory Reform (Special Occasions Licensing) Order 2001. Copies were placed in the Libraries of both Houses on 28 June 2001. The text can also be viewed on the following website at: www.cabinet-office.gov.uk/regulation/act/made2.htm#Special as Annex C to the Explanatory Document.

RIAs were not required for the other statutory instruments and an assessment of the cost effectiveness of each could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

National Lottery Distribution

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the average amount of Lottery money awarded to constituencies was in the last 12 months. [50592]

Mr. Caborn: According to the National Lottery database, which is based upon the data provided to us by the Lottery distributers, the average amount awarded to UK constituencies is currently around £15.2 million. This includes large-scale projects of national and international significance. The median level awarded to constituencies is £7.1 million to date.

Smart Card Technology

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the use of smart card technology in her Department and the areas which it is used in; and what discussions she has had with private companies about the use of smart card technology within her Department. [50476]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 16 April 2002]: My Department does not currently make any use of smart card technology.

Smart cards are used in a number of the areas for which my Department has responsibility as membership cards and payment cards among other things. My Department has also been involved in the establishment of the Connexions Card, a DfES initiative, which provides a range of services for 16 to 19-year-olds in England.

Any plans which my Department may develop in the future will obviously take account of the smart card framework developed by the Office of the e-Envoy.

I have not had any discussions with private companies about the use of smart card technology within my Department.

ITV Digital

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the discussions she has had with football authorities on the impact on Nationwide League football clubs of ITV Digital's entry into administration. [50675]

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the football authorities on the financial impact on Nationwide Football League clubs of ITV Digital's entry into administration. [R] [50846]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I have stayed in close touch with both the Nationwide League and ITV Digital throughout the negotiations. We met the League's chairman, Keith Harris, and chief executive, David Burns, yesterday evening (17 April).

PPS 17

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what involvement her Department and Sport England have had in the redrafting of PPS17. [50979]

Mr. Caborn: Both Sport England and my Department have been extensively involved in the redrafting of Planning Policy Statement 17 (PPS 17). PPS 17 is one of the key mechanisms by which my Department and sports organisations are able to influence planning for sport and recreation, including the introduction of further measures to protect playing fields. The Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions will issue the guidance.

Sports Facilities

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to include private sector and schools facilities in the forthcoming national audit of sports facilities in the UK. [50980]

Mr. Caborn: Information on sports facilities in England is currently held by a variety of organisations and a single database will enable more strategic Government investment in those areas and facilities which are most important. My Department is continuing discussions with Sport England on the scope, content and cost of the proposed database and how the project will be taken forward.

Football

Siobhain McDonagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what assessment she has made of the economic contribution of Football League football clubs to the (a) local and (b) English economy; [50667]

(2) what assessment she has made of the financial impact on football clubs playing in the Football League of ITV Digital's entry into administration. [50665]

Mr. Caborn: The 72 Nationwide Football League clubs play significant roles in local economies, both directly by providing employment and indirectly by providing opportunities for local businesses. Collectively, the Nationwide League also adds significantly to football's contribution to the national economy. These wider economic benefits cannot be quantified, but should be considered alongside football's substantial non-financial contribution to society.

The Nationwide League is discussing the future of its broadcasting contract with the Administrators of ITV Digital. While these negotiations continue, it is not possible accurately to forecast the possible financial effects on the League's clubs.

National Stadium

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) whether she will have received, analysed and based a decision on the advice identified as being necessary to address the four issues to which she referred in her statement of 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 292, by 30 April; [51082]

(2) pursuant to her oral statement of 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 292, on the National Stadium, if she will make a statement on the four points to be addressed by the FA and WNSL, with special reference to a decision to build the stadium at (a) Wembley and (b) Birmingham; and what deadline she has imposed for receiving answers on the four points. [50929]

Tessa Jowell: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer to the question from my hon. Friend the Member for Wolverhampton, South-East (Mr. Turner), on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 309W.

School Sport (Bristol)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if she will make a statement on the provision of sports in schools in Bristol; [51076]

(2) how many letters Ministers in her Department and officials have received about the provision of sports facilities at Cotham School, Bristol. [51075]

Mr. Caborn: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has received 50 letters about the provision of sports facilities at Cotham School. Bristol City area recently received a provisional allocation of just under £4.5 million from the New Opportunities PE and Sport Programme. It is for the local education authority, working with partners and schools, to determine the priorities for this funding in Bristol, based on its assessment of greatest need. The New Opportunities Fund will be assessing the strategies and initial portfolio of projects submitted to it by the LEA to ensure they are based on local consultation and evidence of local need.

Digital Television

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on what date she (a) received the first report from the Digital Television Action Plan project and (b) will publish it. [51070]

Dr. Howells: I receive regular reports on progress by Government and digital television stakeholders in delivering the tasks set out in the Digital Television Action Plan. With Douglas Alexander, I chaired the first quarterly meeting of the Digital Television Steering Board on 10 April. This meeting reviewed progress to the end of March, and considered future developments. An updated version of the Action Plan recording progress will be available on the digital television website www.digitaltelevision.gov.uk shortly.

PRIVY COUNCIL

"Continuing the Reform"

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Council when he will respond to the report from the Public Administration Select Committee, 'Continuing the Reform'; and if he will make a statement. [50862]

Mr. Robin Cook: The Government have today sent a memorandum to the Public Administration Select Committee with an interim response to their report 'The Second Chamber: Continuing the Reform'.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Better Quality Services Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which of the services of her Department have not been reviewed under the Better Quality Services Initiative; and when they will be reviewed. [50321]

Clare Short: Four out of seven service functions have been reviewed as part of our BQS programme. The remainder, for accounts, internal audit and office services, are expected to be reviewed during 2002–03. The timing and scope of future BQS work are currently under consideration.

Reproductive Health

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the impact of the withdrawal of United States funds for reproductive health services in the developing world; and what steps have been taken to make up any shortfall. [48998]

Clare Short: Despite the decision of the US to withhold funds from certain organisations, the US remains a major source of support for services aimed at improving reproductive health.

Sexual and reproductive health care in developing countries continues to be a key priority for my Department. Achieving universal access to reproductive health for all by 2015 underpins our approach. Good reproductive health is of course also vital to achieving the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) related to lowering maternal mortality and combating HIV/AIDS. We are working in partnership with national Governments and key organisations to strengthen the capacity of health systems to deliver good reproductive health care and services.

My Department's total bilateral expenditure on sexual and reproductive health activities, including HIV/AIDS, has risen from £38.4 million in the financial year 1997–98 to £206.6 million in 2001–02. We also provide significant levels of funding to UNFPA, UNAIDS and WHO to support their work to improve the quantity and availability of reproductive health services.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development under the Global Health Fund for fighting AIDS, what role the provision of comprehensive reproductive health services will play. [48996]

Clare Short: The Global Fund to fight AIDS, TB and Malaria will consider applications against the principles, scope and purpose laid out in its framework documents, which can be found at www.globalfundatm.org.

The UK believes the fund should support applications for funding for reproductive health services only where these are clearly focused on preventing or treating one or more of the three diseases. It will be important for the fund to focus on supporting interventions where global financing will be most effective and where it can add most value to existing national and international efforts. Other channels of support will be more appropriate for wider efforts against the three diseases and for support to reproductive health services more broadly.

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the adequacy of supplies of condoms in fighting AIDS in the developing world; and what steps are being taken to improve the supply. [48999]

Clare Short: Ensuring the accessibility of affordable condoms is a key priority for my Department. The UK is one of the leading bilateral providers of condoms and other forms of contraceptives in developing countries. We are also supporting a number of condom social marketing programmes which aim to make condoms accessible and affordable to the poorest. It is important that efforts meet the current and increasing need for condoms and to promote demand for condom use.

We are working closely with the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) to help them develop a global strategy to help governments strengthen their capacity, to ensure that by 2015 all primary health care and family planning facilities are able to provide the widest achievable range of safe and effective family planning and contraceptive methods, including condoms to prevent HIV/AIDS.

In January 2001, we provided UNFPA with a grant of £25 million to help meet immediate needs for reproductive health commodities, including condoms, in a range of countries facing shortages.

Iraqi Refugees

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support her Department is giving UNHCR for anticipating the arrival of refugees from Iraq to Iran. [48728]

Clare Short: We are not currently providing any support to UNHCR for this purpose. No appeal has been launched by the UNHCR. We will give consideration to any appeal as and when one is launched.

Afghanistan

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement about the flow of refugees out of Afghanistan into Pakistan; in which areas this is occurring and at what level; what the reasons for this are; and what is being done by the international community to counteract this. [49004]

Clare Short: While voluntary returns to Afghanistan from Pakistan and Iran continue to gather momentum, some Afghans continue to leave their country. The United Nations High Commission for Refugees (UNHCR) reports that approximately 40,000 Afghans are gathered in the Killi Faizo transit camp at the Chaman border crossing between Balochistan Province in Pakistan and Kandahar Province in Southern Afghanistan. Many of the group have been in the area since late February 2002. The majority of Afghans at Chaman are fleeing the effects of drought, while others are ethnic Pushtuns claiming to have been targeted by bandits or other armed groups in the north of Afghanistan, where they are a minority group. UNHCR are in discussions with the Pakistani authorities to urge them to allow those seeking refuge and assistance to be registered and transferred to existing refugee camps in Pakistan. At the same time, UNHCR and its partners are working to improve conditions—including water and sanitation and health facilities—in the waiting area; and the United Nations World Food Programme (WFP) are carrying out distribution of emergency food supplies.

Pakistan

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action is being taken by the Government of Pakistan and representatives of the international community to address tensions between local residents and refugees in the Balochistan area of Pakistan. [49005]

Clare Short: Balochisan has suffered a prolonged drought and refugee crisis. The Government of Pakistan and international donor are working to alleviate both aspects of this crisis.

The UK has provided support to both refugees and host communities. UN agencies are assisting with the voluntary repatriation of refugees, and are currently considering packages of assistance to help Balochistan and NWFP with the post-refugee rehabilitation effort. The Asian Development bank and the World bank have provided assistance to alleviate the impact of the drought, and the World Food Programme has just launched an appeal for Balochistan.

Overseas Projects

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the value for money achieved by the Technical Co-operation Training Services: India 1999–2000 project in India. [49178]

Clare Short: Between 1999 and 2000, individual programmes under the Technical Co-operation Training (TCT) Programme in India were evaluated following DFID's normal project review procedures, including assessments of the overall performance of each programme. DFID and the Government of India jointly undertook the last review of the India Technical Co-operation Training Programme in November 1997. This focused on public administration training and addressed impact as well as value for money issues.

Based on the review and individual programme assessments, it was agreed with the Government of India that the TCT Programme should be phased out by March 2002 on the grounds that it was not sufficiently poverty focused. We have since agreed with the Government of India to provide more strategic capacity-building support for government initiatives aimed at improving public policies and services. Such support would fit well with the Government of India's recognition that fundamental improvements in governance are a pre-requisite to effective poverty eradication.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what recent assessment she has made of the value for money achieved by the Support for the Environment and Management Project in Egypt; [49168]

(2) what recent assessment she has made of the value for money achieved by the Project Co-ordinator Support for Environmental Assessment and Management Project Phase 2 in Egypt. [49184]

Clare Short: The Support for the Environment and Management Project (SEAM) project, which will continue until spring 2004, aims to improve environmental planning and services for the poor in Egypt. A full economic and financial justification was prepared for the project prior to the second phase of the project being approved in 1999. Since then the project has been monitored on a regular basis with the next Review planned for May 2002.

Reviews to date have shown that the project is having a significant impact.

Methodologies for environmental planning piloted under the project have been adopted as the model at a national level in Egypt. Focusing on community participation the project has also enabled cost effective environmental services such as solid waste management to be developed that respond directly to the needs of poor people.

The performance of the Project Co-ordinator on the Support for the Environment and Management Project (SEAM) is regularly monitored and assessed as part of the regular reviews of the whole SEAM project. He has played a key role in ensuring the positive impact of the project to date.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the value for money achieved by the Public Administration Institutional Development Project in the west bank and Gaza. [49198]

Clare Short: The Public Administration Institutional Development project began in February 2000. Activities were put on hold in December 2000 following the outbreak of the intifada. An inception phase had been successfully completed. The environment since has not been conducive to progressing towards the project's objectives. We will explore ways to recommence activities once the circumstances permit.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the value for money achieved by the long-term interim technical assistance to Centenary Rural Development Bank in Uganda. [49176]

Clare Short: An independent project review of DFID's support to the Centenary Rural Development Bank was undertaken in August 2001. It reported that the bank had achieved all the goals set out in the project in terms of business growth (loans outstanding; value of deposits; reduced arrears). Outreach to rural areas had also increased through additional branches, and a positive relationship established between growth of the private sector through prudent lending and a reduction in poverty.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the value for money achieved by the community forestry development project Phase II in Cameroon. [49206]

Clare Short: The community forestry development project phase two (CFDP II) has been monitored regularly by DFID and the Government of Cameroon against its objective of supporting community based forest resource planning and management. Studies have shown that community forestry provides significantly higher benefits to local communities than existing systems.

Recent reviews have concluded that the project has been instrumental in helping establish the legal basis for communities to manage their forests, and in making the community forestry process more accessible. The project has also provided training for the Ministry of Environment and Forest and helped integrate community forestry training into the curriculum at the university of Dschang.

Part of the project completion work, to be undertaken prior to the end of the project (December 2002), will be to conduct a formal cost-benefit analysis of project inputs.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the value for money achieved by the Support to Rural Feeder Roads Project in Ghana. [49192]

Clare Short: My Department's support for feeder roads in Ghana commenced in December 1999 and a review of the project is scheduled to be undertaken in mid-May. Implementation of the physical works of the project has only recently commenced and was delayed while a new Roads Prioritisation method for Ghana's feeder roads was developed. This method involves full community participation and takes into account both social and economic factors leading to a cost-benefit analysis of the roads being considered for construction and repair under this project.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the value for money achieved by the Shapla: Organisation and Management, Human Resource and Hospital Management projects in Bangladesh. [49172]

Clare Short: There are three components of our support for the Government of Bangladesh's health sector reforms. They are subject to on-going monitoring by our Bangladesh office and have in addition had two independent external reviews, one in May 2000 and one in May 2001. The costs of the inputs are highly competitive and the standard of work is consistently high. DFID is thus satisfied that they are achieving good value for money and have produced demonstrable results, despite the high-risk nature of this kind of work.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the value for money achieved by the Agricultural Service Innovation and Reform Project in Bangladesh. [49174]

Clare Short: This project is intended to re-orientate agricultural extension services to better meet the expressed needs of farmers. It started in July 1999. In addition to regular monitoring by DFID, biannual Joint Supervision Missions with the World bank and the Government of Bangladesh have taken place throughout the project. The most recent review was undertaken in November 2001.

The main findings of the November 2001 review noted that substantial progress had been made and institutional strengthening activities have improved management structures and procedures. DFID has, in addition, recently conducted a detailed review of project financing, inputs and expenditures as part of the preparation for an 18-month extension.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the value for money achieved by the Strengthening and Modernising Value Added Tax Administration Project in Bangladesh. [49164]

Clare Short: The objective of this project is to contribute to increasing VAT income by helping the Government of Bangladesh to establish a more effective VAT system. The project commenced in November 1999.

In addition to close monitoring by the DFID office in Bangladesh, it is subject to annual review, the last of which was carried out in January 2002. The review carried out a detailed review of project financing and expenditures and concluded that the project has made excellent progress in its first two years. Although many activities are still on-going it is reasonable to predict that the project purpose is likely to be substantially achieved.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the value for money achieved by the construction of Bhairab bridge Phase 2 project in Bangladesh. [49190]

Clare Short: This project supports the construction of a major crossing at Bhairab, over the river Meghna on the main road between Dhaka and Sylhet. The bridge will replace the existing ferry crossing, which currently acts as a major constraint in the efficient transport of goods to and from the north-east and the rest of the country. DFID funding of a total of £21 million out of a total expected cost of the bridge of £71 million, including the cost of land purchase and resettlement of project affected persons.

At the mid-term review of the project carried out in May 2001, it was confirmed that the objectives of the project were expected to be achieved and construction will be completed by mid-September 2002, compared to a completion date set at the commencement of the project of 4 August 2002.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment she has made of the value for money achieved by the fourth fisheries project in Bangladesh. [49181]

Clare Short: This project is jointly funded with the World bank with the objective of supporting sustainable and equitable growth in the benefits generated from increased fish and shrimp production. It started in September 1999. In addition to monitoring by DFID, biannual joint review missions have taken place with the World bank and the Government of Bangladesh. The most recent review was undertaken in November 2001. This review noted that there have been significant achievements in project implementation, with 93 per cent. of a target of villages and beneficiaries having so far been reached.

The report concluded that the project would largely achieve its overall objectives but continues to face significant challenges. It is too early to revisit the issue of cost-effectiveness but this will be addressed in a major review to be undertaken in May 2003.

Overtime

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her policy is on overtime payments for staff in her Department. [49119]

Clare Short: DFID staff are not encouraged to work long hours and every effort is made to avoid overtime working and to help staff balance work and private life. No member of staff has been asked to opt out of the limits prescribed by the working time regulations.

Where overtime working is unavoidable, staff generally have the choice of overtime payments or time off in lieu. Overtime payments vary according to when overtime is worked and the grade of the staff concerned—payments are normally at plain time, time and a half or double time, depending on the circumstances and whether staff wish to take time off in lieu. The rules are complex and we are currently in the process of simplifying them. Two groups of staff are presently not entitled to overtime payments—senior civil servants and staff in Band A1 (equivalent to Senior Principal). We propose to review overtime entitlements for Band A staff by March 2003.

Smart Card Technology

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the use of smart card technology in her Department and in the areas for which it is responsible; and what discussions she has had with private companies about the use of smart card technology within her Department. [50472]

Clare Short: My officials keep under constant review the progress with smart card technology and in early 2001 they held extensive discussions with a range of private companies in preparation for introducing appropriate systems to our office. We installed and commissioned a fast lane smart card system in November 2001 in our 1 Palace street office and will be utilising the same technology following an upgrade of our Abercrombie House office in East Kilbride, which will commence later this year.

We keep under review expansion of our systems to take advantage of the potential benefits that smart card technology can bring.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Berlin Embassy

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the Berlin Embassy by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49659]

Mr. MacShane: The PFI contract for the construction of the Berlin Embassy delivered a cost saving of £1.2 million over the public sector comparator.

Gibraltar

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last requested the Spanish Government to produce evidence of smuggling between Gibraltar and Spain; what evidence was supplied by the Spanish authorities; and what assessment he made of the Spanish evidence. [49984]

Mr. Straw: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Member for Neath (Peter Hain), the Minister for Europe, to my hon. Friend the Member for Inverness, East, Nairn and Lochaber (Mr. Stewart) on 10 December 2001, Official Report, column 633W.

Afghanistan

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance is being given to the Afghan interim administration in halting the drugs trade. [50514]

Mr. MacShane: The UK has taken the lead in co-ordinating international efforts to assist the Afghan Interim Administration to tackle drugs. Sustainable drug control in Afghanistan will require a range of measures, including the creation of alternative legal livelihoods, the reconstruction of infrastructure and the establishment of effective law enforcement and good governance. We have also been working with the interim administration to implement the decree banning opium production issued by Chairman Karzai on 3 April. We have been encouraging other members of the international community to provide similar support.

Israel

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Israeli Government and the Palestinian Authorities to abide by the Fourth Geneva Convention and the UN Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338 governing wartime and occupation. [48951]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 15 April 2002]: We support the ICRC's call for all parties to respect international humanitarian law, including the Fourth Geneva Convention. We have made clear to the Israeli Government that we expect medical and humanitarian organisations and Consular staff to have uninterrupted access to those in need. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary stressed our concerns to Israeli Foreign Minister Peres in a telephone call on 10 April. We have called for an immediate and full Israeli withdrawal from Palestinian towns in accordance with UN Security Council Resolution 1402.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Israeli Government to uphold the terms of the Geneva Convention with reference to (a) attacking civilian populations and (b) destroying objects indispensable to their survival. [48950]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer of 15 April 2002]: We have grave concerns for the safety of civilians and about the destruction of property and infrastructure in the Occupied Territories. We have called repeatedly on the Israeli authorities to comply with the terms of the Geneva Convention and to take all necessary precautions to spare civilians and civilian property.

Kosovo

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the political situation in Kosovo. [50588]

Mr. MacShane: Much progress has been made since the elections to a Kosovo Assembly took place on 17 November 2001. On 4 March 2002, Kosovo's first freely-elected and multi-ethnic provisional self-government was formed and Dr. Irahim Rugova was elected President of Kosovo. The majority of governmental functions are being transferred from the UN Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) to the government, with the exception of powers reserved under the terms of the 2001 Constitutional Framework, such as external affairs, security and law and order. These will remain in the hands of the UN Secretary-General's Special Representative. Most of the Ministers are now in place, and are establishing their departments and defining their priorities.

All of Kosovo's minorities are represented in the Assembly, and one Ministerial post has already been filled by parties representing the non-Serbian minorities. A further Ministerial post has so far been left unfilled, pending a nomination by the Serbian minority. Following positive recent statements from their representatives and the Belgrade government, I hope that this will soon be filled.

Yasin Malik

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received concerning the arrest of Yasin Malik, Chairman of Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front, on 25 March at Srinagar. [50998]

Mr. Bradshaw: We have received a number of reports about the detention of Yasin Malik. We have raised our concerns about the condition of Yasin Malik's detention with the Indian Government. We will continue to monitor the case closely.

Lakshmi Mittal

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he sought advice from HM ambassadors to (a) the Irish Republic and (b) Kazakhstan in connection with the takeover of Sidex by LNM/Ispat. [50455]

Peter Hain: Neither my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary or I sought advice from either ambassador.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Private Finance Initiative projects have been subject to refinancing after the contracts have been signed; and what has been the financial effect in each case. [50288]

Mr. MacShane: No PFI projects have been subject to refinancing.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the Public Service Agreement targets which have been revised and those which have been introduced since the publication of the 2001 departmental report. [43250]

Mr. MacShane: The table sets out revised Public Service Agreement (PSA) targets since the publication of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's 2001 departmental report.

Old target	Revised target	Reason
Increase in the global audience of the BBC World Service to 153 million by 2002 and then maintained throughout the period.	Increase in the global audience of the BBC World Service to 157 million by 2004.	Original target was subject to final confirmation; subsequent discussions between BBC World Service and FCO resulted in a higher target being set. Target refers to weekly radio audience and is calculated annually from independent surveys.

The upward revision of this target was published on the FCO website last year.

No new PSA targets have been set for the FCO since the publication of the 2001 departmental report.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many staff were involved in each of the last three years in preparing draft answers to written parliamentary questions; [49139]

(2) what the cost was to his Department of answering written parliamentary questions in 2001; and how that cost was calculated. [49097]

Mr. Straw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Parliamentary Secretary, Privy Council office, on 17 April 2002, Official Report, column 929W.

TREASURY

Finance Bill

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Finance Bill will be published; and if he will make Explanatory Notes on the Bill's clauses available to hon. Members. [51627]

Dawn Primarolo: It is expected that the Finance Bill will be published on Wednesday 24 April, the day after the conclusion of the debate on the Budget Resolutions. Explanatory Notes on the Bill's clauses will be available in the Vote Office and the Libraries of both Houses on that day. Members of the public will be able to obtain copies of the Explanatory Notes from the Treasury; these will also be available on the Treasury's website http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk.

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the cost-effectiveness of the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001; and if he will make a statement; [51120]

(2) what assessment he has made of the cost-effectiveness of the Income Tax (Indexation) (No. 2) Order 2001; and if he will make a statement; [51118]

(3) what assessment he has made of the cost-effectiveness of the Friendly Societies (Modification of the Corporation Tax Acts) (Amendment) Order 2001; and if he will make a statement; [51107]

(4) what assessment he has made of the cost-effectiveness of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Consequential Amendments and Savings) (Industrial Assurance) Order 2001; and if he will make a statement; [51094]

(5) what assessment he has made of the cost-effectiveness of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Transitional Provisions) (Partly Completed Procedures) Order 2001; and if he will make a statement; [51089]

(6) what assessment he has made of the cost-effectiveness of the Individual Savings Account (Insurance Companies) (Amendment) Regulations 2001; and if he will make a statement; [51108]

(7) what assessment he has made of the cost-effectiveness of the Stamp Duty Reserve Tax (UK Depository/Interests in Foreign Securities) (Amendment) Regulations 2001; and if he will make a statement; [51115]

(8) what assessment he has made of the cost-effectiveness of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Law Applicable to Contracts of Insurance) (Amendment) Regulations 2001; and if he will make a statement; [51085]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him yesterday, Official Report, columns 975–82W.

Arthur Andersen

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Government received advice from legal counsel regarding the eligibility of Arthur Andersen for Government contracts; and if he will make a statement. [32606]

Dr. John Reid: I have been asked to reply.

In February 1997, prior to the general election, the Treasury Solicitor was asked to review the on-going action against Arthur Andersen. Following the report of this review, the Government received advice from counsel on 9 June 1997 on the question of whether, in the context of the action to determine if the case should be heard in New York, it would be beneficial to relax the embargo against Arthur Andersen for Government contracts. The embargo was relaxed on 24 June 1997, and was fully lifted when the final settlement was agreed on 12 November 1997.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what proportion of the staff of his Department are part-time employees. [47196]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my hon. friend the Parliamentary Secretary to the Cabinet Office on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 49W.

New Deal for Young People

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people employed by the non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible under the new deal for young people in each of the last four years have subsequently (a) found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks and (b) returned to jobseekers' allowance or other benefits. [49604]

Ruth Kelly: We do not have this information.

Government Commerce

Valerie Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information was gathered from the Office of Government Commerce e-tendering pilot scheme for a system for use across Government, with particular reference to the Department for Education and Skills. [49928]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The recently concluded pilot covered all the key aspects of an e-tendering system, including the procurement process, functionality and operational activity. It successfully addressed security issues, which had been a particular concern to both Departments and suppliers.

The Office of Government Commerce is working with Departments to use the information gathered from this pilot and other on-going e-pilots to develop the Government's overall approach to the effective and efficient use of e-tendering.

Although the Department for Education and Skills did not take part in the pilot, it will be able, together with all Government Departments and agencies, to use the knowledge gained when undertaking future e-tendering activity.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 862W, on PFI, what were the changing requirements which accounted for the difference in cost between preferred bidder stage and the final contract price. [50327]

Ruth Kelly: The changing requirements vary from the addition of new properties on the portfolio PFI (STEPS) to changes in the service specifications on the single site PFIs.

Consultants

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many contracts HM Treasury has with consultants; what level of professional indemnity insurance is standard in contracts with small consultants; whether he can make exceptions to the level of professional indemnity insurance; and what recent discussions he has had with other Government departments about the level of professional indemnity insurance. [50836]

Ruth Kelly: The effort required to establish the current contracts the Treasury has with consultants would incur disproportionate costs.

The level of indemnity insurance is not fixed. The value and nature of the contract and the size of the company/firm employed to carry out the work are taken into consideration when determining the level of indemnity insurance required.

There have been no recent discussions with other Government Departments about professional indemnity insurance.

Solar Panels

Ian Lucas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what Government buildings owned by his Department have solar panels installed. [51189]

Ruth Kelly: None.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Plastic Bags

2. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has for reducing the use of plastic bags; and if she will make a statement. [46510]

Mr. Meacher: Packaging waste, including plastic bags, is covered by the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997, which include incentives both to reduce the amount of packaging handled by businesses and to increase the amount of packaging reused. I am aware that the Irish Government have recently introduced a levy on plastic bags from supermarkets and of the effectiveness of this approach.

Peak District (Access)

10. Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of progress in implementing the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 in the Peak District. [46519]

Alun Michael: On February 11, the Countryside Agency concluded consultation on a draft map of open country and registered common land in the lower north-west, including the Peak District. The Agency is now considering comments made on the draft map, and plans to issue a provisional map in September this year.

Badgers

16. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on steps she has taken to combat cruelty to badgers, with specific reference to the protection of setts. [46526]

Mr. Morley: It is an offence under the Protection of Badgers Act 1992 to interfere with a badger sett without an appropriate licence. The maximum penalty for such an offence under the 1992 Act is a fine of £5,000 or six months' imprisonment, or both.

The protection provided under the 1992 Act, which is unique for an unendangered animals, reflects the concern which is felt by the Government about the gratuitous acts of cruelty to which badgers have been subjected to all too often in the past.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimates have been made of how many badgers there were in each constituency in each of the last 20 years. [48548]

Mr. Morley: No annual data on the number of badgers exist either at county, constituency or national level.

Based on two surveys the number of badgers in Great Britain is estimated to be between 300 and 400 thousand. The latest survey which was conducted in the mid-1990s revealed an increase in badgers numbers of around 70 per cent. compared with the first survey which was undertaken in the mid-1980s.

Veterinary Surgeons

17. Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many veterinary surgeons will be employed by the State Veterinary Service in 2002–03; and what the equivalent figures were in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02. [R] [46527]

Mr. Morley: As at February 2001, 301 veterinary surgeons were employed, of which 261 were field veterinary staff.

As at 31 March 2002, 311 permanent veterinary surgeons were employed, of which 275 are field veterinary staff.

No further recruitment of veterinary surgeons is expected to take place in 2002–03.

Footpaths (Lincolnshire)

18. Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received concerning the reopening of footpaths in Lincolnshire. [46528]

Alun Michael: We received a number of comments which suggested that Lincolnshire was slow or reluctant to reopen footpaths despite the fact that there were no cases of foot and mouth disease (FMD) in the county. The amount of correspondence was low with four letters from members of the public in favour of reopening footpaths and one against. There was one letter from an hon. Member early in the outbreak, urging strict enforcement of access prohibitions. Lincolnshire county council wrote last July objecting to my decision to revoke remaining blanket rights-of-way closures. That decision was taken in the light of the veterinary risk assessment which showed that the risk of walkers spreading FMD was extremely small and the fact that a small number of local authorities were being over cautious without good reason. The FMD outbreak demonstrated the importance of rights of way to tourism in rural areas in England, and most local authorities were keen to reopen them as soon as it was safe to do so.

Farm Diversification

19. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assistance her Department is giving farmers to diversify their businesses. [46529]

Alun Michael: The Department provides grants for farmers in England seeking to pursue good diversification projects under the Rural Enterprise Scheme and the Vocational Training Scheme, which form part of the England Rural Development Programme. DEFRA also offers assistance in the form of free planning consultancy advice to farmers who intend to pursue an eligible RES diversification project. Funds are also available from the regional development agencies to renovate redundant farm buildings. Technical assistance is provided by the Rural Development Service and through the Farm Business Advice Service.

Llama Trekking

20. Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will ease the restrictions upon llama trekking businesses. [46530]

Alun Michael: A licensing scheme for llama trekking was introduced on 28 March 2002 which allows treks to take place, while minimising the risk of disease spread. Controls are needed over this activity, as llamas are susceptible to foot and mouth disease and could become infected or could infect other susceptible livestock by crossing grazing land.

British Beef (Import Ban)

21. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the French ban on imports of British beef. [46531]

Mr. Morley: The ban is illegal and the European Commission have written formally to the French Government. This is the first stage in a process which may lead to a further European Court case against France.

Genetically Modified Plants

22. Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the Royal Society's updated report on GM plants. [46532]

Mr. Meacher: To assist the screening of non-GM and GM food, research should continue to develop technologies to define the 'normal' composition of conventional plants.

That the Government and the European Commission should ensure that current regulations and guidelines for infant formulas and follow on foods and GM foods complement each other.

That the current decision-making process for screening conventional and GM foods should be expanded to encompass inhalant as well as food allergies.

The Government are taking the following steps to address these issues.

On the first recommendation, the Food Standards Agency has undertaken a research programme which is looking at new and emerging techniques to define the normal composition of conventional plants and how these techniques can be applied to refine the current safety assessment of GM foods.

On the second recommendation, the FSA shares the Royal Society's view that GM and infant formulae regulations should be complementary. The FSA is pursuing this issue in Europe as these are EU regulations.

And on the third recommendation, the Royal Society acknowledges that, at present there is no evidence that commercially available GM foods cause allergenic responses. The safety assessment for all applications for bringing GM foods on to the market includes a detailed risk assessment with consideration of all aspects of allergenicity including through inhalation.

Sustainable Development

23. Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her Department's priorities for the Johannesburg summit on sustainable development. [46533]

Mr. Meacher: The Government's overarching strategic objective is to make globalisation work for sustainable development, especially for the poorest. These priorities are: poverty eradication, emphasising capacity building and education; the opportunities presented by resource productivity including the application of science and technology; energy; freshwater and oceans; and sustainable development initiatives for Africa.

Combined Heat and Power

24. Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on steps her Department is taking to address the recent reductions in electricity generated from combined heat and power; and when she will publish her Department's report on CHP. [46534]

Mr. Meacher: The Government believe that the major factor impacting on the economic position of CHP is relatively high gas prices combined with relatively low electricity prices. Under DTI's lead, it is continuing to pursue its strategy to address high gas prices. The Government are also aware of continuing concerns about the impact of the new electricity trading arrangements on smaller generators, including CHP. On 4 April 2002, DTI published the Government Response to its consultation on NETA and smaller generators which identifies action to help smaller generators operate more effectively under NETA. A draft Government CHP Strategy will be published for consultation shortly.

Climate Change

25. Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the impact of global climate change. [46535]

Mr. Meacher: Impact studies undertaken by DEFRA show that by the 2080s, if action is not taken to tackle climate change, global temperatures could rise by about 3 deg C, leading to 3 billion people suffering increased water stress, and around 80 million extra people at risk of flooding each year due to rising sea levels.

Euro

26. Mr. Bryant: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what preparations her Department is making for possible UK entry into the euro. [46536]

Mr. Meacher: Details of changeover planning in the public sector were set out in the Fifth Report on Euro Preparations, published in November 2001. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Foot and Mouth

27. Angela Watkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers who suffered financial losses resulting from the foot and mouth epidemic have not been compensated. [46537]

Mr. Morley: All livestock farmers will have suffered some degree of financial loss as a result of the restrictions imposed on the movement of livestock and other foot and mouth disease related controls. It has been the policy of successive Governments only to pay compensation for the market value of livestock which is compulsorily slaughtered to control the spread of disease. However over the course of the last year the Government made available some £155 million of agrimonetary aid and more than £210 million in payments under the Livestock Welfare (Disposal) Scheme and light lambs schemes.

29. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will respond to the conclusions of the Northumberland county council inquiry into the handling of the foot and mouth outbreak. [46539]

Mr. Morley: The report of the Northumberland county council inquiry into foot and mouth disease provides a welcome local perspective on what happened during the outbreak. I understand that the county council has sent the report to the Foot-and-Mouth Disease Lessons Learned Inquiry and they will doubtless take it into account in making their report, to which we shall respond fully in due course. The Northumberland inquiry report also outlines a medium term recovery plan for rural Northumberland to be developed within the policy framework of the Rural Action Plan produced by One North East. We have assured the leader of Northumberland county council that DEFRA stands ready to play its part alongside the other players, public, private and voluntary, which need to work together if such a plan is to be successful.

36. Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the progress of her inquiries into foot and mouth. [46546]

Mr. Morley: On 9 August 2001 my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced two independent inquiries into the foot and mouth disease outbreak of 2001, namely the Lessons Learned Inquiry and the Royal Society Study. The Lessons Learned Inquiry aims to report by mid 2002. The Royal Society Study should be completed by summer 2002.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much money she has applied for from the European Commission in connection with meeting the costs of compensation paid to farmers for the disposal of livestock during the foot and mouth outbreak, and what response she has received from the Commission. [48557]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The total UK claim for reimbursement of the costs incurred in the foot and mouth outbreak is £998 million. The claim includes compensation payments to farmers for animals slaughtered, and destruction of contaminated feeding stuffs of £735 million. The other element of the claim is for cleansing and disinfecting of the farms and transport and haulage and disposal of livestock of £263 million.

The Commission's auditors are auditing the claim. They have not yet issued their audit report. The Department on 28 February 2002 received an advance payment of the claim of £216,904,990 from the Commission.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what is the basis on which compensation rates for slaughtered animals were calculated during the foot and mouth outbreak. [48559]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Animal Health Act 1981 stipulates that for the purposes of compensation, the value of an animal shall be its value immediately before it became affected with foot and mouth disease or, if not so affected, its value immediately before it was slaughtered. Animals are valued by professional valuers. From 22 March to 30 July 2001 standard valuations were set out in regulations to help ensure rapid slaughter of livestock, but farmers retained the right to request an individual valuation of their stock.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received from the farming community that officials acting for her Department be given (a) greater powers to enter farm property and (b) wider scope for ordering the slaughter of farm animals. [12345]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 5 November 2001]: I have received representations from a range of organisations and individuals from the farming community. Some, including the NFU were not opposed to the principle of officials being given (a) greater powers to enter farm property and (b) wider scope for ordering the slaughter of farm animals in clearly defined circumstances.

Recycling

28. Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on progress made by local authorities in improving recycling rates. [46538]

Mr. Meacher: Provisional figures from the Department's latest Municipal Waste Management Survey show that the proportion of municipal waste recycled or composted has continued to increase, from 7 per cent. in 1996–97 to 12 per cent. in 2000–01. Local authorities are required to further improve their recycling rates in order to achieve the statutory targets the Government have set for them, to double their recycling rates within three years and treble them in five. The recently announced £140 million fund for waste minimisation and recycling will help them to do this.

Farm Administration

30. John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of how many forms her Department required on average a farmer in England to fill out in 2001; and what efforts are being made to reduce this. [46540]

Mr. Morley: It is not possible to make such an assessment. The number of forms completed by farmers depends on the nature and size of individual enterprises. As far as statistical forms are concerned, in 2001 more than half of the main holdings in England received no forms and the average number of forms issued to the other 68,638 holdings was 1.39. Only 319 holdings received more than four forms during the year and of the 95,125 survey forms issued more than one third were in respect of voluntary surveys. Many of the forms the Department issues to farmers relate to particular schemes such as CAP subsidy and rural development schemes. The number will vary widely depending on which schemes they participate in.

The Department is committed to reducing paperwork. Electronic forms for IACS applications have already been introduced. The Government's Regulatory Reform Action Plan published in February contained a number of measures which will reduce the burden for farmers. These include for example enabling livestock producers to submit electronic claims for livestock premium schemes and removing unnecessary duplication of information. In the longer term the possibility of a whole farm approach to regulation should enable information required in forms to be rationalised.

Waste Incinerators

31. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proposals the Government have to control the disposal of ash and other toxic residues from waste incinerators. [46541]

Mr. Meacher: Ash and air pollution control residues which are disposed of from waste incinerators are subject to the waste management controls in the Environmental Protection Act 1990, including the requirement that these wastes are disposed of in accordance with a waste management licence, and handled in accordance with the duty of care.

The Environment Agency is carrying out a thorough investigation into the destinations of solid residues from all current municipal waste incinerators and any implications this may hold for the environment or human health. I am expecting the report to be completed later this month and I will ensure that a copy is placed in the Library of the House.

Animal Diseases

32. Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the funding of research into animal diseases. [46542]

Mr. Morley: The Department funds a substantial programme of research into farm animal diseases. The current spend is some £33 million annually. Details of our research projects can be found on the DEFRA website (http://www.defra.gov.uk/research/researchfrm.htm).

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her strategy for handling outbreaks of serious animal diseases. [48564]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Strategies for handling outbreaks of serious animal diseases vary in detail according to the characteristics of each disease, notably the means of spread and the species affected. Policies for dealing with the main diseases are set out in EU and UK legislation. Many elements of animal disease control contingency planning are common for a range of diseases. These include surveillance, reporting and investigation procedures; import controls; tracing and diagnosis; eradication options such as slaughter and vaccination; valuation and compensation procedures; controls over animal movements; and the principles of biosecurity, including cleansing and disinfection of premises and vehicles.

The findings of the Royal Society and Lessons Learned Inquiries following last year's FMD outbreak will be taken into account in keeping our strategies for handling animal disease outbreaks up to date and effective.

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what tests for disease are carried out on live animal imports. [R] [46516]

Mr. Morley: Post import checks are carried out by the State Veterinary Service for a range of diseases according to the species and the country from which the animal originated.

Illegal Foodstuffs (Importation)

33. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on measures in place to restrict the importation of illegal foodstuffs. [46543]

Mr. Morley: The Government published an action plan on 28 March, which has a range of measures aimed at reducing the risk of exotic animal and plant diseases entering the country. The plan takes account of recent discussions the Government has had with stakeholder interests on the priorities and actions for the coming year to tackle the issue of illegal imports. A copy of the action plan will be placed in the House Libraries and it can also be viewed on line at http//www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/int-trde/prod-im/prod-im.htm.

Organic Produce

34. Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she will take to standardise criteria for produce to be described as organic. [46544]

Mr. Morley: Common EU standards for the production and marketing of organic produce are prescribed by Council Regulation (EEC) 2092/91. However, the Regulation does not prevent an individual inspection body approved under it from applying more restrictive standards to operators it registers.

Farm Produce (Local Sales)

35. Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to assist farmers to sell their produce locally. [46545]

Alun Michael: The England Rural Development Programme provides grant aid for a range of activities that may be of benefit to farmers seeking to sell produce locally. We have also assisted various local projects under the Agricultural Development Scheme as well as supporting the National Association of Farmers' Market's training and accreditation programmes and the development of the South West Food and Drink Organisation.

Through Food from Britain we contribute to the funding of a network of regional food groups which provide trade development services to regional and speciality food producers, some of whom will be farmers. Food from Britain has been active in encouraging supermarkets to stock more local produce.

We have actively encouraged the development of farmers' markets, as has the Countryside Agency which we grant-aid. Farmers may also derive benefit from the Countryside Agency's "Eat the View" programme which seeks to achieve more favourable market conditions for local products that support sustainable land management.

Illegally Logged Timber

37. Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department has taken to tackle the importation of illegally logged timber. [46547]

Mr. Meacher: The UK has shown leadership under the G8 Action Programme on Forests in promoting bilateral arrangements with timber producing countries whereby countries work together to tackle illegal logging and associated trade. We are currently negotiating the first of these with Indonesia. We hope that bilateral agreements will lead to regional and, eventually, an international agreement that will have a big impact on illegal trade.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many seizures of illegally logged wood have been initiated by her Department in total in the last three years. [48205]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: International trade in some woods is controlled under the terms of the Convention of International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES). Those species of wood listed in Appendix I & II of CITES, require import permits from the UK before they can be imported. These are issued only where the UK Management Authority (DEFRA) is satisfied that the wood has been legally obtained in the country of origin and has the necessary permit for export from that country. Species listed in Appendix III of CITES do not require import permits. For these species a self-completed import notification form must be presented to HM Customs prior to the arrival of the specimens, together with the relevant export permit(s) or certificate(s) of origin issued by the Management Authority in the exporting country. It is for the Management Authority in the country of origin to decide whether the import has been legally logged. On the basis of these procedures the Department has not initiated any seizures of wood in the past three years.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the percentage of rainforest timber entering the United Kingdom which derives from illegal logging. [48320]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Combating illegal logging requires effort from both timber producing and consuming countries. Timber producing countries are responsible for defining and enforcing the national legislative and regulatory frameworks that define legality.

The Department for International Development (DFID) is working with a number of timber exporting countries to help them improve governance and strengthen forest law enforcement. We are also working to develop capacity for the implementation of timber certification schemes in some producing countries.

Domestically, the UK is working to ensure that the import of endangered timber species is in full compliance with CITES, the Convention on Trade in Endangered Species. We are also implementing a new Government timber procurement policy that seeks to procure forest products only from legal and sustainable sources.

We estimate that of the total UK timber and timber product imports, less then 10 per cent. is from tropical timber. A reliable estimate of rain forest timber entering the UK that is derived from illegal sources can only be made once chain of custody systems are in place in exporting countries that can verify legal compliance. The Government is in discussion with some exporting countries about the introduction of such systems.

Nitrates

38. Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her Department's estimate of costs to farmers of the proposed nitrate vulnerable zones regulations. [46548]

Mr. Meacher: The Department's consultation document issued in December 2001 outlines relative costs to farmers of two options for completing implementation of the Nitrates Directive in England.

Total annual cost to English farmers are:

Option 1 (whole of England approach)—£32 million.

Option 2 (targeted NVZ approach)—£23 million.

We are currently considering these figures in the light of responses to our recent consultation. We will publish a revised regulatory impact assessment, containing updated compliance costs, in due course when we are in a position to announce a decision on how the directive is to be implemented.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what studies she has undertaken into the proportion of nitrates leached from arable land which derive from atmospheric deposition. [48199]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Atmospheric deposition of nitrogen, from the air pollutants nitrogen oxides (mainly from vehicle exhausts and industry) and ammonia (mainly from livestock manure), is measured across the UK by the National Acid Deposition Network.

Most of the nitrogen deposited in arable areas is taken up by crops during the growing season, but in late autumn and winter, a proportion is vulnerable to leaching. Studies at the Institute of Arable Crops Research have shown that atmospheric deposition usually contributes around 20 to 30 per cent. of the nitrate leached from arable land.

Atmospheric deposition is a major cause for concern in upland semi-natural habitats which are naturally adapted to receiving low supplies of nutrient nitrogen. Atmospheric deposition is largest in the uplands, where rainfall is highest. Excessive deposition can lead to adverse changes in plant diversity and, in some cases, to nitrate leaching.

Under the UNECE Protocol to Abate Acidification, Eutrophication and Ground-level Ozone, and the European National Emissions Ceilings Directive, the UK is committed to further significant reductions in nitrogen oxide emissions, and to curbing ammonia emissions, from 2010. Achieving these emission reduction targets will cut the amount of nitrogen deposited onto agricultural and semi-natural land. We will publish a consultation this year seeking views on how to curb ammonia emissions.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will (a) determine and (b) regulate closed seasons, under the nitrate directive, on a regional basis. [48201]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The information requested is as follows.

(a) Determination of closed periods:

Annual closed periods in existing NVZ areas are:

For nitrogen fertilisers:

On arable land—1 September to 1 February

On grassland—15 September to 1 November

For slurries, poultry manures and liquid-digested sewage sludge:

On arable land without autumn sown crop: 1 August to 1 November

On grassland or arable land with autumn sown crop: 1 September to 1 November.

The current Action Programme does not include variations on a regional basis in England. We are considering responses received to our recent consultation on completing implementation of the Nitrates Directive which have raised this issue.

(b) Regulation of closed periods:

The Environment Agency will be responsible for enforcing compliance in the new areas where farmers are required to take action to reduce nitrate pollution, as well as in existing Nitrate Vulnerable Zones. The Agency propose to develop a risk based approach to enforcement, for instance by relating the frequency and nature of inspection to the risk of pollution.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her policy with respect to nitrate vulnerable zones. [46522]

Mr. Meacher: Following the Department's recent consultation on how England should complete implementation of the nitrates directive, I hope to be able to announce a decision in May.

Empty Properties

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 29 January 2002, Official Report, column 240W, regarding the estimated cost and value of empty properties, if all surplus empty properties have been sold within the three year guideline set down by HM Treasury. [50335]

Mr. Morley: No. Some surplus properties have been retained for more than three years so that planning issues which significantly enhanced the sale value could be resolved. Disposal of some other properties has been delayed because buyers have not been forthcoming.

Refurbishment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 25 January 2002, Official Report, column 1161W, on refurbishment, what her estimate is of the cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by her Department in 2001–02. [50393]

Mr. Morley: Refurbishment work carried out in 2001–02 has an estimated value of £6,198,500 (estimated because final accounts have not yet been agreed on all projects). The largest project undertaken last year was the refurbishment of floors two to six of Ergon House in London (£4,300,000).

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 25 January 2002, Official Report, column 1161W, on refurbishment carried out by her Department, what her estimate is of the cost of refurbishment carried out as part of landlord lease obligations in each of the last four years. [50394]

Mr. Morley: The Department does not keep records of work carried out as part of landlords' lease obligations separately from general maintenance work. In many cases the distinction is blurred and it would be difficult to assign the work to one category or the other.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 25 January 2002, Official Report, column 1161W, on refurbishment, for what reason the cost in 2000–01 increased by £655,000 over the previous year. [50397]

Mr. Morley: Refurbishment programmes vary from year to year depending upon departmental needs and available funding. In 2000–01 significant projects were undertaken on behalf of the British Cattle Movement Service in Workington and the Farming and Rural Conservation Agency (now part of the Rural Development Service) at Leeds and Wolverhampton.

Surplus Properties

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 29 January 2002, Official Report, column 240W, how many surplus properties have been sold in each year since 1997–98; and what is the sum of the proceeds to public funds resulting from the sales. [50334]

Mr. Morley: The information requested is set out in the table.

	Number of properties sold	Total sales income £ million
1997–98	12	19.5
1998–99	7	7.7
1999–2000	17	15.4
2000–01	10	13.1
2001–02	8	18.0

Overtime

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is on overtime payments for staff in her Department. [49120]

Mr. Morley: In the Department and its agencies the procedures set out below are followed with regard to overtime:

Prior approval to work overtime must be obtained in all cases;

Managers are asked to make every effort to avoid overtime working and, as far as possible, ensure that it occurs only at times of exceptional pressure of work;

Wherever possible, volunteers are sought and weekend overtime avoided;

A 'long hours culture' is not encouraged nor are regular calls on particular groups of staff; and

As an alternative to payment, time off in lieu may be taken.

Staff in the senior civil service, and those who do not work set conditioned hours, or whose pay already includes payment for working overtime, and fee paid staff are not eligible for overtime payments.

Departmental Report

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the 2002 departmental report will be published. [49592]

Mr. Morley: The 2002 departmental reports will be published in spring 2002. The dates will be announced shortly.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she expects the overall cost of the CAP to consumers and taxpayers in the financial year 2001–02 to be higher or lower than the level of 88 billion euros per year specified in the 2001 departmental report. [47908]

Mr. Morley: The estimate in the departmental report is drawn from a range of international sources and recent changes in the operation of the CAP have made it difficult to compare current estimates directly. However latest provisional estimates on a consistent basis show the cost of the CAP to consumers and taxpayers in 2000 was euro 85 billion.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 730W, regarding people employed by her Department under the new deal for young people, what discussions she has had with ministers in the departments of Trade and Industry and International Development regarding central collection of statistics on the destinations of new deal participants. [50426]

Mr. Morley: To date there have been no discussions with Ministers in the Departments of Trade and Industry and International Development regarding central collection of statistics on the destinations of new deal participants.

Industrial Action

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 26 February 2002, Official Report, column 1191W, on industrial action, what assessment she has made of the effect of the lost days on the service provided by her Department to the public. [50553]

Mr. Morley: The main impact of industrial action has been on the Arable Area Payments Scheme where a little over 50 per cent. of payments were made in the first 2 or 3 weeks of the payment window as compared to the normal 60–70 per cent. within that time.

In other areas of DEFRA's work the effects of industrial action on services to the public were more limited. There were however small delays in administration of the National Scrapie Plan and in administration and payments under the Agri Environment, ERDP, livestock and organic farming schemes.

With regard to foot and mouth disease, the action did not significantly jeopardise animal health. PCS agreed local dispensations to allow members employed on the FMD Helpline and Licensing Sections to remain working, although in other sections there were some small delays to payment processing.

Telephone calls to some local DEFRA offices were operated on a reduced service. The Department always took into account the needs of the customers, the taxpayer and the long term working relations in DEFRA.

Broiler Chickens

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many visits have been made by the State Veterinary Service to broiler units since September 2001. [48555]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: In the period from 1 September 2001 until 31 March this year, the State Veterinary Service have visited 73 broiler and broiler breeder units.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the welfare of broiler chickens; and if she will make a statement. [48561]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: As part of its inspection programme, the State Veterinary Service visits broiler units to assess all aspects of welfare.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to publish new recommendations for the welfare of broiler chickens. [48556]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: A new welfare code of recommendations specifically for meat chickens and breeding chickens will shortly be presented to Parliament.

River Bailiffs

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the future of river bailiffs. [48325]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Environment Agency has advised that it will continue to employ officers with the powers of water bailiffs to meet its statutory duty under the Environment Act 1995 to help maintain, develop and improve salmon, trout and freshwater and eel fisheries.

EC Regulation 2037/2000

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of old fridges which will be shipped to Germany for dismantling in compliance with EC Regulation 2037/2000. [48321]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: So far, the Environment Agency has authorised the shipment of approximately 94,500 units for export to Germany. Of these, approximately 3,275 units have been received in Germany and a further 9,615 are in the process of being shipped to Germany for treatment in compliance with EC Regulation 2037/2000. Further applications for 170,350 units have been received by the Environment Agency and these are awaiting a decision.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of (a) the cost and (b) the environmental impact of shipping old fridges to Germany for dismantling in compliance with EC Regulation 2037/2000. [48322]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The cost of shipping fridges to Germany is a commercial decision, although costs of £18 to £24 per appliance for export is reasonable. The environmental impact of shipping fridges will be minimal because high standards are imposed at the treatment facilities and the materials are recovered for recycling.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much money has been paid to farmers under the Countryside Stewardship Scheme. [48546]

Mr. Morley: The total payments made to farmers in each of the years since 1991, when the scheme was introduced by the then Countryside Commission, are as follows:

£ million

	Annual expenditure
1992–93	5.3
1993–94	8.5
1994–95	10.5
1995–96	11.6
1996–97	10.9
1997–98	15.7
1998–99	19.9
1999–2000	23.4
2000–01	28.9
2001–02[1]	47.3
Total expenditure[2]	182.0

[1] Estimated
[2] 1992 to 2002

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what monitoring systems have been put in place to ensure that farmers participating in the Countryside Stewardship Scheme are managing their land to the standards expected by the programme. [48541]

Mr. Morley: To ensure that farmers in the Countryside Stewardship Scheme are managing their land in accordance with their agreements, technical staff from DEFRA's Rural Development Service operate a programme of care and maintenance visits. The programme is structured so that agreement holders are visited in the first year of the agreement and further visits are undertaken where required.

All our agreement holders are in addition subject to compliance monitoring inspections by staff from the Rural Payments Agency. These inspections are carried out to meet EU and our own audit requirements.

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many special advisers there were in her Department; and what their salaries were in each of the last five years. [46953]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 10 April 2002]: DEFRA has two special advisers. As regards their salaries, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Prime Minister on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 11W.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions her Department has had with regional development agencies regarding environmental issues. [47968]

Alun Michael: I regularly attend meetings with the chairs of regional development agencies and ministerial colleagues and the Department are frequently in discussion with regional development agencies on a range of issues. If my hon. Friend has a particular concern in mind, I shall be pleased to address it.

Television Sets

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) analogue and (b) integrated digital television sets her Department has purchased in each of the last 24 months; and if she will make a statement. [38176]

Mr. Morley: From information held centrally, since DEFRA's creation on 8 June 2001, the Department has acquired nine analogue television sets. No digital television sets were acquired. In making decisions on television purchases the Department is required to consider whole life cycle costs when making any purchasing decisions. Whole life costs take account of possible future obsolescence.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) integrated digital and (b) analogue television sets have been bought by her Department in each of the last 24 months; and if she will publish the guidance given to officials making decisions on television purchases. [33235]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 4 February 2002]: From information held centrally, since DEFRAs creation on 8 June 2001, the Department has acquired nine analogue television sets. No digital television sets were acquired. In making decisions on television purchases the Department is required to consider whole life cycle costs when making any purchasing decisions. Whole life costs take account of possible future obsolescence.

Justices of the Peace

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many members of staff at her Department are justices of the peace; and if she has a strategy for her Department to encourage members of staff to become justices of the peace. [44550]

Mr. Morley: Available records show that 12 members of staff are justices of the peace.

The Department actively supports its staff in giving more time to their communities. Staff are allowed varying amounts of paid time off for voluntary public duties (for example, serving as magistrates or school governors). We aim to raise the profile of volunteering and make it easier for staff to give their time and effort to voluntary work.

Correspondence

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Minister of State will reply to the letter of 18 December 2001 from the hon. Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) about the Hampshire Avon, abstraction and the Habitats Directive. [42508]

Mr. Morley: A reply was sent on 7 March.

Thames Barrier

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her estimate is of the public cost associated with the collision of the Sand Lite with the Thames Barrier. [49916]

Mr. Morley: The dredger Sand Kite collided with one of the piers of the Thames Barrier and deposited a quantity of gravel on one of the operating gates. I understand that the remedial works costs to date have been reimbursed to the Environment Agency from the vessel's insurers and have not therefore resulted in any public cost. I further understand that there is some additional remedial painting and removal of gravel from inside the gate recess, to be carried out this summer, that may not be covered by the insurers and may result in a public cost of some £100,000. This is expected be met from Environment Agency's operational budget with a contribution from the Port of London Authority.

Council of Ministers (Fisheries Meeting)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs who attended the fisheries meeting of the EU Council of Ministers on 27 November 2001 on behalf of the UK; and who led the UK delegation. [51035]

Mr. Morley: I attended and led for the UK, supported by officials from DEFRA, the Scottish Executive and the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development for Northern Ireland.

Landfill Tax Credit

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she intends to launch a consultation on the future of the landfill tax credit scheme. [51626]

Mr. Meacher: The Government published on 17 April 2002 a consultation paper on the future of the landfill tax credit scheme. It seeks views on the priorities for funding from revenue currently spent through the landfill tax credit scheme, the merits of different funding mechanisms and any transitional arrangements. The results will feed into the decisions to be made as part of Spending Review 2002.

Copies of the consultation paper are available from the House Libraries or from the DEFRA website: www.defra.gov.uk.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the transfer of responsibility for the movement of nuclear weapons in the United Kingdom from the Director General Equipment Support (Air) to the Warship Support Agency. [51497]

Mr. Ingram: The transfer of responsibility for the movement of nuclear weapons from the Director General Equipment Support (Air) to the Warship Support Agency was completed on 26 March 2002. The Ministry of Defence's commitment to nuclear safety and security was maintained throughout the transfer process.

Medical/Dental Staff Pay

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the pay of medical and dental officers in the armed forces. [51498]

Mr. Hoon: The supplement to the 2002 report of the armed forces pay review body making recommendations on the pay of service medical and dental officers has been published today. Copies of the supplement are available in the Vote Office and the Library of the House. I wish to express my thanks to the Chairman and members of the review body for their work in producing this supplement.

The Review Body recommends an overall pay increase of 4.6 per cent. for all Defence medical services medical and dental officers with the exception of qualified general medical practitioners who will receive an increase of 6.8 per cent. The review body also recommends a 4.6 per cent. increase to the sustained quality payments for general medical practitioners; an increase in trainer pay and a small increase in the value and numbers of distinction awards. In addition, there is a recommendation, which will be reviewed next year, for the introduction of an out-of-hours supplement of £5,000 applicable to junior doctors.

The additional cost to the Defence budget will be £7.7 million. This will be met within departmental expenditure limits.

The review body's recommendations are to be accepted in full, with implementation effective from 1 April 2002.

Aircraft

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the shortfall is in the number of pilots for (a) Sea Harriers and (b) RAF Harriers; and what steps the Department is taking to reduce this number. [50869]

Mr. Ingram: The position as at 1 April 2002 is set out in the table.

Force	Established flying posts	Strength
Sea Harrier	[1]72	48
Harrier GR7	[2]67	63

[1] This reflects the overall commander, lieutenant commander and junior officer requirement for Sea Harriers, including cockpit manning (front line and training), naval broadening within fleet appointments, staff appointments and exchanges for commanders and below.

[2] Comprises wing commander, squadron leader and junior officer posts on front line squadrons, operational conversion units, operational evaluation units and wing appointments. In addition to the established flying posts, fast jet pilots are required for instructional duties within the RAF's flying training system, overseas exchange posts, the RAF Aerobatic Team and a number of ground duties shared by all General Duties Branches.

Addressing the current aircrew shortfalls is a key priority and a number of actions have been taken to reduce the impact of these shortfalls. These include increasing the number of fast jet pilots entering into productive service, returning some middle ranking officers to flying duties and recruiting trained pilots released by the Royal New Zealand Air Force. To improve retention two new financial retention incentives were introduced on 1 April 2002, each linked to a commitment to five years further service.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) FA2 Sea Harriers and (b) GR7 RAF Harriers are in service. [50868]

Mr. Ingram: As at 16 April 2002, there were a total of 54 RAF Harrier GR7s and 29 Sea Harrier FA2s in the Actual Operating Fleet. The Actual Operating Fleet is the total number of aircraft available to undertake the defined military task, and may vary day to day.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Harrier force will leave service; when the joint strike fighter will enter service; and how many JSF aircraft will be procured. [50872]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 28 February 2002, Official Report, columns 1451–52W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Broxtowe (Dr. Palmer), the Sea Harrier FA2s of Joint Force Harrier will be withdrawn from service by 2006.

The Harrier GR9s of Joint Force Harrier will be withdrawn from service as they are replaced by the future joint combat aircraft (FJCA) and, on current plans, this will be completed in 2015.

The joint strike fighter has been selected as having the best potential for meeting our FJCA requirement and is currently planned to enter UK service in 2012. Work is currently on-going on numbers required, but our current planning assumption is for some 150 aircraft.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the reduction in the number of RAF Nimrod patrol aircraft. [50871]

Dr. Moonie: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 28 February 2002, Official Report, columns 1452–53W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Broxtowe (Dr. Palmer).

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the types of aircraft used by the RAF; and how many of each are operational. [50873]

Mr. Ingram: On 16 April 2002, there were 821 fixed wing aircraft and 162 rotary wing aircraft in the RAF's Actual Operating Fleet. The breakdown of this figure by aircraft type and number is detailed in the following table.

Aircraft type	Number of aircraft
Fixed wing aircraft
BAe 125 ccMk3	6
BAe 146 ccMK2	2
C-17	4
Canberra	5
Chipmunk	2
Dakota	1
Dominie	11
Firefly	45
Harrier GR7	54
Harrier T10	8
Sea Harrier FA2	29
Sea Harrier T8	4
Hawk	115
Hercules C-130J	23
Hercules C-130K	26
Islander	1
Jaguar	43
Jetstream TMk	11
Nimrod MR2	18
Nimrod R1	2
Sentry E-3D AEW Mk1	6
Tornado F3	90
Tornado GR1/4	112
Tristar	9
Tucano Mk1	76
Tutor	99
VC10	19
Rotary Wing Aircraft
Chinook Mk 2/2a	31
Griffin	9
Merlin Mk 3	9
Puma	35
Sea King Mk 3/3a	25
Twin Squirrel	41
Wessex HC2	12

The RAF also operates the Battle of Britain Memorial Flight, which comprises eight fixed wing aircraft. The breakdown of this figure by aircraft type and number is detailed in the following table.

Aircraft type	Number of aircraft
Hurricane	2
Lancaster B1	1
Spitfire	5

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Harrier aircraft will operate under the Joint Force Harrier; and what improvements will be made to the GR9 Harrier to allow the separate Harrier forces to integrate. [50870]

Mr. Ingram: I assume my hon. Friend to be asking for the number of Harrier aircraft that will operate under Joint Force Harrier following the withdrawal from service of the Sea Harrier by 2006 and that he is referring to improvements planned to the Harrier GR7 aircraft when he asks what improvements will be made to allow the separate Harrier forces to integrate.

Following the withdrawal from service of the Sea Harrier, the Required Operating Fleet of the Joint Force Harrier is expected to be 51 aircraft. The Required Operating Fleet is the theoretical number of aircraft required by the operational squadrons to undertake the defined military task.

Thirty Harrier GR7 aircraft will be upgraded to GR7a standard by the integration of the Pegasus Mk 107 engine. This will provide improved performance, particularly for carrier borne operation. Furthermore, all Harrier GR7 and Harrier GR7a aircraft will receive avionics and weapons upgrades to provide the aircraft with a much improved capability, in particular the ability to deliver the new generation of smart weapons that are about to enter service. These aircraft will be designated Harrier GR9 and Harrier GR9a.

PFI Programmes

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civilians are employed in connection with MoD PFI programmes. [50789]

Mr. Ingram: There is a small central team with 15 civilian personnel that is responsible for developing policy and best practice for the Ministry of Defence's Private Finance Initiative (PFI) programme and other types of Public Private Partnership. The central team is supported by smaller teams within the Defence Procurement Agency, Defence Logistics Organisation and other management areas, which are responsible for managing the programmes within their own areas.

The management and delivery of the PFI programme also involves managers, both military and civilian, at all levels as members of project boards, scrutiny and approving authorities, commercial advisers and customer representatives. MOD legal and finance staffs are also involved, although they usually do not work on PFI programmes full-time.

PFI projects are run by dedicated integrated project teams, the size of which varies with the size of the project and the stage it has reached in the procurement cycle. The teams can include civilian and military personnel, as well as industry representatives. External consultants may be engaged by project teams. A small number also sit on project boards.

Once contracts have been signed, they are monitored and are managed by MOD personnel, both civilian and military depending on the services concerned. But contractors' personnel deliver the services themselves and it is up to the contractors to determine the size of the civilian workforce necessary to meet our requirements.

A substantial number of civilians within and outside the MOD is employed on MOD PFI programmes, full and part-time, in a variety of roles. Information on the number of civilians employed in managing and delivering the programme and individual projects is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Royal Navy

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the Fleet's fully operational destroyer and frigate strength will be in December 2002, excluding vessels held at states of low readiness. [49759]

Mr. Ingram: In December 2002, on current plans, of the Fleet's 32 Frigates and Destroyers, 26 will be operational or engaged in preparing for service, conducting trials or training. The remaining six will be either undergoing docking periods or refit or held at a low level of readiness.

HMS Fearless

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what savings will be made from the early withdrawal of HMS Fearless. [49765]

Mr. Ingram: The earlier than previously planned withdrawal of HMS Fearless will accrue savings of at least £2 million. This will be achieved by cancelling a previously programmed assisted maintenance period and through the reduction in operating costs. Moreover, HMS Fearless is nearly 37 years old and is in poor material condition. The unique nature of much of her machinery such as boilers and steam plant make repairs and maintenance difficult and it is highly probable that further unprogrammed and potentially costly work would have been required to maintain her at the previously assumed readiness state.

HMS Illustrious

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the main elements will be in the refit of HMS Illustrious; how long the refit was originally planned to take; and how long it is expected to take. [50874]

Mr. Ingram: The main elements of HMS Illustrious's refit concern maintenance, repair and improvements to ships systems and equipment to overcome obsolescence, meet safety and environmental legislation and enhance capability in command, control and communications systems and in aviation facilities.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 14W which indicated that the refit was originally planned to take about 23 months. Detailed negotiations with the refitting contractor are currently under way, and may result in some programme adjustment.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the estimated cost of the refit of HMS Illustrious is. [50815]

Mr. Ingram: The refit of HMS Illustrious is estimated to cost approximately £110 million excluding costs attributable to Ministry supplied material and naval manpower.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 14W, on Navy vessels, how many (a) officers and (b) crew will remain on HMS Illustrious until her refit commences; what their duties will be; how often officers and crew will be redeployed; how many officers and crew will remain with HMS Illustrious during her refit; and what HMS Illustrious's reduced state of readiness will be until October. [50777]

Mr. Ingram: HMS Illustrious remains fully staffed as the Fleet Flagship until 27 May 2002. Following this her role changes to Standby Preservation by Operation. She requires 15 officers and 196 ratings in this role, whose duties will be essential safety checks, low level maintenance and preservation checks at her reduced state of readiness. On commencement of her refit the crew numbers reduce to nine officers and 36 ratings. Personnel will then be employed as required in support of the refit. They will be subject to normal drafting and appointing notice, but as a reduced manned ship will, as far as possible, be protected from short notice movement of personnel. HMS Illustrious will then gradually build up to achieve full manpower by October 2004.

Helicopter Hangars

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what plans there are to provide temporary helicopter hangars on HMS Albion and HMS Bulwark; [50816]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact the absence of hangars on landing platform docks will have on the serviceability of helicopters. [50817]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently no plans to provide temporary helicopter hangars on the landing platform dock (replacement)s (LPD(R)s HMS Albion and HMS Bulwark although these could be incorporated without fundamental modification of the vessels.

The lack of hangars on the LPD(R)s will have an impact on the serviceability of helicopters. This impact was taken into account when the decision about a hangar was made and assessed as manageable. HMS Intrepid and HMS Fearless, which HMS Albion and HMS Bulwark will replace, were not fitted with helicopter hangars.

Future Rapid Effects System

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress on the Army's Future Rapid Effects System project. [50004]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 17 April 2002]: The Army's Future Rapid Effect System (FRES) is in the concept phase. The operational requirement that FRES is expected to meet is close to being finalised. Initial Gate for the programme is planned for the end of 2002. We continue to review our existing armoured fighting vehicle programmes to ensure that they are coherent with the requirement for 'rapid effect'.

Ammunition Stocks

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what ammunition stocks are held in the UK; [50931]

(2) how the level of stocks of ammunition has changed since 1997. [50932]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has a stockpile of munitions held against the risk of short notice conflicts. The method of calculating the size and composition of this stockpile has undergone significant development in the last three years, and it now reflects more accurately the likely nature of the conflicts that the UK armed forces could become involved in. Specific information relating to ammunition stock levels is withheld under Exemption 1 (Defence, Security and International Relations) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has classified the secure supply of ammunition as being of strategic importance. [50934]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence has always considered security of supply and value for the taxpayer's money to be key criteria in the procurement of safe and reliable munitions for the armed forces. The issue of security of supply was examined in detail by the House of Commons Defence Select Committee in 1999 and the committee recognised that in balancing security of supply against cost, it is likely that there are very few capabilities that must, on strategic grounds, be retained in the UK.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what circumstances it is the Government's policy to subsidise ammunition manufacturers in the UK to ensure its supply. [50935]

Dr. Moonie: The framework partnering agreement between Royal Ordnance Defence and the Ministry of Defence provides the company with contracted ammunition requirements for a rolling three-year period, firm requirements for a further two years, and a best forecast up to the 10-year point. The agreement is not a subsidy; it is intended to provide a vital link to industry to help ensure the supply of safe and reliable munitions for our armed forces.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contractual guarantees exist to safeguard the supply of ammunition by overseas manufacturers in (a) peace and (b) war. [50933]

Dr. Moonie: During the past year the Ministry of Defence has only obtained around 8 per cent. (by value) of its ammunition from overseas manufacturers. Supply and re-supply arrangements are taken into account when letting contracts. There is no difference in contractual arrangements for re-supply in peace or war. The supply of military stores and components for the UK armed forces from overseas is not a new venture, as our many collaborative projects demonstrate. Such contracts can meet both our requirements and demonstrate added value for money.

Pilots

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the intake of pilots has been to the (a) RAF and (B) Fleet Air Arm in each year since 1997. [49744]

Mr. Ingram: The intake of pilots into the RAF and Fleet Air Arm (FAA) are shown in the table.

Year	RAF	FAA
1997	110	62
1998	122	50
1999	177	29
2000	157	12
2001	151	41

The FAA figures do not include any Royal Marines pilot entrants who did not enter the FAA.

Decoy Systems

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Active Off-Board Decoy System will become operational on Royal Navy warships. [50787]

Dr. Moonie: The Active Off-Board Decoy System is expected to reach operational service in the Royal Navy from early 2004 once sufficient Active Decoy Rounds have been produced. It will be fitted to all major Royal Navy warships, improving their ability to counter anti-ship missiles.

Surface Torpedo Defence System

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the latest in-service date for the new Surface Torpedo Defence system is; and if he will make a statement on progress on the programme. [50786]

Dr. Moonie: The planned in-service date for Surface Ship Torpedo Defence is 2004. Following competition, a lead-in contract was placed with Ultra Electronics, Greenford, Middlesex in November 2001. The contract includes an option for the development, manufacture and support of ship systems.

Multi-role Survey Ship

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to place an order for a third multi-role survey ship. [50781]

Dr. Moonie: There are currently no plans for a third multi-role survey ship.

Submarines

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which submarines will be fitted with the Submarine Acoustic Warfare Command System; and when the system will be operational. [50785]

Dr. Moonie: The Submarine Acoustic Warfare Command System is planned to be fitted to all Vanguard, Trafalgar and Astute class submarines and those Swiftsure submarines with sufficient remaining life. This capability enables the deployment of defensive countermeasures and will be operational from mid-2002.

PRIME MINISTER

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what the cost was to his Office of answering written parliamentary questions in 2001; and how that cost was calculated; [49101]

(2) how many staff were involved in each of the last three years in preparing draft answers to written parliamentary questions. [49143]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the President of the Council on 17 April 2002, Official Report, column 929W.

Overtime

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister what his policy is on overtime payments for staff in his office. [49131]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office today.

Romania

Adam Price: To ask the Prime Minister what initiatives he has taken since January 2001 to persuade British companies to invest in Romania; and how many letters he has written for this purpose which were published in the United Kingdom. [50463]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him and the hon. Member for Isle of Wight (Mr. Turner) on 14 February 2002, Official Report, columns 610–11W.

Transport Links (Devolved Assemblies)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Prime Minister which Department has responsibility for maintenance of air and sea transport links (a) between those parts of the United Kingdom with devolved Assemblies and (b) between those areas and England. [51041]

The Prime Minister: The Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions is responsible for air and sea transport policy in the United Kingdom. There is a liberalised air and sea transport market within the European Community and the Government do not normally intervene to maintain services, except in the case of certain economically vital 'lifeline' services which would not be commercially viable without subsidy. Any subsidies paid, subject to state aid rules, are the responsibility of the relevant devolved Administrations or local councils.

Overseas Hospitality

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the occasions since May 1997 when he has benefited from the hospitality of an overseas Government (a) when on official business and (b) otherwise. [51042]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Westmorland and Lonsdale (Mr. Collins) on 17 April 2002, Official Report, column 986W.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Professional Indemnity Insurance

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many contracts his Department has with consultants; what level of professional indemnity insurance is standard in contracts with small consultants; whether he can make exceptions to the level of professional indemnity insurance; and what recent discussions he has had with other Government Departments about the level of professional indemnity insurance. [50837]

Dr. Whitehead: I am unable to give the hon. Member the answer to the first part of this question as this information is not centrally held, and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

DTLR's contracts require contractors (including consultants) to take out and maintain such insurance as is necessary to cover their liabilities under the contract. The Department has been involved in interdepartmental discussions with the Office of Government Commerce (OGC), who issued guidance in April 2001 to all Departments. The guidance encouraged a more flexible approach to contractors' (including consultants) total liability when undertaking Government contracts. DTLR has adopted this approach and either sets a realistic cap on liability (relative to the risks involved) when inviting tenders or is prepared to consider caps proposed by tenderers.

Departmental Annual Report

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he will publish his Department's annual report; and if he will make a statement on the timing of publication. [48805]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 17 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 15 April 2002, Official Report, column 774W.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions on what date his Department expects to publish its annual report for 2002; and if he will make a statement. [50905]

Dr. Whitehead: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 15 April 2002, Official Report, column 774W.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when the 2002 departmental report will be published. [49585]

Dr. Whitehead: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 15 April 2002, Official Report, column 774W.

Creches

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 984W, regarding creche facilities, when the review of child care provision in his Department will be concluded; and when its recommendations will be announced. [50398]

Dr. Whitehead: It is expected that the initial stage of the review of child care provision (outlining options) will be concluded during autumn 2002.

Salaries

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what have been the total salary costs of each of the non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible in each of the last five years. [50297]

Dr. Whitehead: The total salary costs of each non-departmental public body currently sponsored by the Department for each of the last five years is as follows.

£ million

Sunset Clauses

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions which Bills introduced by his Department in the last five years have contained sunset clauses; and what plans he has for the future use of such clauses. [49617]

Dr. Whitehead: The Sex Discrimination (Election Candidates) Act 2002 contains a sunset clause that will make the provisions expire at the end of 2015. The clause also allows for the Act's provisions to be extended, by secondary legislation, if there is a case for doing so in 2015.

In accordance with the Government manifesto commitment, DTLR will continue to explore the possibility of time limiting new regulations where appropriate. We are also looking at other ways of ensuring legislation is kept up to date such as reviewing major legislation after it is implemented.

Efficiency Savings

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the target has been in each of the last five years for efficiency savings as a percentage of total running costs for each of the non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible; and if the target was met. [49636]

Dr. Whitehead: All executive non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) are required to provide information about the performance and efficiency targets agreed with their sponsoring Department and performance against those targets in their annual reports, copies of which are normally available in the library of the House. These details are not available for advisory and tribunal NDPBs.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what the cost was to his Department of answering written parliamentary questions in 2001; and how that cost was calculated; [49099]

(2) how many staff were involved in each of the last three years in preparing draft answers to written parliamentary questions. [49141]

Dr. Whitehead: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by the Leader of the House on 17 April 2002, Official Report, column 929W.

Entertainment Costs

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) if he will list for each of the last five years the total amount of money spent by Ministers in his Department on food, alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks for entertainment purposes; [47212]

(2) how much was spent by departmental special advisers on food, alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks for official entertainment purposes in each of the last five years. [46839]

Dr. Whitehead [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The cost of entertainment, expenditure incurred by Ministers, Private Offices, the Permanent Secretary's Office and special advisers was £13,000 for 1999–2000; £16,000 for 2000–01 and £21,000 for 2001–02.

The remainder of the information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) how many special advisers there were in his Department; and what their salaries were in each of the last five years; [46961]

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the number and expected cost to his Department of special advisers in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [43280]

Dr. Whitehead: At 13 March, there were two special advisers in my office. On cost, I refer the hon. Members to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 11W.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many Private Finance Initiative projects have been subject to refinancing after the contracts have been signed; and what has been the financial effect in each case. [50290]

Dr. Whitehead: Three of my Department's Private Finance Initiative road contracts have been refinanced. These are listed, together with the value of the share received from the companies concerned.

Project	Operating company	£ million
A19/A168 Dishforth-Tyne Tunnel	Autolink Concessionaires A19 Ltd.	1.5

Local Government

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps are being taken to update the former Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions' Indices of Deprivation, by local government ward basis. [48856]

Ms Keeble: My Department has just issued an invitation to tender to a number of consultants for a research project to explore updating the Indices of Deprivation 2000. The contract has five broad objectives. These are:

To produce options for strengthening the ID 2000. This will be based on a conceptualisation of how multiple deprivation should be measured. It needs to build on proposed areas for further development identified in the 1999 review. It should include a review of literature on the measurement of deprivation since 1999.

To assess how practical it will be to implement these options by investigating the availability of data that have, or are about to, come on stream since the 1999 review including availability of 2001 Census data.

To assess the potential to provide a general updating both to the current indicators and the 1998 ward boundaries that underpin the ID 2000.

To assess the potential of further developing the ID 2000 to a sub-ward geography.

To revise the ID 2000 as appropriate.

The methodology for indices of deprivation was subject to an extensive review in 1999. This project builds on this review and consideration of methodological issues is focused on introducing new domains or better data and the review of literature on the measurement of deprivation since 1999 which should inform ideas on how the ID 2000 may be strengthened.

Employment Tribunals

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many employment tribunal cases have been brought against his Department and its predecessor in each year since 1997; and how much his Department has spent on defending employment tribunal cases in this period. [49446]

Mr. Byers: Information is not held in a manner which would allow the question to be answered without disproportionate expense.

Disciplinary Action

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, (1) pursuant to his answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 982W, how many members of staff have been the subject of disciplinary action as a result of the internal leak inquiry; [49789]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 986W, if Ian Jones is (a) still employed by his Department, (b) still suspended on full pay and (c) the subject of disciplinary action. [49792]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 15 April 2002]: Staffing and disciplinary matters are handled within the Department in accordance with the DTLR staff handbook. Within that framework personnel matters relating to individuals are a confidential matter between them and the Department.

Former Press Officers

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the contractual position is of his Department with (a) Martin Sixsmith and (b) Jo Moore. [47033]

Dr. Whitehead [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the statement the Permanent Secretary of my Department made on 25 February 2002, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he has sought counsel's advice on his Department's position in relation to his Department's employment of Mr. Martin Sixsmith. [49448]

Mr. Byers: It is not the normal practice to disclose whether legal advice has been taken (paragraph 7 of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information refers).

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when (a) he and (b) the Permanent Secretary of the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions last met the First Division Association to discuss the status of (i) Jo Moore and (ii) Mr. Martin Sixsmith. [49447]

Mr. Byers: I have had no such discussions. The Permanent Secretary exceptionally described some discussions in his statement of 25 February 2002. It is not the practice to provide details of any such discussions (paragraph 7 of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information refers).

Blue Badge Scheme

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) if he will introduce a temporary blue badge scheme; and if he will make a statement. [50927]

(2) what plans he has to speed up the processing of applications for blue badges. [50926]

Ms Keeble: The administration of the blue badge scheme is the responsibility of individual local authorities. When they have received the information they require to process an application they should be expected to do so without delay.

A comprehensive review of the blue badge scheme is currently being undertaken by my Department, which will look at the administration of the scheme and will also consider the case for temporary badges. Consultation on a discussion paper, which was issued to the main stakeholders, including disability organisations and local authorities, ended recently. The Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee (DPTAC- our statutory advisers on the transport and mobility needs of disabled people) are considering responses and are due to report their recommendations to the Secretary of State around the end of this month. In the light of those recommendations we aim to decide on the way forward with the scheme over the summer.

Parish Councillors

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many parish councillors have resigned in each month since 1 January. [50604]

Dr. Whitehead: The Department does not collect information on the number of councillors who resign from local authorities.

Drug Abuse

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what resources his Department make available to local authorities to help them combat drug abuse. [48857]

Dr. Whitehead: The Government provide general grant for revenue expenditure through the local government finance settlement. It is for the local authorities themselves to determine how much of these resources they direct towards combating drug abuse. Government also provides the following ring-fenced grants to local authorities:

A grant to support local Young People's Substance Misuse Planning (set at £4.5 million for 2002–03);

A grant for drug prevention in schools, provided through the Schools Standards Fund (£9.5 million for 2002–03).

The majority of earmarked funding for combating drug abuse is provided to local Drug Action Teams, within which the local authorities have a key role. Details of this funding were given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Anti-Drugs Co-ordination and Organised Crime in reply to a question by the hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell (Chris Grayling) on 29 January 2002, Official Report, columns 295–96W.

Vacant Dwellings

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the effect on the housing market of vacant dwellings (a) in England and (b) in the local area. [50652]

Mr. Byers: In our assessment, in areas where the housing market is functioning well, vacant dwellings may lead to increased pressure on the housing stock and for development on greenfield land. They may also blight neighbouring properties. In areas of low housing demand, where the proportion of vacant dwellings may be more highly concentrated, they can escalate the decline of an area, act as a magnet for crime, vandalism, arson and antisocial behaviour and create negative equity problems for those living in adjacent dwellings.

Local authorities are responsible for assessing the effect of vacant dwellings on the local housing market and for developing strategies to minimise their number, as part of their wider housing strategy.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many vacant dwellings there were and how many vacant dwellings were privately owned in each of the last five years, broken down by local authority area. [50653]

Mr. Byers: I have placed the information requested in the Libraries of the House. The table presents data showing the total number of vacant dwellings and how many of these were privately owned at 1 April in each local authority area in England for the last five years (1997–2001).

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many vacant dwellings that have been (a) vacant for more than six months, (b) vacant for between three to six months and (c) vacant for less than three months, are waiting to be (i) sold, (ii) let and (iii) redeveloped. [50651]

Mr. Byers: The information is not available in the form requested.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many vacant dwellings there were and how many were privately owned in each of the last five years; and how many were vacant (a) for more than six months, (b) between three to six months and (c) for less than three months. [50650]

Mr. Byers: The number of vacant dwellings in England on 1 April in each of the last five years is shown in the table, together with the number that were privately owned.

Number of vacant dwellings in England at 1 April

	Total vacant	of which: Privately owned
2001	755,100	622,600
2000	760,500	623,200
1999	767,000	637,000
1998	753,300	623,300
1997	767,200	640,200

Information on the length of time dwellings were vacant is not available in the form requested.

Mobile Telephone Masts

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will take steps to ensure mobile telephone masts should receive positive planning permission, regardless of their height. [50030]

Ms Keeble: On 22 August last year we introduced changes that significantly improved the planning procedures and guidance for telecommunications mast development. The changes, which included, amendments to the 1995 Order:

strengthened public consultation requirements on mast proposals of 15 metres and below so that they are the same as for planning applications; increased the time for an authority to deal with prior approval applications to 56 days; underlined that school governors must be consulted on all proposals for new masts on or near a school or college; and increased fees to enable authorities to carry out full public consultation.

We have no plans to amend further the planning arrangements for telecommunications development.

Sustainable Development

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will define the phrase "sustainable development" as used by his Department. [49723]

Mr. Byers: My Department's approach to sustainable development is consistent with the Government's overall sustainable development strategy "A better quality of life" (Cm 4345) published in May 1999. The strategy has four main aims:

Social progress which recognises the needs of everyone;

Effective protection of the environment;

Prudent use of natural resources;

Maintenance of high and stable levels of economic growth and employment.

Fire Service

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 228W, on the cost of rescues by the fire service, what is the most recent guidance he has given to chief fire officers on recording the costs of (a) fires attended, (b) rescues from road traffic accidents and (c) other rescues by their fire authority. [46609]

Dr. Whitehead: Following the introduction of Best Value, the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy published revised accounting guidance "Best Value Accounting—Code of Practice" for local authorities. Best Value authorities, including fire authorities, are subject to the revised guidance from 1 April 2001. The Code is reviewed on an annual basis. It contains sections on service expenditure analysis, including one on the provision of fire services.

Shopping Centres

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on his Department's policy (a) towards new out of town shopping centre developments and (b) on new shopping centre developments within existing towns. [49002]

Mr. Byers: The Government's planning policy for town centres and retail developments, which is contained in Planning Policy Guidance Note 6: Town Centres and Retail Developments (PPG6), seeks to sustain and enhance the vitality and viability of our existing city, town and district centres to make them the focus for retail and other investment. The policy contributes to delivering the urban renaissance, securing more sustainable patterns of development and promoting social inclusion.

Proposals for new developments within existing city, town and district centres are not subject to the main policy tests in PPG6. They should, however, be in accordance with an up-to-date development plan and of a scale that is appropriately related to the size and function of centre, and its catchment, that they seek to serve.

Development proposals for new shopping centres outside city, town and district centres, or extensions to existing ones, are subject to the policy tests in PPG6. Where proposals are not in accord with an up-to-date development plan there is a requirement to demonstrate the need for any additional retail provision and to apply a sequential approach to selecting the location, starting with town centre sites, followed by edge-of-centre and only then out-of-centre sites in locations which are accessible by a choice of means of transport. Applicants must also be able to demonstrate that in considering more central locations they have been flexible about the format, scale and design of their development proposals and the amount of car parking.

A shopping centre proposal which a local planning authority is minded to permit and which is not in accord with the development plan for the area should be referred to my Department in accordance with the Town and Country Planning (Development Plans and Consultation) (Departures) Directions 1999. The Town and Country Planning (Shopping Development) (England and Wales) (No.2) Direction 1993 requires referral of applications for retail proposals above a prescribed size. In the case of referral under either Direction, the Secretary of State will then decide whether the proposal should be called in for his own determination.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans his Department has to alter planning guidance and regulations relating to shopping centre developments;and if he will list the changes to planning guidance and planning regulations relating to shopping centre developments since 1997. [49001]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 17 April 2002]: We have no plans to alter planning guidance and regulations relating to shopping centre developments.

There have been no changes to the policy since 1997, but it has been clarified through the following official statements and documents:

the Government Response (July 1997) to the House of Commons Environment Committee's report, "Shopping Centres" (1996–97), which reaffirmed the Government's commitment to the policy in PPG6;

the parliamentary answer of 5 December 1997 (Hansard Vol. 302, columns 401–402) by the Minister for Planning, clarifying that extensions to existing retail developments would be subject to the same policy tests as new development; the statement of 11 February 1999 by the Minister for Planning, clarifying that the need for new retail development should be taken into account in assessing development proposals; and the Government Response (May 2000) to the House of Commons Environment, Transport and Regional Affairs Committee's report on "The Environmental Impact of Supermarket Competition" (1999–2000), which among other issues, clarified how the sequential approach should be used to assess new retail development.

The revision of PPG13: "Transport", published last year, supports PPG6 in identifying preferred locations for key town centre uses, including offices. It introduced maximum parking standards for shopping and other town centre developments.

The Town and Country Planning (Development Plans and Consultation)(Departures) Directions 1999 reduced the floorspace threshold under which local planning authorities are required to refer to the Secretary of State planning applications involving retail and other commercial uses, from 10,000 to 5,000 square metres.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will publish a list of shopping centre planning applications that have been called in by his Department and the former Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions since 1997. [49003]

Mr. Byers: Since 1997, 30 shopping centre applications have been called in for the Secretary of State's determination. These are listed by region. For the purposes of the question shopping centres are developments involving 5,000 square metres or more of floorspace, including factory outlet centres. They do not include retail warehouse parks, individual freestanding retail warehouses, warehouse clubs or supermarkets.

Planning

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will deposit in the Library copies of the responses to the Planning Green Paper. [49889]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 15 April 2002]: I will place a list of respondents in the Libraries of the House. Because of the large number involved, over 14,000, copies of the responses will be made available for public inspection in my Department's library once they have been analysed.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will assess the (a) advantages and (b) disadvantages of including demolition as part of the planning process. [48840]

Ms Keeble: Demolition of buildings is already part of the planning process. Generally speaking, the demolition of non-residential buildings does not constitute "development" (as defined in section 55 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990), and consequently no planning permission is required. However, the demolition of a residential building does constitute development for which a permitted development right has been granted by Part 31 of Schedule 2 to the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995. This means that, instead of having to submit an application for planning permission for the demolition of a residential building, a developer has to apply to the local planning authority for a determination as to whether prior approval is required for the proposed method of demolition and any proposed restoration of the site. Planning authorities also have powers—subject to approval by the Secretary of State—to require planning applications for demolition of residential property, where amenity would be seriously threatened.

In addition, listed building consent is required for the demolition of any listed building, and conservation area consent is required for the demolition of an unlisted building in a conservation area.

We are considering whether to introduce any changes to the existing demolition controls as part of our current review of the planning system and in taking forward work arising from the Government's Heritage Statement "The Historic Environment: A Force for Our Future".

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make it his policy to require planning permission for buildings as part of the planning process; and if he will make a statement. [48841]

Ms Keeble: Putting up a building usually amounts to "development", for which planning permission is required. However, Parliament has granted a general planning permission or "permitted development right" to carry out certain types of minor development without the need to submit an application. This removes a large burden of unnecessary planning work from local authorities.

Leasehold Advisory Service

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much funding has been granted to the Leasehold Advisory Service in each of the last five years; and what the appointment arrangements are for members of the LEASE board. [50649]

Mr. Byers: Funding for the Leasehold Advisory Service for each of the last five financial years has been as follows:

£309,885 (Including £1,000 from the Welsh Office and £38,326 from the private sector.)

1998–99

£268,322 (Including £1,000 from the Welsh Office and £26,622 from the private sector.)

1999–2000

£315,582 (Including £2,000 from the National Assembly for Wales and £12,700 from the private sector.)

2000–01

£398,000 (Including £2,000 from the National Assembly for Wales.)

2001–02

£489,700 (Including £4,700 from the National Assembly for Wales.)

The Leasehold Advisory Service is a private sector company, limited by guarantee. The arrangements for the appointment of its board members are governed by its memorandum and articles of association, copies of which are available from Companies House.

Homelessness

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many homeless people there were (a) in absolute terms and (b) as a proportion of the population in each local authority district or unitary authority in England and Wales, at the latest date for which figures are available. [49037]

Ms Keeble: Summary information on activity under statutory homelessness provisions is reported to the Department each quarter by local authorities in England. This includes the number of households accepted under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 and 1996 Housing Acts as being eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need.

National and some regional information on local authorities' activity is provided in a quarterly Statistical Release published by the Department. Key summary information at local authority and regional level is set out in associated supplementary table; this includes the number of households accepted, and this number is also expressed as a rate per thousand households living in the local authority area. Copies are available in the Library, and also via the Department's website. The latest version, published on 14 March, presents statistics for the period October to December 2001.

For corresponding information about Welsh authorities, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what funding will be available to local authorities in order to help them to implement the new duties imposed on them by the Homelessness Act 2002 and the Priority Needs Order. [50528]

Mr. Byers: The Government have provided an additional £8 million per annum (through the local government finance settlement, with effect from 2001–02) to compensate local authorities for the revenue costs of implementing the Homelessness Act and the priority needs order.

In response to the homelessness report, 'More than a roof', I confirmed that the Government will allocate additional resources in order to help local authorities deliver the priority needs order. A further announcement on this will be made when the election purdah period is over.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what funding will be available to the National Homelessness Directorate over the next three years; and how much money will go to (a) the BBU, (b) the RSU and (c) the Hostels Inspectorate. [50529]

Mr. Byers: The DTLR has allocated £35 million to the Bed and Breakfast Unit and £30 million to the Rough Sleepers Unit for this financial year. Funding from April 2003 onwards is dependent on the outcome of Spending Review 2002.

As was stated in the document 'More than a roof' we are currently exploring the feasibility of establishing a hostels 'inspectorate'.

Right to Buy

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent representations he has received on the incidence of commercial property companies offering local authority tenants a cash incentive to exercise the right to buy their home; and if he will make a statement. [49915]

Ms Keeble: We are aware of concerns that the right to buy scheme is being exploited in various ways. We have commissioned research into what is happening, including the effect on the housing market. The results will be made publicly available when the work is completed.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many council properties were sold under the right to buy in each year since 1980. [49913]

Ms Keeble: The latest information on right to buy sales by local authorities and new towns in each year since the scheme's introduction in October 1980 is presented in the table:

	Total sales completed under RTB
1980–81	2,300
1981–82	106,600
1982–83	168,700
1983–84	107,500
1984–85	78,500
1985–86	72,600
1986–87	77,400
1987–88	94,600
1988–89	137,000
1989–90	134,900
1990–91	76,600
1991–92	48,500
1992–93	37,900
1993–94	44,900
1994–95	43,300
1995–96	31,500
1996–97	33,200
1997–98	41,300
1998–99	40,300
1999–2000	54,300
2000–01	52,000
2001[1]	23,800
Total	1,507,600

Heathrow

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what restrictions on night flights at Heathrow airport apply; what information he has collated on the rules that apply at other European hub airports; and what assessment he has made of the effect of such restrictions on Heathrow's competitive position. [48922]

Mr. Jamieson: The present night restrictions for Heathrow are as we announced on 10 June 1999, Official Report, columns 378–380. These restrictions came into effect on 31 October 1999 and apply until the end of the summer season 2004. Information on assessments made prior to the introduction of these restrictions and a comparison of the principal night flight restrictions at major international airports were published in "Night Restrictions at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted: Second Stage Consultation Paper" in November 1998, of which copies were placed in the Libraries of the House, Official Report, columns 492–493.

Appropriate up-to-date information will be published in a consultation paper when we put forward proposals for the next night noise regime for the BAA London airports.

Maritime and Coastguard Agency

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether the Maritime and Coastguard Agency has sole responsibility for drafting and presentation of certificates of registry; and which office within the Maritime and Coastguard Agency has authority to draft certificates of registry. [49962]

Mr. Jamieson: The Maritime and Coastguard Agency's Registry of Shipping and Seamen at Cardiff is responsible for issuing all certificates of registry for UK vessels.

Ferry Services

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what representations he has made regarding the proposed EU directive on minimum conditions of service and wages for seafarers on intra-community ferry services. [50576]

Mr. Jamieson: We have made representations in support of the proposed EC directive on manning conditions for regular passenger and ferry services operating between member states.

Transport Links (Isle of Wight)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans his Department or its agencies have for the improvement of transport links between the Isle of Wight and the mainland of Great Britain. [51069]

Mr. Jamieson: Improvements to the transport links between the island and the mainland are primarily for the Isle of Wight council to consider as part of their local transport plan work and in liaison with mainland local authorities and private sector ferry and hovercraft operators. My Department has frequent discussions with the council about its local transport plan, including recent proposals to improve interchange facilities at Ryde.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what proposals he has received for improvements to the railway network of the Isle of Wight. [51068]

Mr. Jamieson: The Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) will make recommendations regarding the future of the rail network on the Isle of Wight in due course. The current franchise will expire in September 2003, and the SRA is currently working to define what it would expect a new franchise agreement to deliver.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps he is taking to encourage the provision of services facilitating the carriage of passengers or goods by rail from Scotland to the continent by way of the Channel Tunnel, pursuant to the provisions of the Transport Act 2000. [49960]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 15 April 2002, Official Report, column 741W.

Overturned Lorries

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many lorries overturned on British roads in each of the last five years; and how many overturned on the (a) A12, (b) A14, (c) A140 and (d) B1113 in each of the last five years. [50647]

Mr. Byers: The information is not available in the form requested.

New Bypasses

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the status of the 100 new bypasses outlined in the 10-year Transport Plan; and if he will list the (a) start and (b) completion date for each. [50042]

Mr. Jamieson: The 10-year plan provided funds for up to 30 trunk road bypasses and up to 70 bypasses on local roads over the 10-year plan period. 24 schemes which bypass settlements were in the Targeted Programme of Improvements (TPI) when the plan was published. Nine further such schemes have been added to the TPI since then and 17 more trunk road bypasses are subject to on-going multi-modal and other studies. Of these schemes 16 have started.

Of the 76 local road schemes approved (or approved subject to statutory procedures) through the local transport plans process, 33 are bypasses. Start and completion dates are subject to the satisfactory completion of statutory procedures which are currently being taken forward by the relevant local authorities.

Motorways

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if it is his policy to prevent new buildings being erected adjacent to motorways to ensure that the costs of future motorway widening are kept to a minimum. [49262]

Ms Keeble: Where the Secretary of State intends to build a new road, or improve an existing one, he has powers to require the relevant local planning authority to notify him of any planning application affecting the line of that road.

To avoid unnecessary blight, these powers are exercised on behalf of the Secretary of State by the Highways Agency usually when the preferred route is announced. He then has a further power to direct that planning permission shall not be granted if the proposed development would prejudice the road proposal.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what proposals he has to reduce congestion on the northbound carriageway of the M1 Motorway at its junction with the M25. [49940]

Mr. Jamieson: The London to South Midlands Multi Modal Study is examining current and future travel problems between London and the South Midlands, including congestion on the southern section of the M1 Motorway.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Congestion

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what is the average length of time per day, in hours per car, that cars are stationary on each road of the trunk road network; [50517]

(2) what the average road speed is on each trunk road in the UK in (a) the rush hour, (b) non rush hour periods, (c) over the course of a week, (d) over the course of a whole week day and (e) over the course of the weekend. [50516]

Mr. Byers: The information is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of the closure to through traffic of roads in London on congestion levels since 1992. [49021]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department does not collect such information centrally. Assessment of the traffic impacts of road closures is a matter for the relevant highway or police authorities in each particular case.

Environmental Targets

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what assessment has been made of progress towards the environmental targets set as part of the 10-year plan; and if he will place it in the Library; [50521]

(2) what environmental targets have been set as part of the 10-year transport plan. [50520]

Mr. Byers: The 10-Year Plan for transport will contribute to the achievement of a number of the Government's environmental targets. "Transport 2010: The 10-Year Plan", Annex 2, lists the principal targets in the plan. Copies are in the Libraries of the House. In July we intend to publish the first report on the 10-Year Plan for Transport. The report will allow us to update the plan and take account of new developments, as well as reporting on our progress to date.

Environmental Assessments

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessments he has made of the environmental effects of electricity generation for rail use; and what comparisons he has made with the use of diesel locomotives. [49706]

Mr. Byers: The SRA commissioned work on the railway's environmental impact during 2001. The results are sensitive to factors such as the mix of sources of electricity generation, the type of diesel traction, and operational factors such as speed or loading. Given the current mix of fossil fuel, nuclear and other generative sources, carbon dioxide emissions per passenger km attributed to electric long haul express trains are about half those of some comparable diesel trains currently in operation. It is likely that the on-going introduction of more modern diesel trains will reduce carbon dioxide emissions.

With the exception of sulphur oxides, most of rail's emissions of particulates, carbon monoxide, nitrogen oxides, and volatile organic compounds are from diesel trains. Again, the on-going introduction of more modern diesel locomotives offers benefits—for example, reducing the level of emissions per tonne-km of these pollutants.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the estimated environmental benefit is of increasing the number passenger kilometres of rail use by (a) 10 per cent., (b) 20 per cent., (c) 30 per cent., (d) 40 per cent., (e) 50 per cent. and (f) 60 per cent. by 2010–11. [49703]

Mr. Byers: The environmental effect will vary depending on how the increase in rail passenger kilometres is achieved. An increase in rail use will, in general, cause an increase in emissions from the rail sector. However, to the extent that this is achieved through modal shift from more environmentally damaging modes, and accompanied by greater use of more fuel efficient rolling stock, there will be offsetting benefits.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment has been made as to the danger resulting from particulate emissions from road vehicles. [49449]

Mr. Byers: The Government's Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants (COMEAP) is charged with advising the Government on the effects of pollutant types on human health. Their 'Statement on Long-Term Effects of Particles on Mortality' published in April 2001, gave a detailed assessment of the effects of particulate emissions on human health, including those from road transport. This can be seen at the Department of Health's website at www.doh.gov.uk/comeap/.

A summary of COMEAP's findings was also included in the Government's 'Air Quality Strategy Consultation Document on Proposals for Air Quality Objectives for Particles, Benzene, Carbon Monoxide and Polycyclic Aromatic Compounds', published in September 2001. Both reports were placed in the Libraries of the House on publication.

Vehicle Emissions

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the average level is of (a) carbon dioxide, (b) carbon monoxide, (c) benzene, (d) nitrogen oxide, (e) hydrocarbon, (f) lead, (g) sulphur dioxide and (h) particulate emissions, per mile, from (1) cars, (2) motorcycles, (3) vans and (4) HGVs travelling at (i) five mph, (ii) 10 mph, (iii) 20 mph, (iv) 30 mph, (v) 45 mph, (vi) 60 mph, (vii) 70 mph and (viii) 80 mph. [49456]

Mr. Byers: Detailed information on the emissions of key pollutants by various road vehicles running at different drive cycles is available from the National Atmospheric Emissions Inventory (NAEI) website at http://www.naei.org.uk/emissions/index.php.

Raw data for emissions of pollutant species at different speeds are also available on a separate website http://www.stanger.co.uk/airqual/modelhlp.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what the average level is of (a) carbon dioxide, (b) carbon monoxide, (c) benzene, (d) nitrogen oxide, (e) hydrocarbon, (f) lead,

(g) sulphur dioxide and (h) particulate emissions, per hour, from (1) cars, (2) motorcycles, (3) vans and (4) HGVs, at rest with the motor running; [49457]

(2) what the average level is of (a) carbon dioxide, (b) carbon monoxide, (c) benzene, (d) nitrogen oxide, (e) hydrocarbon, (f) lead, (g) sulphur dioxide and (h) particulate emissions resulting from vehicle use of the fuels (i) Cngas, (ii) Lpgas, (iii) biodiesels, (iv) LNG, (v) E10 bioethanol blends and (vi) E85 bioethanol blends; and if he will place in the Library details of the supporting scientific evidence. [49452]

Mr. Byers: The information is not available in the form requested.

Chiltern Franchise Renewal Agreement

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on clause 44 of the Chiltern Franchise Renewal Agreement. [47386]

Mr. Jamieson: Clause 44 of the Chiltern Franchise Renewal Agreement refers to miscellaneous provisions. The items covered are: variations in writing; waivers; disregard tolerances; change of framework; time limits; payments to be free and clear; partial invalidity; further assurance; rights of third parties; relationship with previous franchise agreement; and Authority's consent or approval.

Railway Use

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many railway journeys have a standard single fare of less than £10; and how many such journeys were undertaken in the last year for which information is available. [51067]

Mr. Jamieson: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) how many passengers per year travel between Waterloo and (a) Southampton Central station, (b) Lymington Pier station, (c) Portsmouth and Southsea station, (d) Portsmouth Harbour station and (e) stations on the Island line; [51066]

(2) what information he collects on the number of journeys between different railway stations. [51065]

Mr. Jamieson: The Strategic Rail Authority's (SRA's) annual report provides details of train miles, passenger miles, passenger journeys, route miles operated and the number of stations operated by each train operating company. The SRA's publication "National Rail Trends" provides quarterly figures on passenger kilometres and passenger journeys by ticket type and sector. Copies of the Annual report and "National Rail Trends" are placed in the Library of the House. Further information on particular journeys may be available from train operators.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what is the estimated reduction in passenger kilometres travelled by road resulting from increasing the number passenger kilometres of rail use by (a) 10 per cent., (b) 20 per cent., (c) 30 per cent., (d) 40 per cent., (e) 50 per cent. and (f) 60 per cent. [49704]

Mr. Byers: The reduction in road passenger kilometres resulting from an increase in the number of rail passenger kilometres will vary with the factors which have brought about the increase in rail passenger kilometres.

Rail Investment

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what private investment in railway infrastructure projects has been made since the start of the 10-year plan and into which projects; and what private investment is forecast for (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2004. [R] [49030]

Mr. Jamieson: Nearly £7 billion of private sector investment has already been committed for the 10-Year plan period covering renewals and enhancement investment, rolling-stock investment and the CTRL. Over £1 billion has come since the turn of the year alone, through the GNER extension, Chiltern refranchise and South Central rolling stock order. Private sector investment will continue to be levered in through the franchising process, special purpose vehicles and specific funding schemes such as the Rail Passenger Partnership fund.

Railways

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many railheads there are in the Greater London area. [49720]

Mr. Byers: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Telford (David Wright) on 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 663W.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on Network Rail's plans for developing services on the West Coast mainline. [49272]

Mr. Jamieson: This is a matter for Network Rail.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans exist for (a) electrification of lines from Hurst Green to Uckfield, (b) electrification of lines from Hastings to Ashford, (c) station improvements on the South Central line, (d) increased depot capacity, (e) platform lengthening, (f) the refurbishment of all power-door rolling stock on the South Central line, (g) enhancements at Gatwick airport for performance and capacity gains, (h) infrastructure work on the Brighton main line, (i) infrastructure facilities to allow faster trains to overtake slower stopping services on the Coastway route, (j) upgrade of the Arun valley line and (k) upgrade of the Sutton route, on the South Central route; and what is the expected (i) start date and (ii) completion date for such work. [49724]

Mr. Byers: The Heads of Terms for a new 20-year South Central franchise, signed by the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) and Govia on 24 October 2000, include these commitments. I expect the SRA to be able to sign a new franchise agreement with Govia later this year.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what representations he has received from (a) Govia, (b) the SRA, (c) Railtrack plc and its administrators and (d) Network Rail, with respect to the SPV being developed by Govia to upgrade infrastructure around London and the south coast. [49459]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 15 April 2002]: I have received no such representations.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what funds are available as part of the SRA plan for the development of additional railheads in the Greater London area; [49722]

(2) what assessment has been made as to the number of additional railheads required in the Greater London area in order to meet the growth targets for rail freight in the SRA plan and the 10-year transport plan. [49721]

Mr. Byers: The Strategic Rail Authority's Freight Strategy, published last year, explains in detail the authority's funding strategy and its assessment of the future need for rail freight interchanges.

A copy of the SRA's Freight Strategy is available in the Libraries of the House.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Second Railway package. [49815]

Mr. Jamieson: The Commission published its second railway package on 23 January. It includes formal proposals to complete liberalisation of rail freight markets, on safety, interoperability, the creation of a European Rail Agency and Community accession to the COTIF convention (the convention concerning international carriage by rail).

The Communication also outlines the Commission's strategy for the next five years, including consideration of proposals on the quality of rail freight services; overcoming the barriers to entry to, and providing high-quality infrastructure for, European rail freight; improving the environmental performance of rail freight; extending liberalisation of international passenger services; and improving passenger rights.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what discussions his Department had with Swiftrail between 7 October and 25 March. [49868]

Mr. Jamieson: It is not the normal practice of the Government to release details of meetings or discussions with private individuals or companies.

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the terms of reference are of the study commissioned by the Strategic Rail Authority into a high speed rail link from London to the north. [48747]

Mr. Jamieson: The SRA are conducting a feasibility study to determine the need for, and viability of a new north-south high speed passenger line. The study, which will report by the end of the year, will consider and compare a wide range of rail capacity enhancement options which may be required to satisfy the long term growth in demand for north-south passenger movements.

Rail Safety

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, ref. 45304, on rolling stock, if the Railway Safety Regulations 1999 prohibit steam locomotives from operating on the main network unless protected by TPWS or a similar system. [49821]

Mr. Jamieson: The Railway Safety Regulations 1999 prohibit steam trains from operating on the mainline network at speeds above 25 mph after the end of 2003, unless they are protected by a suitable train protection system. I understand from the Health and Safety Executive that a train protection and warning system (TPWS) suitable for use by steam trains is currently under development.

Railtrack

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list those organisations consulted by his Department prior to the agreement of a grant to Network Rail for bringing Railtrack out of administration early. [49791]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 15 April 2002]: Discussions took place with HM Treasury and the SRA before the Department indicated to Network Rail that it was willing to offer a grant payment to reflect the public benefits of an earlier exit from administration than would otherwise be the case.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what his policy is on the sale of railway assets by the company that succeeds Railtrack. [49840]

Mr. Jamieson: This a matter for the Rail Regulator, who set out his policy in chapter 12 of the October 2000 Periodic Review and condition 26 of Railtrack's network licence.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what provision exists in European law for the extension of state aid support to Railtrack in administration beyond 7 October; [49864]

(2) what factors underlay the comments made by his Department to Bloomberg on 22 March about state aid rules relating to Railtrack; [49866]

(3) what advice his Department has received about state aid rules relating to support for Railtrack beyond 7 October. [49865]

Mr. Jamieson: If the Network Rail bid were to be successful, any state aid provided to the company would be notified as permanent financial support that would bring the administration of Railtrack plc to a close. But if administration were to continue, state aid clearance would be sought as necessary as an extension of the existing clearance or as a separate notification if more appropriate.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 956W, if he has set aside contingency funds to cover an unexpectedly high periodic review. [49814]

Mr. Jamieson: The regulator has a statutory duty under section 4 of the Railways Act 1993, as amended by section 224 of the Transport Act 2000, to have regard to the SRA's budget when undertaking a review. The Government would consider any appropriate budgetary adjustments as and when any such review takes place.

Rail Regulator

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what his policy is on the future of the Rail Regulator. [49871]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the hon. Member for Maidenhead (Mrs. May) on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 100W.

Network Rail

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will place (a) written guarantees and (b) letters of comfort for financiers issued by his Department or the Strategic Rail Authority to Network Rail in the Library. [48180]

Mr. Jamieson: The normal notification procedures will be followed.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions in what timeframe the proposed standby loans from the SRA to Network Rail will be available to the new company. [48186]

Mr. Jamieson: This will depend on whether Network Rail's bid for Railtrack Group's shares is successful, when Railtrack plc comes out of administration and the terms of any loan when agreed.

London Underground PPP

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what estimate he has made of the total potential liabilities to the Exchequer which will arise from underwriting the contingent liabilities of the public-private partnerships for London Underground, as proposed in the letters of comfort and Minute from the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions to the partners in the PPP presented to Parliament on 21 March 2002; and how those liabilities will be treated and presented in the national accounts; [47961]

(2) if he will publish the calculations and underlying assumptions which he has made to calculate the potential liabilities to the Exchequer which will arise from underwriting the contingent liabilities of the public-private partnerships for London Underground, as proposed in the letters of comfort and Minute from the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions to the partners in the PPP presented to Parliament on 21 March 2002. [47960]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 10 April 2002]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's Minute to Parliament explained that the proposed comfort letters would cover a wide range of obligations on London Underground under the PPP contracts. In normal circumstances, the letter recognises the annual payments that will be made by London Underground to the infrastructure companies for the successful delivery of the required services. However, it also recognises that, in the unlikely event of an infrastructure company persistently and materially defaulting on its obligations in a way which leads to a termination of the PPP, then any funds put up by shareholders in the infrastructure company would be wholly at risk. In addition, an 'underpinned amount' would become payable to the lenders to the infrastructure company concerned. This is capped at the total value of the third party debt and has a floor of 95 per cent. of that amount.

The contingent liability will be to repay some or all of the debt that has already been invested in the improvement of the Tube. The potential size of the payment will therefore depend on the amount of debt that has been invested at the time the underpinned amount becomes payable.

The Department's Resource Accounts are drawn in accordance with the Treasury Resource Accounting Manual, which takes account of all financial reporting standards pronounced by the Accounting Standards Board. The contingent liability arising from any letters of comfort would therefore be recorded as a Note to the Department's Resource Accounts.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has now decided to extend the consultation period for the comfort letters to provide the customary notification period.

Rail Freight

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what is the estimated increase in use of diesel trains for rail freight use over the lifetime of the 10-year plan; [49712]

(2) what the estimated change is in use of electric trains for rail freight use over the lifetime of the 10-year plan; [49713]

(3) what volume of rail freight traffic is hauled by (a) electric and (b) diesel locomotives. [49711]

Mr. Byers: The Strategic Rail Authority does not keep data on the form of traction used by freight operating companies.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what is the estimated number of journeys made per month by road hauliers (a) to transfer freight onto the rail network and (b) to transfer freight from the rail network to its final destination in each of the last five years. [49716]

Mr. Byers: The information requested is not available on a monthly basis.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what compensation is being given to rail freight operators as a result of disruption to rail freight facilities through the Channel tunnel. [R] [49033]

Mr. Spellar: The companies affected should, in the first instance, be exploring the remedies available to them under their contracts and under EU law on the free movement of goods.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what estimate he has made of the impact on his ten-year transport plan of the rail freight disruption through the channel tunnel since November 2001; and if he will revise his estimated increase of rail freight. [R] [49026]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 957W.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to encourage the increase of freight by rail within the Greater London area. [50587]

Mr. Jamieson: The Strategic Rail Authority's (SRA's) Freight Strategy proposes a number of initiatives for increasing use of rail freight in Greater London. The SRA is also working with Transport for London and its London Sustainable Distribution Partnership to identify opportunities for sustainable urban distribution.

The SRA will be focusing on London when it produces its regional freight strategy for London and the south-east later this year.

Rail Freight

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the estimated environmental benefit is in increasing the volume of rail freight traffic by (a) 10 per cent., (b) 20 per cent., (c) 30 per cent., (d) 40 per cent., (e) 50 per cent. and (f) 60 per cent. by 2010–11. [49705]

Mr. Byers: The environmental effect will vary depending on how the increase in the volume of rail freight traffic is achieved. An increase in rail freight will, in general, cause an increase in emissions from the rail sector. However, to the extent that this is achieved through modal shift there will be some offsetting benefits, reducing the impact of transport on the environment.

SCOTLAND

Special Advisers

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions since 1 May 1997 (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity; and if she will list the total cost, including (i) travel, (ii) accommodation and (iii) subsistence allowance, for each occasion. [37984]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 27 February 2002]: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

Between 1 April 2000 and 31 March 2001 no special advisers in my Department travelled abroad in an official capacity. Information for the last financial year is not yet available.

Departmental Functions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the functions of her Department that have been (a) market tested and (b) outsourced in each of the last five years, specifying the (i) money saving and (ii) percentage saving in each case. [42993]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. The Department has not market tested or outsourced any function during this period.

Public-private Partnerships (Consultants)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the total external spending by her Department was on public-private partnership consultants in each of the last four years; how many full-time equivalent consultants were employed over this period; how many billed consultancy days there were per year; what the implied average cost of each PPP consultant was; how many consultancy firms were used by her Department over this period; and if she will make a statement. [43204]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. The Department has had no expenditure on public-private partnership consultants.

Professional Indemnity Insurance

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many contracts her Office has with consultants; what level of professional indemnity insurance is standard in contracts with small consultants; whether she can make exceptions to the level of professional indemnity insurance; and what recent discussions she has had with other Government Departments about the level of professional indemnity insurance. [50838]

Mrs. Liddell: My Department currently has no contracts with consultants. On discussions with other Departments, I refer to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 4 February 2002, Official Report, column 689W.

ADVOCATE-GENERAL

Departmental Functions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Advocate-General if she will list the functions of her Department that have been (a) market tested and (b) outsourced in each of the last five years, specifying the (i) money saving and (ii) percentage saving in each case. [42988]

The Advocate-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Scottish Executive

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Advocate-General on how many occasions she has been formally consulted by the Scottish Executive in each of the last two years. [45358]

The Advocate-General: I have not been formally consulted by the Scottish Executive because that is not my role. As Law Officer I give legal advice to the Government. The Scottish Executive receives legal advice from its Law Officers—the Lord Advocate and the Solicitor General for Scotland.

Leggatt Review

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Advocate-General what assessment she had made of the implications of the Leggatt Review for UK tribunals operating in Scotland. [45785]

The Advocate-General: The Government will publish their response to the Leggatt Report later in the year. There is ongoing work on this matter which will be subject to collective ministerial decision. As regards the implications for UK tribunals operating in Scotland, the Lord Chancellor's Department have been considering this together with the Scotland Office and the Scottish Executive and the results of this consideration will be included in the Government's response.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Ministerial Meetings

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the dates of the meetings and contacts that (a) special advisers and (b) Ministers in his Department have had with (i) Mr. Roy Parker, (ii) Sir Richard Needham and (iii) Mr. Shaun Harte since 2 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [34326]

Dr. John Reid: There is no record of any such meetings or contacts taking place with either Mr. Parker or Mr. Harte.

Sir Richard Needham is a frequent visitor to Northern Ireland and it is possible that he might have had some contact with my Department in the course of these visits. However, we have been unable to find any record of any formal meetings or contacts with Sir Richard at ministerial or special adviser level.

Mackie Ltd.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the dates and subjects of meetings that (a) special advisers and (b) Ministers in his Department have had since 2 May 1997 with representatives of Mackie Ltd.; and if he will make a statement. [34324]

Dr. John Reid: On 9 September 1998, the Minister of State dealing with economic development matters met Sul Sahota and Jim Gilmore, respectively chief executive and chairman of Mackie International Group plc. The Minister of State was accompanied by officials, but there was no special adviser present. The meeting was held at the request of Mr. Sahota to discuss financial difficulties that were being faced by Mackie International Group plc. We have no record of any other such meetings, although there was frequent contact with representatives of Mackie International Group at official level from May 1997 until the company collapsed.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment his Department has made of the reasons for the collapse of Mackie; and if he will make a statement. [34320]

Dr. John Reid: Mackie International Group plc following its failure to raise additional funding of £15 million to acquire another engineering group and restructure its balance sheet. The company had incurred substantial trading losses of over £25 million from 1996 to 1998 due to a decline in the textile machinery market and a lack of orders. These losses significantly weakened the company's liquidity.

Mr. Shaun Harte

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what role Mr. Shaun Harte played on behalf of the British Government; if he will place the terms of reference for his appointment in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [34321]

Dr. John Reid: There is no record of Mr. Harte having been employed by the British Government at any time.

Shaun Harte was employed by the Northern Ireland Development Agency, a statutory agency, from 1978 to 1979. During that period, he was nominated by the Northern Ireland Development Agency to serve as a non-executive member of the De Lorean Motors Ltd. board. We are informed by the devolved Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment that, given the passage of time since then, Mr. Harte's employment records are no longer available. He died in 1999.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the dates of the meetings and contacts that (a) special advisers and (b) Ministers in his Department have had with Mr. Shaun Harte since 2 May 1997; and if he will make a statement. [34325]

Dr. John Reid: There is no record of any such meetings or contacts having taken place.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place in the Library the information that his Department received from Mr. Roy Parker regarding Mr. Shaun Harte; and if he will make a statement. [34322]

Dr. John Reid: Roy Parker made a number of allegations against Shaun Harte and former directors of Mackie International Group. These were investigated by the Serious Fraud Office, who found no evidence of any impropriety which could lead them to take any action against the company, its former directors or its auditors.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Poverty

Mr. Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to consult on the measurement of child poverty. [51496]

Malcolm Wicks: Today I have published "Measuring Child Poverty: a consultation document". Copies have been placed in the Library.

This consultation document aims to promote debate on how best to build on the Government's existing indicators to measure child poverty in the long term. The paper describes and seeks views on a range of approaches proposed by academics and poverty experts from the UK and overseas.

Occupational Pensions

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many companies have been (a) investigated and (b) fined by the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority for breaking the rules governing stakeholder pensions. [46474]

Mr. McCartney: Stakeholder pension schemes started in April 2001. Up to 1 March 2002, the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority (Opra) has investigated 299 cases where an employer has failed to designate a stakeholder scheme and 144 cases of employers failing to pay contributions on time.

No companies have as yet been fined. Opra's focus is on getting employers to comply. Compliance has been achieved in 219 of the cases investigated. No breach was found to have occurred in 88 cases. The remainder are under continuing investigation.

Hospital Travel

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many grants were made to assist with the cost of travel to hospital, and of what mean and upper and lower decile values, in each (a) county, (b) health authority and (b) travel-to-work area in the last 12 months. [43243]

Malcolm Wicks: Patients admitted to hospital for NHS treatment can apply for help towards their travelling costs through the Hospital Travel Costs Scheme which is the responsibility of the Department of Health.

Hospital visitors can apply for a social fund community care grant to help with their travelling costs. Separate figures for the number and value of grants made in respect of these costs are not available.

Cold Weather Payments

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Social Fund cold weather payments have been made in each of the last 10 years; and what was value of these payments for (a) each Government Office region in England and (b) Wales. [39525]

Malcolm Wicks: The available information is in the table.

Cold weather payments: 1991–92 to 2000–01
England and Wales

	Number of payments made
1991–92	[1]3,800,000
1992–93	[1]2,500,000
1993–94	[1]2,100,000
1994–95	10,969
1995–96	6,537,914
1996–97	4,543,665
1997–98	42,615
1998–99	14,512
1999–2000	97,469
2000–01	2,720,117

Notes:
1. Information before 1994–95 is only available rounded to the nearest 100,000.
2. Information on the value of these payments is not available by Government Office Region.
Source:
Income Support and Jobseeker's Allowance Computer Systems.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what is being done to reduce the backlog of those people who received the incorrect winter fuel payment in (a) December 2001 and (b) January and February 2002; and if he will make a statement. [48550]

Mr. McCartney: When the Department becomes aware that a winter fuel payment has been issued at an incorrect amount, remedial action is taken as a soon as possible. There is no current backlog.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people received the incorrect winter fuel payment of £100 in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2000–01; and if he will make a statement. [48633]

Mr. McCartney: Anyone who received a £100 winter fuel payment was advised to contact the Department immediately if they thought that they should have been entitled to £200. Where it was found that the higher rate was appropriate, a top-up payment of £100 was made as soon as possible. In winter 2000–01, a total of 43,962 top-up payments were issued; so far, around 38,500 have been made for winter 2001–02.

Social Fund

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the (a) budgeted and (b) actual expenditure on (i) grants and (ii) loans from the Social Fund in the Leaside district in each year since 1990 indicating the number and amount of applications in each case for each year; and if he will make a statement. [25750]

Malcolm Wicks: Since April 1997 the gross discretionary Social Fund budget has increased by £153.1 million from £467.5 million to £620.6 million, an increase of almost 33 per cent. The Community Care Grant budget, previously frozen since 1994 at £97 million, has increased three times since 1998 to its current level in 2001–02 of £103 million. There is no cash limit on the amount a person may apply for initially.

The available information is in the tables.

Leaside benefits agency district: Social Fund grants

Financial year	Number of grant applications	Amount applied for[1] (£)	Annual budget (£)	Amount spent (£)
1995–96	7,508	7,288,166.25	630,008	629,426.43

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the budget was for the Social Fund in 2000–01; and what the final outturn of expenditure was. [47763]

Malcolm Wicks: Details of the Social Fund budget are in the 'Annual Report by the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on the Social Fund: 2000–01' and the outturn of expenditure is in the 'Social Fund Account: 2000–01'. Copies of both publications are available in the Library.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many applications for social fund payments have been subject to (a) an internal Benefits Agency review and (b) a review by the Independent Review Service in each year since 1992; what proportion of the reviews was successful; what the average waiting time was for each type of review; and if he will break down the applications by each type of social fund payment. [51044]

Malcolm Wicks: The available information is in the annual reports by the Secretary of State on the Social Fund and the Social Fund Commissioner's annual reports, copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has for improving the training of Benefits Agency staff who deal with social fund applicants. [51050]

Malcolm Wicks: All staff engaged in administering the social fund undertake comprehensive training. We regularly review this training and it was last updated in January of this year. A further review of training is due to take place at the end of the year.

In addition, guidance on the social fund is regularly updated and social fund awareness training is provided to other staff not directly involved in social fund administration.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the guidance issued to Social Fund staff on the administration of the Social Fund since 1997. [51048]

Malcolm Wicks: Prior to January 1999 guidance to staff administering the Social Fund was in nine separate guides:

The Social Fund Guide—Volumes 1 and 2;

The Social Fund System Reference Guide volumes 1 to 7;

The Social Fund Customer and Application Detail Guide;

The Social Fund Printed Output Guide;

The Social Fund Decision and Review Guide;

The Social Fund Breakdown of Recovery Guide;

The Social Fund Review Officers Guide;

The Social Fund Risk Management Guide; and

The Social Fund Funeral and Maternity Guide.

The guidance was restructured in January 1999. From that date, guidance on Social Fund legislation and the Secretary of State's directions for the non-regulated fund are set out in the new Social Fund Guide. Operations and procedural guidance is set out in the following volumes:

The Social Fund Budgeting Loan Guide;

The Social Fund Community Care Grant and Crisis Loan Guide;

The Social Fund Customer Guide;

The Social Fund Enquiry Guide;

The Social Fund Payment Guide;

The Social Fund Recovery Guide;

The Social Fund Regulated Fund Guide;

The Social Fund Review and Complaints Guide; and

The Social Fund Management Guide.

New guidance is circulated to staff in bulletins which are then incorporated into the main guides. 108 bulletins have been produced since January 1997.

Home Responsibilities Protection

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what representations he has received on the home responsibilities protection for foster carers. [48697]

Mr. McCartney: We regularly receive representations on all aspects of state retirement pension entitlement from a variety of organisations and interested individuals.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people employed by his Department under the New Deal for Young People in each of the last four years have subsequently (a) found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks and (b) returned to jobseeker's allowance or other benefits. [44902]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Information on the destinations of people entering the New Deal for Young People in all of the Department and its agencies is not held centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have been employed by his Department in each of the last three years under (a) the new deal for young people, (b) the new deal for the over 50s and (c) the new deal for lone parents; and at what cost, listed by category, to public funds. [44922]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001. Figures before that date are for the former Department of Social Security and the Employment Service.

Such information as is available is as follows.

Information follows on the number of people who have started on the new deal for young people in the Department and its agencies.

People who have started on the new deal for young people

	Number
1998–99	347
1999–2000	207
2000–01	158
2001–02[1]	22

[1] Up to October 2001

Note:

These figures show people who have joined the Department on the new deal fixed term appointment (NDFTA) programme. They include some people recruited from the new deal for lone parents who also join the NDFTA on entering the Department. These cannot be identified separately.

The Department has also taken on 2,875 new deal jobseekers under its normal recruitment processes. This figure includes people who have been on the new deal for young people and new deal 25 plus and cannot be broken down. People recruited by the Department under the new deal 50 plus cannot be identified separately from new deal 25 plus recruits.New deal recruits take up existing vacancies so extra costs are limited to the subsidy, where appropriate, and any additional training and development which may be needed. The cost of the latter cannot be readily identified. The subsidy cost is approximately £1.3 million.

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many individuals in (a) Alyn and Deeside and (b) Delyn have benefited from the New Deal. [48917]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The available information is in the table.

Back Pain

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what studies he is collating in conjunction with the Department of Health into (a) the incidence of low back pain among those of working age and (b) its implications for loss of working time and costs to the benefit system. [48823]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 17 April 2002]: The Department has played an important role in raising awareness of back pain disability as an issue; in promoting best clinical practice to health professionals; in supporting the development of guidelines for managers and employees; and in devising more objective and rigorous assessment methods.

A Chief Medical Adviser bulletin has recently been issued to all General Practitioners which specifically mentions the management of low back pain and the need for doctors to follow the Royal College of General Practitioners management guidelines when treating this condition. The Department continues to work very closely with external experts in the field of back pain in developing policies, guidance and procedures.

An innovative approach to work preparation—the "From Back Pain to Work" project—has recently been piloted in at the main hospitals in Salford and Bristol. This involved Jobcentre staff working in partnership with medical practitioners to reintegrate people with back pain into employment. The project used a programme of psychological, physical and occupational elements to help people back into work.

Results from the initial trials have been encouraging and there are now plans for further expansion and evaluation of the pilots in additional locations starting in late summer 2002.

Medical Assessment

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Department has agreed the extended contract for medical assessment services with SchlumbergerSema; and if modifications take into account the recommendations of the Public Accounts Committee's twenty seventh report (HC683). [48822]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 17 April 2002]: The extension of Contracts with SchlumbergerSema, announced on 30 November 2001 has not yet been confirmed. The decision to confirm or revoke the extension will be made by 31 May 2002.

Since the Public Accounts Committee hearing in March 2001 significant progress has been made towards addressing the Committee's concerns and improving the standard of services delivered by SchlumbergerSema.

Savings Credit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will estimate the proportion of expenditure on the savings credit element of the pension credit that will be attributable to (a) single male pensioners, (b) single female pensioners and (c) married pensioners; [47582]

(2) how many (a) single women, (b) single men and (c) pensioner couples are expected to be entitled to (i) the guarantee credit only, (ii) the savings credit only and (iii) both the guarantee credit and the savings credit in October 2003; [47583]

(3) what percentage of claimants entitled to the state pension credit are expected to be entitled to (a) housing benefit, (b) council tax benefit and (c) both housing and council tax benefit. [47584]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The information requested is in the tables.

Table 1: Proportion of total savings credit expenditure for which it is estimated that single men, single women and pensioner couples will be eligible

Housing benefit only	[2]—
Both housing benefit and council tax benefit	45

[1] Percentages are given to the nearest one per cent.

[2] Denotes a figure less than 0.5 per cent.

Notes:

1. Pension credit figures have been calculated using the Policy Simulation Model for Income Related Benefit. This models the benefits system and is based on data from the Family Resources Survey (FRS) for 1999–2000. The model has been uprated to model benefits in 2003–04.

2. The figures are based on entitlement to pension credit.

3. The figures do not include pensioners in residential care or nursing homes (RCNH). This is because the FRS does not contain information on RCNH cases. It is estimated that 200,000 pensioners in RCNH will be eligible for pension credit, and the majority of these will be in single pensioner benefit units. Therefore the total case load estimated to be entitled to pension credit in 2003–04 is around 4.1 million households.

Industrial Injuries

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for each of the last 10 years, how many new claims have been made for industrial injury benefit; how many claims have been paid; and what was the total cost of benefits paid (i) in cash terms and (ii) at December 2001 prices. [51039]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The available information is in the tables.

Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit (IIDB), Reduced Earnings Allowance (REA) and Retirement Allowance (RA) claims and awards

[1] Information on the number of new claims made prior to 1995–96 is not available because data are unreliable and inconsistent with the current method of data collection.

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest hundred.
2. Figures may be subject to a degree of sampling variation.
3. A customer may be in receipt of either IIDB or REA/RA or both.
4. Awards may be in respect of a claim made in an earlier period.

Crisis Loans

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what was the crisis loan expenditure on living expenses (alignment) in each year since 1996; and what such expenditure was expressed as a proportion of crisis loan expenditure. [51043]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is in the table.

Pension Schemes

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many non-compliant pension schemes have been named by the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority, broken down by the different types of offence. [50036]

Mr. McCartney: Under pensions legislation, the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority (Opra) may publish the details of particular cases as they think fit. Up until June 2001, Opra used its discretion to name six of the most serious cases. Since June 2001, it has decided to publish the names of all schemes against which a penalty has been imposed. 201 such schemes have been named to date.

The table shows a breakdown of offences.

Type of offence	Before June 2001	After June 2001
No auditor	3	32
No actuary	2	1
No statement of investment principles	2	0
Breach of disclosure regulations	3	0
No internal dispute resolution	2	2
No member nominated trustee or director	1	2
No or late payment schedule	—	3
Late accounts or auditors statement	—	125
Late contributions	—	118
No minimum funding requirement valuation	—	5

Note:

The data are shown by offence and not simply by named schemes. About 40 schemes have been named in connection with more than one offence—for example one scheme had committed five different offences. Consequently the total of the figures in the table is more than the total number of schemes that have been named.

Means-tested Benefits

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how the take-up of means-tested benefits has changed (a) since 1997, (b) since 1998, (c) since 1999 and (d) since 2000. [44245]

Malcolm Wicks: Estimates of take-up of income-related benefits for the financial years 1999–2000 and 1998–99 were published in "Income Related Benefits—Estimates of Take-Up 1999–2000". Estimates for 1997–98 were published in "Income Related Benefits—Estimates of Take-Up 1998–99". Copies of both publications are available in the Library.

Estimates are presented as percentage ranges within which departmental statisticians judge the level of true take-up to lie. The ranges for different years overlap; as a result it is not possible to make firm statements about changes in take-up rates between 1997–98 and 1999–2000.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of new housing benefit claims were determined within 14 days in each year since 1997. [41785]

Malcolm Wicks: Information is not available in the format requested.

Appeal Tribunals

Tony Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what policy changes have been made to the conduct of appeal tribunal hearings in the UK as a result of the Tribunal of Commissioners decision in CSDLA/1019/99. [49010]

Maria Eagle: The jurisdiction of appeal tribunals administered by the Appeals Service extends to Great Britain. Northern Ireland has a separate appeal tribunal jurisdiction. This decision is currently the subject of an appeal to the Court of Session. There have been no policy changes in the conduct of tribunal hearings.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Women (Public Appointments)

Linda Perham: To ask the Minister for Women what progress she has made towards increasing the number of women holding public appointments. [50530]

Ms Hewitt: The Government believe that women and men should hold an equal proportion of all public appointments. Public Bodies 2001, published on 14 February, shows that at 31 March 2001, women held 34 per cent. of all appointments to the boards of non-departmental public bodies, nationalised industries, public corporations and health bodies.

The document "Public Bodies: Opening Up Appointments" which was also published on 14 February sets out the targets that individual Government Departments are working towards for increasing the proportion of appointments held by women and the action plans to achieve these targets.

We want to encourage more women to apply for national public appointments. That is why my hon. Friend, Minister for Women in the Cabinet Office, is currently hosting a series of regional seminars to give information and offer practical support.

The seminars aim to inspire women through real-life case studies, provide information about what appointments are available and practical advice on how to go about getting a public appointment. The seminars hosted so far have been very successful, and the programme is being extended. Research will also be conducted into the usefulness of the seminars.

The Women's National Commission is offering women who attend the seminars the chance to join an e-network. This will offer notifications of specific opportunities, occasional workshops and mentors.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Commercial Materials (Schools)

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her policy is on the use of commercial materials in schools. [50597]

Mr. Timms: While we welcome business involvement in schools, decisions on the use of commercial materials in this sector are for the schools themselves to make. My Department issued guidelines entitled "Best Practice Principles: Commercial Activities in Schools" last year, to help schools make informed and sensible decisions about this. The guidelines make clear that schools should satisfy themselves that the educational benefits of the commercial activity outweigh the potential disbenefits; that it is free of incentives to children to engage in unhealthy, unsafe or unlawful activities; that explicit sales messages should be avoided wherever possible; and that the level of any branding should be appropriate to the activity.

External Contracts

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations have won new contracts with (a) her Department and (b) executive agencies in each of the past five years; [38753]

(2) which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations which previously held contracts with her Department (a) won new contracts at the culmination of the existing contracts and (b) won new contracts after a period of inactivity with her Department in each of the past five years; [38754]

(3) if she will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by her Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999, (c) May 1999 to April 2000, (d) May 2000 to April 2001 and (e) May 2001 to the latest date, indicating in each case the values of the contracts and the companies with which the contracts were placed. [38755]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 28 February 2002]: This information could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Faith Schools

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the denomination and type of publicly funded Christian schools which are neither Anglican or Catholic; and of these which are teaching creationism. [45762]

Mr. Timms: The available information is shown in the table. Information is not collected about whether or not a school is teaching creationism.

Foundation schools and voluntary schools only may have a religious character. They are designated as such by the Secretary of State under section 69 (3) of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 (SSFA). City technology colleges are independent schools and therefore cannot be designated as having a religious character.

Rural Schools

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of rural (a) primary and (b) secondary schools are located (i) within 5 km, (b) 5 to 10 km, (c) 10 to 15 km and (d) more than 15 km from the nearest settlement with under 3,000 people. [46457]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 15 April 2002]: I am not aware of any schools which are more than five km from the nearest house. It is likely, therefore, that all primary and secondary schools fall in category (i).

Social Care Students

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many social care places have been offered by higher education institutions since 1997. [47382]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The available information, which shows the total number of students on social work courses, is given in the table.

Students[1] on social work[2] courses at higher education institutions in the UK

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Postgraduate	7,300	8,000	7,400	7,500
Undergraduate	18,400	17,400	18,200	19,900
Total	25,800	25,400	25,500	27,400

[1] Census count as at December 1. Covers home and overseas students, on full-time and part-time courses. Numbers have been rounded to the nearest 100. Figures may not sum to totals because of rounding.
[2] Covers all programmes classed as social work by the Higher Education Statistics Agency, but not all of these will lead to a professional qualification.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students took up places in higher education institutions to study social care courses in (a) 2001, (b) 2000 and (c) 1999; and, of these, how many did not complete their courses. [47383]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The latest available information on the number of students entering social work courses is given in the table. Figures for 2001–02 will be available at the end of April 2002.

Entrants[1] to social work[2] courses in higher education institutions in the UK

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Postgraduate	4,000	3,500	3,700
Undergraduate	8,800	9,800	10,000
Total	12,900	13,400	13,700

[1] Covers home and overseas students, on full-time and part-time courses. Numbers have been rounded to the nearest 100. Figures may not sum to totals because of rounding.
[2] Covers all programmes classed as social work by the Higher Education Statistics Agency, but not all of these will lead to a professional qualification.

The available information on non-completion rates is contained in "Performance Indicators in Higher Education in the UK", published by the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE). The figures cover full-time first degree courses only, but they are not disaggregated by subject. The latest figures, covering all subjects, show that 17 per cent. of students who began their studies in UK higher education institutions in 1998–99 failed to complete their course.

School Spending

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the spending per head for each of the last five years by each local authority in England was on the education of school pupils (a) of primary school age, (b) of secondary school age and (c) in further education. [48607]

Mr. Timms: The information requested for (a) primary school age and (b) secondary school age pupils for 1995–96 to 1999–2000 for which expenditure data are currently available, for each local education authority in England has been placed in the Libraries. School pupils have only exceptionally undertaken education in further education colleges and information for the amount spent on school pupils in further education is not available centrally. Further education colleges are not maintained by local education authorities.

Higher Education

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will increase the level of support available for those students in higher education who are on longer courses and those with higher equipment costs with specific reference to medicine and dentistry. [49806]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 17 April 2002]: Student support is already available for the full length of a designated undergraduate course regardless of the duration of the course. From 2002–03, in recognition that they need to study on longer courses, medical and dental students in their fifth and any subsequent years will receive from the Department of Health about half their support as non-repayable grants (with the remainder as loans from the Student Loans Company). Students on longer courses, including medical and dental students, are eligible to apply to their universities for additional £500 Hardship Loans and grants from the Hardship Fund.

Learning Difficulties

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what response she has made to the recent SKILL research, "Enhancing Quality of Life", on the extent of post-school education provision for people with profound and complex learning difficulties. [48810]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 17 April 2002]: My Department continues to work with the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) and other relevant agencies to develop appropriate responses to the issues raised by SKILL's research report. These include delivering the enhanced role for the Connexions service in transition planning for young people with learning difficulties; the introduction of flexible and innovative approaches to post-school provision; improved inter-agency collaboration in the design, management, delivery and funding of services through, for example, LSC involvement on Learning Disability Partnership Boards; and the implementation of the standards of care for learners in residential provision introduced by the Care Standards Act.

Dyslexia

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what percentage of children aged 14 to 18 years are known to have dyslexia; [49025]

(2) what records are kept by local education authorities on dyslexia; [49031]

(3) what steps are taken by the Department to assess children for dyslexia; and at what ages the tests are carried out; [49032]

(4) what (a) research is being carried out into dyslexia and (b) grants are being given by the Government to research organisations with regard to dyslexia in 2002–03; [49035]

(5) how many children aged between 5 to 10 years in the United Kingdom have dyslexia and related learning problems. [49036]

Mr. Timms: As at January 2001, 1,002,000 pupils in English maintained primary schools and 668,000 pupils in English maintained secondary schools had special educational needs (SEN). Of these, 75,300 and 82,100 respectively had statements of SEN.

In addition, 91,000 pupils are in maintained special schools, 87,400 of whom have statements. Information by specific category of SEN is not currently collected but we have conducted a pilot exercise to explore the feasibility of further categorisation without overburdening schools and expect to phase in new arrangements by 2004.

When dealing with dyslexia and other SEN, schools and local education authorities in England are expected to follow the SEN Code of Practice, published last November. LEAs must also publish their general arrangements for identifying and supporting children with SEN. The precise details of arrangements made by LEAs and schools, including record keeping and assessment of needs within the context of the Code, are for local determination and this information is not collected centrally.

Working in conjunction with other interested parties, the Department is currently supporting the SPELL IT project, looking at the impact of structured intervention methods with seven year olds experiencing difficulty with reading. This project is due to report later this year. In 2002–04 we are also supporting research and development in relation to possible applications of jet pilot eye tracking technology as an aid to early identification of dyslexia.

Work-related Skills

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how the £1 million allocated for the embedding of work related skills more widely in higher education provision has been allocated; and how the allocation for (a) entrepreneurial, (b) generic and (c) vocational skills is progressing. [49851]

Margaret Hodge: The £1 million will be allocated through the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) between April 2002 and March 2004. We regard work related skills as embracing all three skill areas. This integrated approach to delivery means it is not possible to identify separate amounts for each area.

Autistic Spectrum Disorder

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what action her Department is taking to support children with autistic spectrum disorder at school; and if she will make a statement; [48883]

(2) what action her Department is taking to increase the number of specialist units able to support children with autistic spectrum disorder learning; and if she will make a statement. [48884]

Mr. Timms: Children with autistic spectrum disorder are benefiting from the improvements we are making to special educational needs (SEN) provision along with all other children with SEN. We have, for example, increased the supported expenditure available for SEN five-fold from £17 million in 1997–98 to £91 million in 2002–03. Funds can be used for a range of activities including the training for staff in SEN and improvements in speech and language therapy. We have introduced a revised SEN Code of Practice, effective from 1 January this year, which strengthens the guidance to schools, local education authorities and others and encourages earlier identification of needs and more effective intervention.

We have also supported a nationwide network of SEN Regional Partnerships to promote a multi-agency approach to aspects of SEN provision. The West Midlands SEN Regional Partnership has concentrated on provision for children with autistic spectrum disorder and produced recommendations. The work of the West Midlands Partnership will be reflected in guidance which the Department's Autism Working Group will be producing in the coming months. This will raise awareness of autistic spectrum disorders and help schools and local education authorities, in particular, to audit their provision.

The Autism Working Group's guidance will point to the benefits of children with the disorder being taught by those with an understanding of the condition in all settings. Decisions on opening specialist units for children with autistic spectrum disorders are taken at local, rather than national, level. The Department welcomes the opening of good quality, specialist provision in the maintained, non-maintained and independent sectors. The All Party Parliamentary Group on Autism's report "The Rising Challenge: A survey of Local Education Authorities on Educational Provision for pupils with Autistic Spectrum Disorders" (December 2001) noted that several authorities commented that they had set up autism specific units attached to moderate learning difficulty schools.

Pay Scales

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of 25 February 2002, Official Report, column 726W, if she will list the allowances which are available to (a) secondary school teachers and (b) further education lecturers. [50037]

Margaret Hodge: The following allowances are available to secondary school classroom teachers: management allowances; recruitment and retention allowances; special educational needs allowances and London allowances.

As independent corporations, further education colleges have their own staff pay and allowance policies. The allowances will, therefore, vary from college to college. The Department does not collect information on the allowances paid to staff by individual colleges.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many Private Finance Initiative projects have been subject to refinancing after the contracts have been signed; and what has been the financial effect in each case. [50283]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Within my Department no Private Finance Initiative projects have been subject to refinancing after the contracts have been signed.

Refurbishment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of 25 January 2002, Official Report, column 1131W, regarding the estimated cost of buildings refurbishment carried out by her Department, for what reason the cost in 2000–01 rose from the figures for 1998–99. [50336]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The estimated cost of buildings refurbishment carried out in my Department in 2000–01 rose from the figures for 1998–99 due to many one-off large-scale building projects needed across the estate. Examples include:

Update of mechanical ventilation at Mowden Hall, Darlington

Lift refurbishment at Caxton House, London

Replacement windows at Vincent House, Darlington

Major refurbishment of the lower ground floor forum at Sanctuary Buildings, London (mow recognised as a beacon with other Departments)

Refurbishment of Secretary of States Office at Sanctuary Buildings, London.

Teachers (Early Leavers)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what analysis has been completed on the destinations of teachers who leave the profession and retire early; and if she will place a copy in the Library. [50493]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 16 April 2002]: Numbers of teachers leaving the profession and retiring early are published in the 2001 volume of Teachers in England (including teachers pay for England and Wales), which has been placed in the Library.

The Department has commissioned Professor Alan Smithers and Dr. Pamela Robinson, from the University of Liverpool, Centre for Education and Employment Research to undertake research into the factors affecting teachers' decisions to leave the profession and the characteristics and destinations of those leaving. The research commenced in December 2001 and we expect the report to be published in March 2003.

Some information on the destinations of teachers appears in the Employers Organisation's annual survey of teacher resignations and recruitment.

Teacher Vacancies (Wandsworth)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teacher vacancies there are at schools in the London borough of Wandsworth in (a) junior and (b) secondary schools. [50543]

Mr. Timms: In January 2001 there were 22 vacant teacher posts in maintained nursery/primary schools and 25 vacant teacher posts maintained secondary schools in Wandsworth local education authority (2001 is the most recent available year).

The vacancies recorded had been advertised and were for full-time permanent appointments or full-time appointments of at least one term's duration, which existed at the survey date and which the local education authority/school intended to or had unsuccessfully attempted to fill.

Schools (East Riding)

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) applications and (b) available places for schools in the East Riding there (i) are in the current academic year and (ii) were in the past three academic years. [50599]

Mr. Timms: My Department does not hold this information. The East Riding of Yorkshire local education authority (LEA) has informed my officials that for the academic year 2002–03, 4,255 secondary school applications have been received for 4,136 places.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children living in the Kingston upon Hull local education authority area (a) are enrolled and (b) were enrolled in the past three academic years in East Riding schools. [50600]

Mr. Timms: My Department does not hold this information. The East Riding of Yorkshire local education authority has informed my officials that of the 51,080 pupils currently attending maintained schools in East Riding, 2,800 have Kingston upon Hull postcodes.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many applications there were for places in East Riding schools from households in the Kingston upon Hull local education authority for the (a) current academic year and (b) past three academic years; and how many of these applications were (i) accepted and (ii) rejected. [50601]

Mr. Timms: My Department does not hold this information.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many applications were made by households in the Kingston upon Hull local education authority area for school places in the East Riding of Yorkshire using a false address in the (a) current academic year and (b) previous three academic years. [50602]

Mr. Timms: My Department does not hold this information. The East Riding of Yorkshire local education authority (LEA) has informed my officials that they have no evidence that any applications for school places from September 2002 are from people using false addresses. A number of checks were made on addresses of applicants for September 2001 entry, and in all cases documentary evidence verifying the address used was provided.

School Funding

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the review of funding for schools. [51300]

Mr. Timms: We are currently working up proposals for a reformed system of school and LEA funding for introduction in 2003–04. We aim to create a simpler, more transparent and fairer formula that reflects fairly, on the basis of up-to-date evidence, the needs of authorities in different parts of the country. We expect to consult on proposals for the new system in the summer.

University Funding

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding has been given by the Government to each university in (a) Wales and (b) the North West in each year since 1997. [50640]

Margaret Hodge: The funding of higher education in Wales is the responsibility of the Welsh Assembly and the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales. The allocation of funding by the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) to universities in the North West of England in each year since 1997 is as follows:

Universities in NW England	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	[1]2002–03
Lancaster	25,191,849	29,612,073	30,993,227	31,810,325	32,085,258	34,912,405

Note:

These figures reflect recurrent and capital funding from DfES for allocation by the Higher Education Funding Council for England. It excludes any recurrent funding for teaching provided to these institutions by the Teacher Training Agency and other Government Departments, any research funding from the Research Councils and other Government Departments and regulated fee income paid by Government to institutions on behalf of students.

Learning Mentors

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many learning mentors there are in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in (i) the Buckingham constituency and (ii) England. [51389]

Mr. Timms: There are currently no Learning Mentors working in primary or secondary schools in the constituency of Buckingham. Our provision of Learning Mentors is focused on schools in deprived city authorities as part of the Excellence in Cities (EiC) programme, and upon schools in Excellence Clusters which cover smaller pockets of deprivation. There are currently 1,155 Learning Mentors in England's primary schools, and 2,265 in secondary schools.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Government Services

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what action he is taking to co-ordinate the use of post offices as one-stop shops for Government services. [49797]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 15 April 2002]: I have been asked to reply.

DTI funded a pilot of the concept of post offices as Government General Practitioners (GGP)—one-stop shops for information, advice and transactions with a range of government and other bodies—which began last July and finished on 1 March this year. Together with other key stakeholders, we are now evaluating the outcome of the pilot to determine whether a national GGP service would meet the needs of citizens and participating organisations and provide value for money. The Department is also working with Post\Office Ltd., the Office of the e-Envoy, other Government Departments and local government evaluating the design and costing of a potential national service. A decision on whether or not to proceed will be taken in the light of all the evidence.

Women's Employment, Enterprise and Training Unit

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the annual budget is of the Women's Employment, Enterprise and Training Unit; and how many people it employs. [43110]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

The Women's Employment, Enterprise and Training Unit is an organisation independent of government and therefore the information requested is not held by my Department.

Professional Indemnity Insurance

Mr. Gray: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many contracts the Cabinet Office has with consultants; what level of professional indemnity insurance is standard in contracts with small consultants; whether he can make exceptions to the level of professional indemnity insurance; and what recent discussions he has had with other Government Departments about the level of professional indemnity insurance. [50826]

Mr. Leslie: The Cabinet Office standard terms and conditions of contract require consultants to indemnify the Department against all costs or third party claims arising from the consultant's acts or omissions, and to maintain insurance cover of a minimum of £500,000 per claim against the risk of fire or other damage to property or personal injury. The standard terms apply to all consultants irrespective of size. However, individual cases the amount of insurance required may be increased or reduced according to the risk associated with the contracted work.

The number of contracts is not held centrally and is available only at disproportionate cost.

As with previous Administrations, it is not this Government's practice to provide details of discussions which form part of the process of policy development and analysis.

Public Appointments (Diversity)

Miss Begg: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what measures he plans to take to ensure that Government departments (a) undertake the duties outlined in the Cabinet Office Diversity in Public Appointments document and (b) report on the numbers of disabled people who hold public appointments in their departments. [48755]

Mr. Leslie: The publication "Public Bodies: Opening Up Public Appointments 2002–05" sets out for each Department specific targets for increasing diversity on the boards of the Public Bodies it sponsors and the action that will be taken to ensure that the targets are met and for monitoring progress. The numbers of appointments held by men, women, disabled people and people from ethnic minority backgrounds, will be reported in the annual Public Bodies data on the numbers of disabled appointees on bodies sponsored by some Departments was not available but, as noted in that publication, this information will be compiled for inclusion in Public Bodies 2002. Copies of Public Bodies: Opening up appointments 2002–05 and Public Bodies 2001 have been placed in the Libraries of the House and are available on-line at http://www.quango.gov.uk.

Departmental Report

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the 2002 Departmental report will be published. [49587]

Mr. Leslie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Member for Oxford, East (Mr. Smith), on 15 April 2002, Official Report, column 774W.

Union Duties

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 26 February 2002, Official Report, column 1265W, regarding paid leave for staff to undertake union duties, if the two officers of Cabinet Office agencies who spent part of their time undertaking union duties on an ad hoc basis are required to obtain in advance line management approval for such time off. [50343]

Mr. Leslie: Yes.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 26 February 2002, Official Report, column 1265W, regarding paid leave for staff to undertake union duties, how many days have been spent on union duties by the two officers of Cabinet Office agencies who undertake union duties on an ad hoc basis. [50414]

Mr. Leslie: The information requested is as follows.

1999–2000: 70 days

2000–01: 63 days

2001–02: 54 days.

Overtime

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his policy is on overtime payments for staff in his Department. [49132]

Mr. Leslie: Cabinet Office policy on overtime working is that where possible it should be kept to a minimum and used at times of exceptional pressure once alternatives have been explored. Where overtime is necessary managers are required to:

use volunteers;

give staff 48 hours notice whenever the requirement cannot be met by volunteers; avoid regular calls to fulfil the requirement on particular blocks of staff; avoid weekends.

Cabinet Office rules on overtime working which complies fully with Section 9 of the Civil Service Management Code.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

EMNVISAT Project

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the ENVISAT project. [50853]

Ms Hewitt: ENVISAT, Europe's latest Earth Observation satellite, was successfully launched on 1 March. The £1.4 billion satellite will provide vital information about global warming, climate change and the depletion of the ozone layer. ENVISAT is the most complex Earth Observation satellite ever built, carrying 10 instruments which are able to detect environmental change to an unprecedented accuracy.

The UK Government has invested £300 million in the project, which has been steered by the British National Space Centre (BNSC) in partnership with the European Space Agency (ESA) and UK industry. 12 UK firms have played a vital part in the development and construction of ENVISAT, with many more standing to benefit from exploitation of ENVISAT's data in downstream sectors.

ENVISAT has reached its correct orbit and is delivering valuable data back to Earth for use by environmental researchers. Such data will provide a health check of our planet. It will monitor changes in the oceans, ice caps, vegetation and our atmosphere and its findings will underpin the future development of environmental policy.

Spacecraft

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the spacecraft which the UK is (a) operating and (b) funding; who owns the spacecraft; and what the purpose of each mission is. [50854]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow, Baillieston (Mr. Wray) on 11 March 2002, Official Report, columns 675–677W.

Accounting Industry

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to review the competition implications of the arrangement between Deloitte & Touche and Andersens UK in the accounting industry; if she intends to make a reference to the competition authorities; and if she will make a statement. [50499]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 17 April 2002]: Any proposed merger which meets the qualifying threshold would be considered by the European Commission under the European Community Merger Regulation. The parties concerned have not yet made a formal notification to the Commission.

As Ministers have a role in the regulatory process for considering mergers it is not appropriate to make a statement about the proposed merger.

General Agreement on Trade in Services

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what services the UK Government (a) unilaterally and (b) as part of the European Union will be requesting be liberalised under World Trade Organisation's general agreement on trade in services to be specified by 30 June. [50776]

Ms Hewitt: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Cheltenham (Mr. Jones) on 10 April 2002, Official Report, columns 368–69W.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if she will make a statement on how the liberalisation of social services under the World Trade Organisation's general agreement on trade in services will affect women as (a) citizens and (b) workers; [50811]

(2) what impact assessment has been made of how the liberalisation of social services under the World Trade Organisation's general agreement on trade in services to be specified by 30 June will affect women as (a) citizens and (b) workers. [50812]

Ms Hewitt: No country has so far tabled a negotiating proposal or request calling for liberalisation of social services in the current World Trade Organisation negotiations on trade in services. Unless any do so, the impact will be nil.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what commitments the Government have made under the World Trade Organisation's general agreement on trade in services regarding the liberalisation of public services. [50810]

Ms Hewitt: Public services—ie services supplied in the exercise of governmental authority—are in principle excluded from the scope of the GATS. The Government have therefore made no commitments under the GATS under which public services would be liberalised, and has said previously that it will make no commitments in the current World Trade Organisation negotiations that could call into question the supply of public services through for example the NHS or state educations system.

For the sake of clarity, the United Kingdom already allows the establishment of private educational establishments, hospital services and convalescent, rest and old people's homes, for example, and made commitments during the Uruguay Round confirming this market access.

Research Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer of 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 86W, on the Research Council, what the Government's policy was on the Commission's proposal to amend the negotiating mandate on the legal aspects of a possible International Thermonuclear Experimental Reactor, in order to include possible site offers for ITER in Europe and cost sharing provisions. [50995]

Ms Hewitt: The Government support the Commission's proposal which is still under discussion by the council's research group.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer of 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 86W, on the Research Council, what the Government's policy was on the Commission's proposal for a negotiating mandate to discuss a framework agreement with the European Space Agency. [50996]

Ms Hewitt: The UK has championed the development of closer relations between the European Community and the European Space Agency. The Government encourage the development of a framework agreement which would ensure increasing complementarity between the policies and activities of these two bodies, which have a substantial overlap in their membership.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer of 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 86W, on the Research Council, what the Government's policy was on the rules of participation and the specific programmes for the Sixth EU Research Framework Programme 2002–06 and Sixth EURATOM Framework Programme 2002–06. [50997]

Ms Hewitt: The Government broadly supported the proposal for the EC 2002–06 Rules of Participation and Dissemination (COM (2001) 822 final) but wanted to see a number of amendments to underpin the principles of scientific excellence, independent peer review and transparency as well as public accountability and simplification of administrative procedures. The Government also wanted to ensure that the rules would encourage diverse participation, including by small and medium-sized enterprises and the candidate countries and enable member states to have access to policy related research results. In relation to the Euratom Programme rules (COM (2001) 0725 final), debate at Council focused on the Community financial contribution to projects where the UK supported the Commission's proposal for 17.5 per cent. basic support to national programmes.

In relation to the Specific Programmes for the Sixth EU Research Framework Programme (COM 2002 (43) final), discussion centred on comitology. The Government's policy was to argue for a wider remit for the programme committees than that envisaged in the proposals, in order to ensure that member states continue to play an appropriate role in programme management.

Export Credit Bill

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she has received about the impact of the Export Credit Bill on academic and scientific research; and if she will make a statement. [45867]

Ms Hewitt: The Government have consulted extensively, including with the academic community, throughout the development of the Export Control Bill, to which it is assumed this question is intended to refer. In the course of these consultations we received a number of representations about the potential impact of proposal on academic and scientific research. More recently the Government have received a number of further representations from parliamentarians, interested individuals and representative organisations on this issue. In response to concerns raised, the Government have tabled an amendment to the Export Control Bill to be moved at Report in another place. The amendment provides on the face of the Bill for protection of the principle of freedom to publish and to communicate information that has already been published.

Assisted Areas

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which areas qualified for consideration for the assisted areas map by virtue of being (a) substantially below the national average for employment and (b) substantially above the national average for (i) residence-based unemployment, (ii) work force-based unemployment and (iii) manufacturing employment share. [51005]

Alan Johnson: I will write to the hon. Member with the information requested and place a copy in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which areas warranted further consideration in the formulation of the assisted areas map by virtue of their divergence from the national average in the prescribed indicators; if he will publish the rates averaged over the three years used for the purpose of formulating the assisted areas map, for each area of (i) employment, (ii) residence-based unemployment, (iii) workforce-based unemployment and (iv) manufacturing employment share; and what the standard deviation was for each for the purpose of the European Commission's regional aid guidelines, indicating those areas not chosen for inclusion in the assisted areas map. [51006]

Alan Johnson: I will write to the hon. Member with the information requested and place a copy in the Libraries of the House.

WTO Agreement on Agriculture

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her policy is on the proposal by developing countries to incorporate a development box in the WTO agreement on agriculture. [50578]

Ms Hewitt: The UK is committed to securing a WTO agreement on agriculture which provides real and substantial benefits for developing countries. The proposal to consolidate such benefits in a special development box has attractions and has helped focus attention on developing country needs. I welcome those parts of the proposal which seek to integrate developing countries into world trade on terms that recognise their needs without constructing new barriers to trade.

Climate Change

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the external organisations set up by her as part of the Government's strategy to combat climate change indicating (a) their remits and (b) their sources of funding. [50447]

Mr. Wilson: The Department has not itself established any external organisations as part of the Government's climate change programme. However, it has worked with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, which leads on climate change policy on several initiatives. The Department has helped with the establishment of the Carbon Trust whose remit is to help the UK move towards a low carbon economy, by encouraging the development and uptake of low carbon technologies and administering energy support and advice for business. The Carbon Trust is funded from receipts from the climate change levy and also receives support from DEFRA, the Scottish Executive, the Welsh Assembly and the Northern Ireland Executive.

The Department also assists the Tyndall Centre at the university of East Anglia which supports the work in nine research institutions to promote understanding of the causes and consequences of climate change. The Tyndall Centre is funded by the National Environment Research Council (NERC), Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC), the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC); and the Department contributes £210,000 over three years for the development of assistance to business on climate change causes and its consequences.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate her Department has made of the cost in (a) discounted terms and (b) undiscounted terms of making radioactive waste safe, prior to a long-term solution being found at the BNFL owned Sellafield site and other BNFL owned sites. [50430]

Mr. Wilson: The BNFL annual report and accounts for the year ended 31 March 2001 estimated the company's total future cash expenditure for waste management as £5.9 billion and £12 billion in discounted and undiscounted terms respectively.

The corresponding figures in the annual report and accounts for the year just ended are likely to be higher reflecting the revision of BNFL's historic waste management strategy which was outlined in my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State's statement to the House on 28 November 2001.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much direct Government funding has been made available to the renewables sector in the last financial year and the following year for (a) research and development, (b) capital investment and (c) revenue support; and to which projects it will be allocated. [50434]

Mr. Wilson: The Renewables Obligation, the Government's main policy instrument for the promotion of renewable energy, came into effect from 1 April, and is financed through payments by electricity consumers. The earlier Non Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO) was also financed in this way. Hence most public support for renewable energy is not direct Government funding.

Estimated maximum payments available under the Renewables Obligation for England and Wales and the corresponding Renewables Obligation (Scotland) for 2002–03 are £282 million. The level of the obligation is set to rise each year to 2010–11, when maximum payments for the year are estimated to reach £1 billion. Actual payments, and the projects that will benefit, will depend on the capacity coming forward. Estimated payments from NFFO and comparable arrangements in Scotland in 2001–02 were £85.5 million. Payments under these arrangements are expected to decline substantially from 2002–03 onwards, following the introduction of the Renewables Obligation.

The Government directly fund research and development in renewable energy through the DTI's Sustainable Energy Programme and through the Research Councils.

£ million

	2001–02[1]	2002–03[2]
DTI Sustainable Energy Programme	13.0	19.0
Research Councils	5.0	5.6

[1] Revised estimated spend

[2] Provision

Research projects are currently funded in the following programme areas: biomass; waste; embedded generation; fuel cells; solar; wind; hydro; wave; tidal; technology transfer and exports. I am placing in the Libraries of the House a list of research projects funded under the DTI's programme in 2001–02. Details of relevant current research projects funded by the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC) can be found on the EPSRC website http://www.epsrc.ac.uk/epsrcgrants/portfolio.asp by selecting 'Research Topics' and then 'Electricity Generation—Renewable and Clean'.

In addition to the research programmes described, the DTI has been assigned a further £5 million over three years for wave and tidal demonstration projects and a further £4 million for net metering storage and control demonstration projects.

The Government are also setting up capital grants programmes in the following areas with the following funding over three years:

£74 million for offshore wind (including £10 million from the New Opportunities Fund)

£69 million for bioenergy (including £36 million from the New Opportunities Fund and £3 million for biomass heating)

£20 million for photovoltaics (PV).

In addition, an element of the £10 million Community and Household Projects programme is expected to finance capital costs of these projects. Actual spend in each financial year, and the projects that will be supported, will depend on the applications coming forward.

As has been indicated, revenue support for the renewables sector is provided through the Renewables Obligation rather than through direct Government funding. The sector also benefits from exemption of renewable electricity from the Climate Change Levy.

Chemical Industry

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on (a) the progress of the chemical industry's learning and skills strategy, (b) the programme to promote the spread of best practice, (c) support for chemical industry cluster initiatives and (d) the programme to support chemicals inward investment from north America. [49876]

Ms Hewitt: My noble Friend the Minister for Science announced on 24 January the formation of a Chemicals Innovation and Growth Team (CIGT) as a partnership between Government, the industry, and other stakeholders to stimulate the growth and sustainability of a competitive chemicals industry in the UK.

Among other things, the CIGT has been charged with identifying ways of improving competencies and skills in the industry. This will work alongside the new Sector Skills Council for chemicals manufacturing, oil and gas extraction and petroleum refining, in which the Government will be investing £2 million over the next two years.

The Process Industries Centre for Manufacturing Excellence—a Government-industry partnership—is the primary body charged with improving manufacturing performance and productivity in the UK chemicals industry through the spread of best practice. To date this initiative has proved extremely successful. Many of the companies who have so far been through this process have seen improvements measured in hundreds of thousands of pounds.

The chemicals industry has a number of natural clusters throughout the UK. In these primary areas, regional chemical initiatives have been formed to help improve networking between companies and to address collectively those issues which impact upon the competitiveness of the industry at a local or regional level. They are industry-led but have the active support and involvement of the DTI, the RDAs in those regions, and of Scottish Enterprise in Scotland. These cluster initiatives have proved of great value in helping to address the needs of the industry.

A chemicals industry specialist was appointed in January 2001 to work with Invest UK to promote UK chemicals investment opportunities to companies in north America. He is working with Scottish Enterprise, the RDAs and the regional chemical initiatives on opportunities for new investment.

Miners' Compensation

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many claimants have received a final settlement through each of the top 10 claims handlers for (a) chronic bronchitis and emphysema and (b) vibration white finger of former coalminers. [50813]

Mr. Wilson: Nationally for chronic bronchitis and emphysema, the Department has made almost 68,500 individual payments and settled 24,000 claims, amounting to £293.6 million. In relation to vibration white finger (VWF), the Department has made 84,000 individual payments and settled over 38,000 claims, worth £512.1 million.

In the time given, the Department cannot provide data broken down by claims handlers.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been paid to date to each of the top 10 claims handlers involved in the compensation claims for (a) chronic bronchitis and emphysema and (b) vibration white finger of former coalminers. [50526]

Mr. Wilson: (a) The amount paid to each of the top 10 claims handlers involved in the compensation claims for chronic bronchitis and emphysema is as follows:

Top 10 claims handlers	Costs paid (£ million)
Thompsons	11.3
Hugh James Ford Simey	8.9
UDM	3.1
Raleys	4.8
Mark Gilbert Morse	0.8
Browell Smith & Co.	3.8
Graysons	2.2
Watson Burton	1.6
Irwin Mitchells	2.5
Randell Saunders	0.5
Total	39.5

(b) The amount paid to each of the top 10 claims handlers involved in the compensation claims for vibration white finger is as follows:

Top 10 claims handlers	Costs paid (£ million)

Post Office

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice will be given to customers of post offices which are expected to be closed in the restructuring of Post Office Counters networks in respect of where they will be able to receive post office counter services; and if she will make a statement. [48796]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 15 April 2002]: The Post Offices objective in restructuring the urban network is to retain and expand its customer base at modernised, improved facilities. Sub-postmasters leaving the network will be encouraged to help achieve this, for example, assisting customers by advising them of the nearest post office and introducing them to services available at the new outlet. Consultation on closure will involve the community, local stakeholders, sub-postmasters and Postwatch.

Under the Code of Practice, Post Office Ltd. are required to consult Postwatch on individual changes and plan to brief them on the process they envisage for reaching decisions.

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many agency workers have been involved in delivering mail for the Royal Mail in the past year; [49946]

(2) how many cases of missing contents from post were recorded by the Royal Mail in the last year; of these, how many were investigated; and how many prosecutions were instigated. [49944]

Mr. Alexander: These are matters that falls within the day to day responsibility of Consignia and I have therefore asked the chief executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information she has received from Consignia on the number of proposed closures of post offices in Norfolk. [48990]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 16 April 2002]: This is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. The programme of urban restructuring has not yet begun.

Wainstones Plc

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to what extent Wainstones plc may transfer to a third party the licence to build a gas-fuelled power station at Langage, Plympton. [50987]

Mr. Wilson: Like any planning permission, the consent goes with the land and as such can be transferred.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the licence granted to Wainstones plc to build a gas-fuelled power station at Langage contained a condition as to timescale for commencement of the project. [50986]

Mr. Wilson: The commencement of the development must be before the expiry of five years from the grant of consent.

Corus

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on Government actions to encourage business and industry to develop in the areas affected by Corus Steel plant closures. [50637]

Alan Johnson: Measures to help the Tees Valley and Scunthorpe areas, including regeneration and improvements to infrastructure, training and advice for people leaving Corus and help in the establishment of small firms were announced on 3 May 2001 as part of a £135 million package responding to closures in England and Wales. These are now being implemented. Measures in Wales are matters for the Assembly.

My Department is also in contact with the South Yorkshire Task Force, and will discuss their report with them once it has been finalised.

Lakshmi Mittal

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether she sought advice from HM ambassadors to (a) the Irish Republic and (b) Kazakhstan in connection with the takeover of Sidex by LNM/Ispat. [50454]

Ms Hewitt: No I did not seek advice from either ambassador.

Small Businesses

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions she has had with the Small Business Service about the regulatory burdens on small companies. [49477]

Nigel Griffiths: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has appointed me as the Minister for Small Business. Since January I have had three meetings with Small Business Service (SBS) officials specifically about regulatory burdens and had a number of other meetings where regulating issues have been discussed.

Broadband

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what policy initiatives are being considered in response to the recommendations of the Broadband Stakeholder Group. [49858]

Mr. Alexander: The Government response to the Broadband Stakeholder Group's report was set out in the UK Online annual report 2001, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment she has made of the cost-effectiveness of the Public Telecommunication System Designation (Carrier 1 UK Ltd.) Order; and if she will make a statement; [50186]

Ms Hewitt: The Department makes an assessment of the costs and benefits of regulations when developing regulatory proposals. Where a regulatory proposal has an impact, in terms of costs, benefits and risks that affect businesses, charities and the voluntary sector, a regulatory impact assessment (RIA) is undertaken to inform policy development. Final RIAs are placed in the Libraries of the House when the regulation is presented to Parliament, but are not required for regulations where it has been assessed that no or negligible costs or savings would be imposed or those that increase statutory fees via a predetermined formula. The Small Business Service are consulted on RIAs to ensure that the impact on small firms is not disproportionate.

Fair Trading Act

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, (1) pursuant to her answer of 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 696W, if she will place in the Library details of her Department's strategy and procedures for enforcing the regulatory controls under Part XI of the Fair Trading Act 1973 and its amendments; and if she will make a statement; [50467]

(2) pursuant to her answer of 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 695W, if she will place in the Library details of her Department's strategy and procedures for handling inquiries from the public on whether particular trading schemes are subject to the provisions of Part XI of the Fair Trading Act 1973 and its amendments; and if she will make a statement; [50466]

(3) pursuant to her answer of 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 695W, on representations to her Department for amendments to the definition of single tier established in the Fair Trading Act 1973, if trading schemes with more than one UK master franchise that do not comply with the regulatory controls are classified as illegitimate trading schemes; and if she will make a statement; [50464]

(4) pursuant to her answer of 25 March, Official Report, column 695W, if she will place in the Library details of her Department's strategy and procedures for protecting small participants who do not opt to register for VAT, thus ensuring their continued protection via the regulatory controls under Part XI of the Fair Trading Act 1973 and its amendments; and if she will make a statement; [50468]

(5) pursuant to her answer of 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 695W, on representations to her Department for amendments to the definition of single tier established in the Fair Trading Act 1973, if she will place in the Library the description of Government policy on multi-level trading provided to those parts of the franchise industry lobbying for an additional exemption in S.I. 1997 No. 1887. [50465]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 16 April 2002]: Where a breach of legislation over which the Department has oversight is identified, and that breach is addressed by way of criminal sanction, the Department will consider bringing a prosecution, taking account of the evidential and public interest tests set out in the Code of Crown Prosecutors.

The Department is unable to give legal advice about individual schemes in response to inquires from the public. The circumstances of individual schemes will vary. Individuals are advised that they should seek independent and impartial business and legal advice on a scheme prior to signing any agreement.

All trading schemes within the scope of current legislation are expected to comply with the regulatory controls. Whether and how the regulatory controls apply will depend on the operation of the individual scheme. In particular, in order to establish whether a scheme is a "single-tier" scheme for the purpose of the legislation, a detailed assessment is required of the characteristics of the scheme in question.

The effect of the legislation is that, if all participants in a scheme are not making taxable supplies in the UK and not registered for VAT, the regulatory controls would apply. The issue of when to register for VAT purposes is a matter to be determined by reference to revenue legislation.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost in 2001–02 was of the pay increase to staff in her Department, agencies and the non-departmental public bodies for which she is responsible; and what the cost of the forthcoming increase will be in 2002–03. [50417]

Ms Hewitt: The costs of pay awards for the 2001–02 pay years for each of the DTI organisations are estimated in the table. It is not possible to cost the awards more precisely since the increases in organisational paybill are also affected during the period over which they are paid by other factors including promotions and other staff moves.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what the cost was to her Department of answering written parliamentary questions in 2001; and how that cost was calculated; [49113]

(2) how many staff were involved in each of the last three years in preparing draft answers to written parliamentary questions. [49155]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given yesterday by my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House, Official Report, column 929W.

Departmental Report

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the 2002 departmental report will be published. [49595]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 15 April 2002, Official Report, column 774W.

Part-time Employees

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many and what proportion of the staff of her Department are part-time employees. [47169]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 49W by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Race Equality

Mr. Bryant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will bring forward the Commission for Racial Equality's draft statutory code of practice on the duty to promote race equality. [51717]

Angela Eagle: Yesterday I laid before Parliament the Commission for Racial Equality's draft statutory code of practice on the duty to promote race equality.

The code of practice will offer practical guidance to public authorities on how to meet their duty to promote race equality. Once the code of practice is brought into effect it will be admissible in evidence in any legal action, and a court or tribunal should take relevant provisions of the code into account.

United Nations Convention on the Child

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the reasons why he rejected the conclusions set out in the legal opinion obtained by Save the Children UK on the United Kingdom's Immigration Reservation to the United Nations Convention on the Child. [48659]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 17 April 2002]: We have carefully reviewed the reservation in the light of the legal opinion submitted by Save the Children and other recent requests that it should be withdrawn. We have taken legal advice which strongly suggests that the reservation remains necessary in order to maintain an effective immigration control. We consider that, not withstanding the reservation, there are sufficient checks and balances in place to ensure that children are protected.

The United Kingdom always takes its international obligations seriously. We are obliged, under the 1951 United Nations Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees, to consider all applications for asylum made in the United Kingdom. Each application is considered on its individual merits. While awaiting a decision on their claims, all asylum seeking children have access to primary health care and education facilities and there are currently no outstanding cases where the United Nations Convention on Rights of the Child (UNCRC) has been cited by children seeking asylum here. The majority of asylum seeking children are, of course, accompanied by their families.

We fully appreciate the potential vulnerability of unaccompanied children and the distress they may experience while awaiting a decision on their asylum claims. The need for anxious scrutiny is stressed in training and guidance to all staff involved in the asylum decision making process. Because of the particular sensitivities surrounding applications from unaccompanied children, their cases are given priority and dealt with by specially trained caseworkers, who are provided with comprehensive instructions setting out areas to consider when dealing with such applications. These instructions are available on the Internet and are reviewed on a regular basis.

All unaccompanied minors who apply for asylum are referred to the Refugee Council's Panel of Advisers, a non-statutory body which acts as adviser to the child in his/her dealings with the Home Office and other agencies for the duration of the asylum claim. Unaccompanied minors are not entitled to benefits but are supported under the Children Act 1989 (maintenance and accommodation being provided by social services departments of the local authorities). It has been agreed that no unaccompanied child will be removed from the United Kingdom unless we are satisfied that adequate reception and care arrangements are in place in the country to which he/she is to be removed. If care arrangements cannot be established, the child is normally allowed to remain here exceptionally, outside the Immigration Rules, on compassionate grounds.

For these reasons, we do not accept the recommendation made in the legal opinion forwarded by Save the Children.

Golden Jubilee

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations have been made by his Department to the Department for Culture, Media and Sport in respect of the eligibility of prison officers for a Golden Jubilee Medal. [44419]

Beverley Hughes: The question of the Prison Service and other groups being included in eligibility for the Golden Jubilee Medal was considered by the Ministerial Group. It was decided that eligibility should be restricted to members of the armed forces and the emergency services. However, I am determined to ensure that improvements are made to the existing recognition mechanisms. Later this year both a Prison Service long service award and a prison officer of the year award will be introduced. In addition, consideration is being given to the proposal for a Queen's prison service medal.

MI5 Files

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many MI5 files have been destroyed in each year from 1997 to date; and if all those destroyed were classified as red. [49283]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 15 April 2002]: Information is not held by year in the way requested, and could only be retrieved at disproportionate cost. Approximately, 85,000 files have been destroyed since 1997.

All files destroyed were classified red.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria have been applied to decide which M15 files should be subject to destruction; and what is the minimum period a file is no longer classified as (a) green and (b) amber before destruction is authorised. [49284]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 15 April 2002]: A copy of the criteria for file retention is in the Library. These are consistent with the Public Records Act 1958 and are approved by myself the Home Secretary and Lord Chancellor. Criteria for retention and release of historically significant records are agreed with the Public Record Office and endorsed by the Advisory Council.

There is no minimum period.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many files held by M15 have been destroyed subsequent to an application being made by the subject of a file for access under the Data Protection Act 1998. [49285]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 15 April 2002]: None.

Correspondence

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Argyll and Bute (a) dated 14 February, regarding the Iona Community and (b) dated 10 October 2001, on asylum seekers. [48177]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 11 April 2002]: My noble Friend Lord Rooker wrote to the hon. Member regarding the Iona Community on 20 March 2002.

He also responded to the hon. Member's correspondence on asylum seekers on 8 April 2002. I am sorry for the delay in replying.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of public correspondence he expects to be responded to within 20 days of receipt by March. [47240]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 10 April 2002]: To cover all aspects of this question, I have two figures regarding the Home Office response to public correspondence. The first figure is based on performance for the whole financial year 2001–02, and the second figure is based on performance just for March 2002.

Correspondence responded to within 20 days of receipt:

1 April 2001–31 March 2002: 77 per cent.

1 March 2002–31 March 2002: 75 per cent.

I consider the prompt answering of correspondence from the public to be a very important part of the Department's work.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when officials at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate will answer the letters from the hon. Member for Vauxhall of 29 October 2001, 23 January and 26 February 2002, about a constituent (Home Office reference: E105598). [46652]

Angela Eagle: My officials at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to my hon. Friend on 12 April 2002. I am sorry that she did not receive an earlier reply.

Staff Numbers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff have been employed by his Department in each of the last 10 years. [42459]

Angela Eagle: The information requested is contained in 'Civil Service Statistics' published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office for the Government Statistical Service annually. For ease of reference, the figures for the Home Office are set out in the table.

1. With the new full-time equivalents calculation (1994 onwards), part-time staff are counted on the basis of the proportion of hours worked, formerly, they were counted as half.
2. From 1999 casual staff have been added to permanent staff to give the total for all staff.

European Documents

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his position towards Council Document 13957/01, on Harmonisation of Criminal Punishment. [39653]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The Government believe that it is desirable to set common penalties for serious organised crime offences across the European Union (EU), in line with the conclusions of the Tampere European Council. Council document 13957–01 sets out different technical options for doing this, which were discussed at the Justice and Home Affairs (JHA) Council on 6–7 December 2001. The Government supported the "combined" option described in the paper, whereby a limited range of penalties would be introduced based on a number of different minimum levels.

Following further discussion of this option at the informal JHA ministerial meeting in Santiago de Compostela, 14–15 February, 2002 it has now been agreed that the "combined" option should be used as the basis for setting common penalties for offences in future EU instruments. Such penalties do not affect judicial discretion on sentencing in individual cases, nor do they prevent member states from establishing higher penalties than those required by European law.

Prisoners' Mail

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on the reading by prison authorities of mail to prisoners from hon. Members; and if he will make a statement. [48748]

Beverley Hughes: The policy on prisoners' correspondence with their Members of Parliament is set out in Prison Standing Order 5B and D, copies of which are in the Library.

Prisons

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the reason underlying the reduction in the key performance target for staff sickness, as published in the Prison Service Corporate Plan 2001–02 between 2000–01 and 2001–02. [49968]

Beverley Hughes: The Key Performance Indicator (KPI) target was agreed following the "Working Well Together" study published by the Cabinet Office in July 1998 and the recommendations of the National Audit Office report on the management of sickness in the Prison Service published in May 1999. The targets set aimed to achieve a stepped reduction in the average level of staff sickness by 20 per cent. by 2001 and 30 per cent. by 2003. These reductions are in line with Cabinet Office targets across the civil service.

The sickness figures for April 2001–02 are not yet available. However, a figure for the year ending February showed a KPI of 13.93 days. The key performance target in the Corporate Plan 2001–02 was to ensure that average staff sickness did not exceed 10 working days by April 2002. The service will not meet its KPI target.

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether there was a waiting list for (a) reading, (b) writing, (c) computer skills training and (d) other educational courses at HM prisons in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [48914]

Beverley Hughes: Information on the numbers of prisoners waiting to take up educational courses is not collected but we do know that waiting lists exist for courses in prison education departments including those in basic skills and computer skills. The Government are creating more learning opportunities through increased investment over the next two years and by mapping basic and key skills into learning in other prison regimes such as vocational training, workshops, kitchens and physical education so that prisoners can gain dual accreditation.

Dungavel Detention Centre

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will launch an investigation into conditions at the Dungavel Detention Centre for asylum seekers; how many asylum seeker detainees at the Dungavel centre are on hunger strike; if he will review provisions for visits and access arrangements to asylum seekers detained in asylum centres; and if he will take steps to ensure freedom of information provisions apply to asylum seeker detention centres. [48838]

Angela Eagle: We have no reason or intention to launch an investigation into conditions at Dungavel Removal Centre. We are confident that Premier Services Ltd., which manages and operates the centre, provides care of the highest order for all its detainees in line with the requirements of the Detention Centre Rules.

Reports that have recently been circulating suggesting that there has been a hunger strike by a number of detainees at Dungavel are completely unfounded.

On Tuesday 9 April 2002 a number of detainees announced their intention to stage what they termed a 'non-compliance' day. Detainees refused to get out of bed, take part in removal centre activities such as education or sport activities or eat in the centre's dining hall. They did, however, continue to buy food from the centre's shop.

Most detainees ate lunch and supper the next day and the centre has been operating normally since.

There are already in place a number of local befriending schemes at Dungavel and regular visits to detainees do take place. In addition, each removal centre has a Visiting Committee. The Visiting Committee is responsible for monitoring the state of the removal centre premises, the administration of the centre and the treatment of detainees. Dungavel has been visited by a range of representatives from national non-governmental organisations with a direct interest in asylum, immigration and detention.

The freedom of information provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 will, when implemented, apply to immigration removal centres.

Mental Health

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letters from the mental health charity MACA of 22 August 2001, 16 October 2001, 19 December 2001 and 30 January 2002, about police handling of serious incidents involving people with mental health problems. [49772]

Mr. Denham: A reply to my hon. Friend was despatched on Friday 12 April 2002. A separate reply to Mental After Care Association (MACA) will be sent this week.

Civil Servants

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out for each Civil Service grade within his (a) Department and (b) Department's executive agencies the (i) total number of staff employed, (ii) number aged (A) 16 to 25, (B) 26 to 35, (C) 36 to 45, (D) 46 to 60 and (E) over the age of 60 years, (iii) number of registered disabled and (iv) number of ethnic minorities. [39155]

Angela Eagle: I am sorry for the delay in replying. Information on staff as at 31 January 2002 in the Home Office and its Agencies by grade and age range is set out in the tables.

Information in respect of part three and part four have been placed in the Library.

Policing

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many special constables there are in England and Wales; and how many there were on 1 May 1997. [49023]

Mr. Denham: The number of serving special constables in England and Wales on 31 September 2001 was 12,068. In March 1997 there were 19,874 serving special constables.

The Government are committed to increasing the size of the special constabulary. Measures to achieve this would include improvements to the recruitment, training, conditions, management and deployment of specials—focusing their role on intelligence-led, high visibility patrolling and local crime reduction initiatives. In January 2002 we ran a press campaign targeting specials as part of the national recruitment campaign for the regular Police Service.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the use of civilians to fulfil policing tasks. [49024]

Mr. Denham: The use of civilian support staff in the police service is not a new concept. Support staff carry out a variety of administrative roles in police stations, and in headquarters units, in order to lighten the bureaucratic load on police officers.

The Police Reform Bill contains provisions which will develop these roles further, allowing limited powers to be extended to police employed support staff who will work in four areas as investigating officers, escort officers, detention officers or community support officers (CSOs).

These support staff will be employed by the police authority and will be under the direction and control of the chief officer. He or she will be responsible for deciding which of the limited powers currently provided for in the Bill they will be allowed to exercise.

Yarl's Wood

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether all asylum seekers in Yarl's Wood at the time of the recent fire have been properly accounted for. [49844]

Angela Eagle: 17 detainees held at Yarl's Wood removal centre at the time of the disturbance and fire remain unaccounted for. Efforts to locate them continue.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the measures introduced by road hauliers to check for on-board illegal immigrants prior to cross-channel ferry embarkation to the United Kingdom. [49934]

Angela Eagle: The civil penalty provisions introduced by the 1999 Immigration and Asylum Act are intended to encourage hauliers to take effective measures to prevent unauthorised persons travelling in their vehicles. The number of clandestine entrants dealt with by the Immigration Service at Dover fell from 12,679 in 2000 to 9,225 in 2001, a reduction of 27 per cent. This indicates that while many hauliers have taken steps to properly secure their vehicles against unauthorised entry, a large number have not implemented effective systems to prevent this traffic.

Because of the high volume of cross-channel freight traffic, the security measures and checks employed by hauliers can only be assessed in respect of individual vehicles selected for examination upon arrival in the United Kingdom.

When vehicles are selected for examination at Dover, whether or not they are found to contain clandestine entrants, an assessment is made of the security measures in place. On average some 48 per cent. of vehicles examined are assessed as being properly secured.

Asylum Accommodation Centres

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations have taken place with the Ministry of Defence about using Hemswell Cliff as a possible site for an accommodation centre for asylum seekers. [50545]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 April 2002]: The Ministry of Defence is aware of our plans and officials of both Departments are in touch.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether evaluations of the sites proposed for asylum seekers accommodation centres will be published. [50494]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 April 2002]: The evaluations of the sites will inform site selection, acquisition negotiations and the evaluation of the forthcoming competition. As such, they will be commercially confidential. However, any forthcoming planning notifications will set out the basis on which the particular site was chosen.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the asylum seekers' accommodation centres in mainland Europe on which he is modelling the proposed centres to be established in the UK. [50495]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 April 2002]: Although the Home Office has recently commissioned research on the reception policies and practice of four European countries, our proposals are not directly based on any particular model.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what checks have been made on the services infrastructure at Hemswell Cliff as part of the assessment process to determine whether Hemswell Cliff is a suitable site for an asylum seekers' accommodation centre. [50496]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 April 2002]: No such checks took place prior to the announcement of the potential sites for trial accommodation centres. A range of factors, including the practicability of service provision, will be taken into account at every site before final decisions are made.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 11 February 2002 to the hon. Member for mid-Worcestershire (Mr. Luff), Official Report, column 57W, on asylum accommodation centres, when he expects to announce the selected locations of the proposed accommodation centres for asylum seekers. [45735]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for mid-Worcestershire (Mr. Luff) on 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 718W.

Asylum Seekers

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the consequences are for an asylum seeker in the pilot induction centre in Dover of a failure to comply with the requirement to sign, before leaving the induction centre, a declaration confirming that he or she understands the processes that accompany a claim for asylum and support and his or her obligations within those processes. [44753]

Angela Eagle: As the White Paper "Secure Borders, Safe Havens", published on 7 February 2002, made clear asylum-seekers, before they leave the induction centre, will be asked to sign a document confirming that they understand:

the processes that accompany their claim for asylum and support; their obligations to comply with temporary admission and reporting arrangements;

the requirement to leave the United Kingdom should their asylum claim fail; how they can obtain assistance to return.

This will enable proper monitoring and ensure that all asylum-seekers are receiving accurate information and advice and so are aware of what is likely to happen during the consideration of their claim and the likely time-scales involved.

At present there are no consequences for asylum seekers who refuse to sign the declaration.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in relation to land vacated by Ministry of Defence Logistics at Bicester, what consultations have taken place with the providers of local services as to the extra demands that will be placed upon them by using this site as an accommodation centre for asylum seekers; if he will specify the organisations consulted; and if he will place copies of correspondence with the bodies concerned in the Library; [48944]

(2) in relation to land vacated by the Ministry of Defence logistics at Bicester, what consultations have taken place in the provision of local services as to the suitability of such a site for an accommodation centre for asylum seekers; if he will specify the organisations consulted; and if he will place copies of correspondence with the bodies concerned in the Library. [48945]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 15 April 2002]: We have not yet consulted with providers of local services. However, we will consult local service providers as part of the planning process. We envisage that accommodation centres will be essentially self-contained communities with the majority of necessary services provided on site.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 7 February 2002 to the hon. Member for mid-Worcestershire (Mr. Luff), Official Report, column 1134W, on asylum accommodation centres, (1) for what reasons his Department is looking for sites for accommodation centres for asylum seekers beyond the South East of England; [48953]

(2) what his definition is of the South East of England. [48954]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 15 April 2002]: In accordance with existing policy on the dispersal of asylum seekers, the Government are looking to take the pressure off the south eastern areas of the country supporting the highest number of asylum seekers. These areas are those where the highest number of asylum seekers declare their applications, namely London and Kent.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what his policy is on the housing of asylum seekers on the Centrex site at High Ercall, Shropshire; and if he will make a statement on the suitability of the site for that purpose; [45161]

(2) if he plans to carry out a feasibility study into the suitability of the Centrex site at High Ercall, Shropshire, as a place for housing asylum seekers. [45162]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The Centrex site at High Ercall has not been offered to us for use during the trial of accommodation centres. It was put forward by the Angel Group as part of its contract with the National Asylum Support Service as possible dispersal accommodation for asylum seekers. I am unable to give details of any discussions which took place as part of that contract.

Unless or until the site is offered I will not make any feasibility study about its possible use.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what requirements there are for asylum seekers to produce a valid passport; and if he will make a statement. [48892]

Angela Eagle: There are no requirements for asylum seekers to produce a valid passport when making an application for asylum in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he or his Department has had discussions with the Angel Group Plc or any of its subsidiaries about housing asylum seekers at Otterburn Hall, Northumberland. [48300]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The National Asylum Support Service has not held any discussions with the Angel Group or its subsidiaries regarding the use of Otterburn Hall, Northumberland as accommodation for asylum seekers dispersed under the current arrangements.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applications were received at the Eurostar terminal at Waterloo; and how many asylum applicants were refused permission to board Eurostar trains at the Gare du Nord by British officials in each of the past 12 months. [48533]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Local management information obtained from Waterloo International, indicates that 3,874 asylum applications were made at Waterloo International between January—31 December 2001.

No asylum applications have been made to United Kingdom officials at Paris Gare du Nord, since the implementation of juxtaposed controls on 8 June 2001. Asylum applications made in France are the responsibility of the French Government.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will halt the deportation to Russia of further asylum seekers and refugees from Chechnya; and if he will make a statement; [48565]

(2) what measures he takes to ensure that asylum seekers and refugees from Chechnya who are deported from the UK to Russia safely return to Chechnya; [48568]

(3) how many people from Chechnya have been deported to Russia in each of the last two years for which figures are available; how many were males in the age group 18 to 35; and how many he has estimated have safely returned to Chechnya; [48569]

(4) what account is taken of military involvement by Russian troops in Chechnya when considering the deportation to Russia of asylum seekers and refugees from Chechnya. [48570]

Angela Eagle: Applications for asylum from people from Chechnya are considered on their individual merits, in accordance with our obligations under the 1951 United Nations Refugee Convention.

A decision on whether or not an unsuccessful asylum applicant from Chechnya is returned to the Russian Federation will depend on the facts of the particular case. Full account is taken of objective country information about the situation for Chechens including the ability of the individual concerned to reside in other parts of the Russian Federation.

The Home Office closely monitors the situation and a country assessment on the Russian Federation is published on the Immigration and Nationality Directorate's internet site. The assessment was revised in October 2001. It is currently being revised and will be published shortly.

The policy is to remove unsuccessful Chechen asylum seekers to the Russian Federation if they have no other basis of stay in the United Kingdom, and if there is the possibility of internal relocation in the Russian Federation. This is in accordance with guidance issued by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR). There are no plans to review this policy.

Statistical information on asylum seekers from Chechnya is not separately recorded from that on asylum seekers from other parts of the Russian Federation. The statistics requested are not therefore available.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will send immigration officials to the Sangatte refugee camp in France to take asylum applications there. [46984]

Angela Eagle: We have no plans to send United Kingdom immigration officials to Sangatte to process asylum applications. The United Kingdom's obligations under the 1951 United Nation convention on the status of refugees are engaged only after applicants have arrived in this country. We are working closely with the French authorities to address the problems of cross-Channel illegal immigration. Our shared aim is to achieve a situation in which the Red Cross Centre at Sangatte would be unnecessary.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the effect of access to the Channel Tunnel by asylum seekers on the French side on British exports and imports using this route as a form of transportation; what the implications are of this situation on the future of British businesses using the Channel link; and what measures are being taken in liaison with the French authorities and British businesses in order to identify a physical deterrent to the problem of refugees who are preventing the safe and effective passage of transportation through the Channel Tunnel link. [48861]

Mr. Spellar: I have been asked to reply.

The Government recognise that the disruption caused by would-be illegal immigrants is causing severe hardship to many businesses in this country who depend on reliable freight services through the Channel Tunnel.

The removal of the restrictions is dependent on the implementation of additional security measures at the Calais Fréthun yard so that SNCF can deal effectively with potential illegal immigrants. The Government continue to press the French Government at the highest levels to provide adequate policing resources at Fréthun to support the anti-intrusion measures already being installed by SNCF in order to address the disruption to Channel Tunnel services caused by would-be illegal immigrants. We welcome the additional resources that have already been deployed. The Government also welcome the recent announcement by the French Government of proposals to further strengthen the anti-intrusion measures at Fréthun.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Public-private Partnerships (Consultants)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the total external spending by the Department was on public private-partnership consultants in each of the last four years; how many full-time equivalent consultants were employed over this period; how many billed consultancy days there were per year; what the implied average cost of each PPP consultant was; how many consultancy firms were used by his Department over this period; and if he will make a statement. [43197]

Mr. Wills: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer on 4 February 2002, Official Report, column 714W, which gave information about PFI consultants. The total amount spent on PPP consultants, excluding PFI consultants, over the last four years is as follows:

1998—£775.50;

2000—£114,081.56; and

2001—£179,593.63.

The number of consultancy firms used over this period was eight. The other information requested about full-time equivalent consultants, billed consultancy days and the implied average cost of each consultant is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Census

Ms Walley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps are being taken to rectify the problems associated with the 1901 on-line census. [50534]

Ms Rosie Winterton: QinetiQ Ltd. is continuing to work on the technical enhancements. These enhancements are intended to make the site sufficiently robust to permit general internet access. The most important consideration is to ensure that the service is relaunched successfully. In the first instance, the service will be reintroduced at the designated service centres throughout the country as part of a rigorous testing process. It will then be relaunched on the internet as soon as practicable thereafter, subject to satisfactory completion of this process.

Ms Walley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans she has to initiate an inquiry into the problems associated with the 1901 on-line census. [50442]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Lord Chancellor's Department officials are working closely with the Public Record Office and other parties involved with the 1901 census and are being kept fully informed of developments. I have no plans to launch an inquiry into the project.

Ms Walley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what criteria were used to evaluate the ability of QinetiQ to deliver the 1901 on-line census. [50537]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The following criteria were used to evaluate the ability of QinetiQ to deliver the 1901 on-line census: commercial viability; customer service; innovation; operational impact on the PRO; organisational and cultural fit; risk management; technical feasibility.

Ms Walley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department which company was used to measure the capacity and size of system needed to manage the number of visitors to the 1901 on-line census. [50535]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The system sizing was undertaken by QinetiQ Ltd.

Ms Walley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what evaluation was done to assess the use of the 1901 on-line census; and if rationing of initial access occurred. [50536]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The experience of large family history websites in the United States was investigated in order to chart likely levels and patterns of demand for the 1901 on-line census. In addition, a pilot project was conducted between April and July 2001 when the 1891 census returns for the county of Norfolk were made available over the internet. Rationing of initial access did not occur when the service was launched on 2 January 2002.

Ms Walley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what criteria will be used to assess the viability of companies who will be awarded contracts for the 1891 on-line census. [50533]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In the event of a contract being awarded for the 1891 on-line census, the criteria for the award of that contract would be the same as for the contract awarded for the 1901 on-line census.

Land Registry

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, under what circumstances the Land Registry is permitted to change the registered boundaries of land registered with it in the absence of supporting records or court decisions. [50015]

Mr. Wills: The registered extent of a property can be changed only where it is established that the present registered extent is wrong. If someone believes that there is an error in the registered extent of their property, it is open to them to apply for rectification of the register and title plan under the relevant provisions of the Land Registration Acts and Rules. Any application for rectification must be supported by evidence. If satisfied that there is an arguable case for rectification, the Land Registry will serve notice on interested parties, and may rectify the register or title plan if no objection is received, or if any objection which is received is considered to be groundless. In any other case, the Land Registry can correct an error in the register or title plan only with the consent of all relevant parties, or following a judicial determination by the Court, or by the Solicitor to HM Land Registry. The Court and the Solicitor will order rectification of the register or title plan only if (1) it is established on the evidence that there is an error, and (2) they consider that they should exercise their statutory discretion in favour of rectification.

Professional Indemnity Insurance

Mr. Gray: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, how many contracts the Lord Chancellor's Department has with consultants; what level of professional indemnity insurance is standard in contracts with small consultants; whether he can make exceptions to the level of professional indemnity insurance; and what recent discussions he has had with other Government Departments about the level of professional indemnity insurance. [50840]

Mr. Wills: The Lord Chancellor's Department currently has 67 contracts with consultants.

For the majority of these contracts, professional indemnity insurance is not required.

Where professional indemnity insurance is considered appropriate, eg for construction-related contracts, the nature and value of the contract will determine the level of insurance required, regardless of the size of the consultancy firm.

As with previous administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of discussions that form part of the process of policy development and analysis.

HEALTH

Smoking

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department has spent on school education on the dangers of tobacco smoking in the last 12 months. [40521]

Yvette Cooper: In 2001–02, the sum of £250,000 has been spent on the development of a series of short films made by young people, with expert assistance. The Department has also commissioned a teaching pack for schools. The short films are designed to encourage discussion of smoking issues. The films have been shown on 'Trouble TV', a youth network with the highest youth profile in the UK. Trouble TV are showing the films free of charge, donating airtime worth approximately £800,000 to the project.

The Healthy Schools programme, to which £7.7 million has been allocated this year, includes smoking prevention in a wide range of educational activity designed to improve children's health.

We recognise that children and young people smoke for different reasons. There is no single cause. That is why we:

have agreed an Enforcement Protocol with local authorities to strengthen the enforcement of the existing legislation on under-age sales of cigarettes; and support proof of age card schemes, which protect shopkeepers and children alike.

will introduce tobacco advertising ban.

These measures are supported by an overarching Tobacco Education Campaign launched in December 1999 aimed at persuading and helping smokers to give up and non-smokers, including children and young people not to start.

Myodil

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been carried out into the side effects of myodil. [43495]

Mr. Hutton: Myodil was first marketed in the 1940s and was granted a Product Licence of Right in 1972 after the introduction of the Medicines Act 1968.

Myodil has not been marketed in the UK since 1987, when the manufacturers withdrew the product for commercial reasons. At the time of licensing, published case reports and spontaneous reports received by the company and regulatory agencies led to the inclusion of a warning about the occurrence of post-myelography arachnoiditis in the product information for Myodil.

There have been over 50 publications in the scientific literature relating to Myodil, including human and animal studies. These have included research in to patients who had received myodil to evaluate the risk of arachnoiditis. In general these studies do show an increased risk of arachnoiditis in patients, especially if they had a history of previous spinal surgery or spinal stenosis. When Myodil was used in procedures away from the lumbar spine there did not appear to be an increased risk. A published animal study in 1982 comparing Myodil with another contrast agent also showed an increased risk of arachnoiditis. Other studies have evaluated the use of Myodil for diagnostic procedures without looking specifically at safety or long term issues.

Hospices

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of voluntary adult hospices will be eligible to receive grants from the New Opportunities Fund. [48720]

Mr. Caborn: I have been asked to reply.

£22 million is available under the New Opportunity Fund's Palliative Care programme to extend adult palliative care provision in areas of need. The fund aims to support the provision of home-based palliative care for adults with cancer and other life threatening or life limiting conditions. Hospice care is not eligible for funding through this programme though adult hospices are eligible to apply to provide home based care services providing they meet the programme eligibility criteria.

Performance Measurement

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of the usefulness of the quality adjusted life year as a measure; and if he will make a statement on how it is used by the NHS and his Department. [41715]

Yvette Cooper: Quality adjusted life years (QALY's) are commonly used in the national health service and elsewhere to compare different treatments which prolong life or improve the quality of life. The National Institute for Clinical Excellence uses QALY's as part of its range of tools to assess the clinical and cost effectiveness of treatments which it is appraising, prior to issuing its guidance to the NHS.

Food Standards

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government are taking to respond to the long-term reduction in the mineral content of UK food. [46633]

Yvette Cooper: The evidence on whether there has been a reduction in the mineral content of foods generally is unclear. This is due to the differences over time in study methodologies and because mineral levels naturally occurring in foods can vary widely due to a range of factors.

Experts advise that the overall balance of the diet is more important than the nutrient content of individual foods. It is for this reason that Government activity has concentrated on promoting the uptake of a healthy balanced diet.

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether advice on the need to provide clear information about levels of uncertainty contained in Guideline 2000 applies to advice given by the Food Standards Agency to (a) the public and (b) the Government. [46634]

Yvette Cooper: Guidelines 2000 on "Scientific Advice and Policy Making" is aimed at all Government Departments. The Guidelines do apply to the Food Standards Agency (FSA), which is a non-ministerial Department.

As its guiding principles are "Putting the consumer first", "Being open and accessible" and "Being an independent voice", the FSA gives advice both to the public and to the Government. Policy issues are discussed at meetings of the FSA board which are open to the public, and the right for the Agency to publish its advice to Ministers (subject to specified conditions) is enshrined in section 19 of the Food Standards Act 1999.

Breast Cancer

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to provide a specialist breast cancer centre of excellence in the north-west. [41940]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 11 March 2002]: The Calman Hine Report states that where appropriate, cancer services should be provided close to patients. Furthermore, the large volume of patients attending for assessment, diagnosis and treatment together with the current available evidence suggests that a single centre of excellence would be impractical. Therefore there are no plans currently in the north-west region to develop a single centre specialising in breast cancer treatment.

All NHS providers of care for breast cancer patients have recently been appraised against the national standards contained in the "Manual of Cancer Standards". The three cancer networks within the north-west now have the results of those appraisals and are working with those providers to develop action plans where necessary and to prompt further developments as appropriate.

Leukaemia

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost is of the assessment of the drug Glivec for chronic myeloid leukaemia; and if he will make a statement. [41598]

Yvette Cooper: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) is currently appraising Glivec for the treatment of chronic myeloid leukaemia. As this appraisal is ongoing it is not possible at this time to give a cost of the assessment of Glivec.

Domiciliary Oxygen Services

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of domiciliary oxygen has been prescribed by (a) GPs and (b) hospital respiratory specialists in the last 12 months. [44302]

Mr. Hutton: Domiciliary oxygen is only prescribed by general practitioners in England.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 7 February 2002, Official Report, column 1160–64W, on stolen equipment, whether the computer equipment stolen from his Department was (a) new and unused and (b) used; and what the nature was of the data stored on such items in each case. [42649]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 20 March 2002]: Since May 1997 in total 170 items of departmental computer equipment have been stolen. Some 30 items were new (unused) equipment. The information stored generally concerned policy and finance issues. No departmental information was stored on new items. All the information should have been protected by password only access. There is no indication that unauthorised access has been gained to any information.

Secondments

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many members of staff were employed by his Department on secondment from non-governmental organisations in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [45227]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

	Number of secondments
1999–2000	20
2000–01	62
2001–02	49
Total	131

Dentists

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of female dentists on the (a) General Dental Council list and (b) health authority list practise in (i) the Government Dental Service full time and (ii) the Government Dental Practice Service for the NHS full time. [44409]

Ms Blears [holding answer 21 March 2002]: Dentists on health authority lists are self-employed principal dentists. They do not have a standard working week and can vary their working hours.

In March 2000 the Office of Manpower Economics (OME) carried out a survey into the hours of work and workload of principal dentists taking any part in the General Dental Service (GDS) in Great Britain.

The survey found that 49 per cent. of female principals in the GDS considered themselves as carrying out dental work full-time. This would be equivalent to about 3,000 of the 6,122 female principals in the GDS in the UK at 31 December 2001. The survey found that about one quarter of full-time principals spent 100 per cent. of their time on GDS work. This would be equivalent to 780 female principals at December 2001.

10,194 female dentists were on the General Dental Council (GDC) Register at 1 January 2002. The 3,000 principals estimated to be doing dental work full-time are equivalent to 29 per cent. of the females on the GDC register. The 780 principals estimated to be doing dental work full-time and spending 100 per cent. of their time in the GDS are equivalent to 8 per cent. of the females on the GDC register.

Unpaid Advisers

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the names of the unpaid advisers appointed by him and his predecessors since June 1997, stating in each case (a) the date of their appointment, (b) the duration of their appointment and (c) the project or projects on which they have been engaged. [43379]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 25 March 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend for Shipley (Christopher Leslie) on 16 November 2001, Official Report, column 958W.

Health Services (Barnet)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make an assessment of public transport links from (a) Colindale, (b) Burnt Oak and (c) West Hendon to (i) Barnet Hospital and (ii) Northwick Park East Hospital at (A) midnight, (B) 2 am and (C) 4 am; and if he will make a statement. [45827]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 25 March 2002]: It is the responsibility of local national health service bodies to ensure that services are accessible to members of the public.

General Practitioners

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of general practitioner surgeries who were using clinical computer systems in March 1999 were connected to the NHSnet by the end of 1999. [45719]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 25 March 2002]: Approximately 29 per cent. of computerised general practitioner (GP) practices had NHSnet connections by the end of 1999.

There are now currently 98 per cent. of GP practices connected to NHSnet. The outstanding GP practices are those for whom it is not currently cost-effective to provide NHSnet connections, for example those planning to merge, or where the practitioner is planning to retire. Remaining work is being carried forward as part of the wider strategic target to connect all national health service staff by March 2003.

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many times special advisers have accompanied Ministers on overseas visits in each of the last five years; which countries were visited; and what the total cost of each individual visit was. [47138]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 April 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Westmorland and Lonsdale (Mr. Collins) by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Ms Blears) on 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1142W.

Ambulances

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the average response time for ambulances in each of the NHS trusts in Lancashire has been in each year since 1997; [48597]

(2) how many ambulances have been available to each NHS trust in Lancashire in each year since 1997. [48598]

Ms Blears: Response times are not measured on the basis of the national health service trust to which the patient is conveyed. Neither are individual vehicles assigned to specific NHS trusts.

Information about ambulance responses to emergency calls is not available for individual NHS trusts in Lancashire. Information about Lancashire Ambulance Service NHS Trust and all other ambulance NHS trusts, about the proportion of emergency calls resulting in an ambulance arriving at the scene of the reported incident within the Government's target response times is contained in the Department's statistical bulletin "Ambulance Services, England 2000–01". A copy of the bulletin is available in the Library, and at www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0115.htm

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce yellow as the mandatory colour for ambulances. [47853]

Jacqui Smith: The Department currently has no plans to introduce yellow as the mandatory colour for ambulances.

Section 64 Funding

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the organisations which receive funding under the section 64 General Scheme under the Health and Public Services Act 1968; and how much money each received in the last financial year. [47834]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Junior Doctors' Hours

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of trusts are meeting New Deal hours targets for junior doctors. [47848]

Mr. Hutton: From figures produced at the September 2001 monitoring round, 24 per cent. of trusts were reported to be meeting the New Deal requirements. However, the 66 trusts involved are mostly small community trusts, in total employing only 6 per cent. of all doctors in training, and only 11 per cent. of all doctors meeting the New Deal. Overall, 64 per cent. of junior doctors in all types of trusts complied fully with the New Deal hours and rest requirements at 30 September 2001.

Ward Housekeepers

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of NHS trusts employ ward housekeepers. [47010]

Mr. Hutton: The NHS Plan set a target for 50 per cent. of all hospitals to have housekeepers working on wards by 2004. Data compiled in March 2002 show that 41 per cent. of NHS trusts, excluding ambulance trusts, report that they are employing housekeepers within their hospitals on a number of their wards.

	Number	Percentage
Acute trusts with housekeepers	73	49
Community trusts with housekeepers	19	27
Mental health trusts with housekeepers	10	30
Multiservices trusts with housekeepers	19	40

Syphilis

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to combat the rise in syphilis. [47873]

Yvette Cooper: We have funded a range of national and local interventions aimed at reducing the recent resurgence of syphilis in England. These include an awareness campaign for groups most at risk of syphilis, reviewing and updating of national enhanced laboratory surveillance for syphilis and improving outbreak management skills. We have also funded local interventions in London, Manchester and Brighton, which complement national initiatives, but are more targeted, appropriate and sensitive to local circumstances.

In addition, the Sexual Health and HIV Strategy announced a new mass-media safer-sex campaign to improve awareness of sexually transmitted infections and how to avoid them. This is planned for the autumn.

Drug Abuse

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much NHS spending there was in 2001–02 on serological screening and direct investigative testing for (a) HIV, (b) chlamydia and (c) related hepatitis due to drug abuse and usage. [47874]

Yvette Cooper: Information about NHS spending on serological screening and direct investigative testing for these infections is not collected centrally. The National Blood Service spent £1.575 million on screening the blood supply for HIV in 2001–02 (and a further £7.138 million on screening for hepatitis B and hepatitis C).

Patient Travelling Expenses

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the entitlement is of patients to claim expenses (a) when travelling between their home and hospital and (b) when travelling between their home and the point of departure for international treatment. [47838]

Jacqui Smith: Anyone on a low income, who needs to go to hospital for national health service treatment under the care of a consultant may claim full or partial reimbursement of travelling costs. Help is provided on an income-related basis through the hospital travel costs scheme which is part of the NHS low income scheme. If such a patient is travelling abroad for NHS treatment, they may also receive assistance with travelling costs from home to the point of international departure through the hospital travel costs scheme.

Information on the above schemes is contained in leaflet HC11 'Are you entitled to help with health costs?' available either in the Library or www.doh.uk/nhscharges/hc11.htm.

Vulnerable Adults

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason the introduction of the Protection of Vulnerable Adults list has been delayed until August 2002. [47831]

Jacqui Smith: It has been necessary to address complex issues on the healthcare aspects of the Protection of Vulnerable Adults (PoVA) scheme. When PoVA is implemented in August, it is the intention that the recently established Criminal Records Bureau will extend its services to include checks against the PoVA list.

Schizophrenia

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans the Government have to ensure that social workers, health workers and other people working with people suffering from schizophrenia receive better training and support; [47918]

(2) what additional support and training intitiatives have been implemented since 1997 for social workers, health workers and other people working with people suffering from schizophrenia. [47923]

Jacqui Smith: The Department of Health does not set the curricula for pre-registration and undergraduate health professional education. This is a matter for the professional regulatory bodies to determine.

It is the responsibility of local managers of NHS organisations locally to determine both the work force and the skill mix they require to provide local health services and whether or not to fund training or continuing professional development (CPD) programmes for their staff. We are taking steps to ensure that training for all NHS staff relates closely to national service frameworks.

The key drivers, principles and opportunities for education, training and CPD in the NHS are set out in the recently issued "Working Together—Learning Together, a Framework for Lifelong Learning for the NHS". The strategy is focused on ensuring all staff are equipped with the skills and knowledge to work flexibly in support of patients and that they are supported to grow, develop and realise their potential and enhance their careers.

On social care the Department has supported the new qualification for mental health staff, Certificate in Community Mental Health Care, that has been developed by the Mental Health Foundation and was launched in June 2000. This certificate is a vocational qualification aimed at practitioners in the mental health field who do not have a professional qualification relating to mental health. It is linked to NVQ Level 3.

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what measures the Government have put in place since 1997 to improve the financial integration and communication among Government agencies to help ensure a better service for people suffering from schizophrenia and their carers; and what assessment he has made of improvements as a result; [47922]

(2) what plans the Government have to improve the financial integration and communication among Government agencies to help ensure a better service for people suffering from schizophrenia and their carers. [47921]

Jacqui Smith: The Government's aim is to develop the whole range of mental health services so that all people can access the right services at the time when they need them. "The National Service Framework for Mental Health" (NSF), published in September 1999, has set the agenda for a comprehensive modernisation of mental health services.

The document "Effective Care Co-ordination in Mental Health Services", issued in October 1999, stressed the need for all agencies to work together to meet clients' needs for health and social care in an integrated way. This principle applies across all mental health services, not just those for people with schizophrenia, although the NSF and the related NHS Plan commitments do identify people with severe mental illness as a high priority for improved services.

The new services referred to in the NHS Plan are in the early stages of implementation but it is envisaged that, by 2004, 100,000 people will benefit from crisis resolution services, 20,000 from assertive outreach services, 7,500 from early intervention services and 5,000 from mental health in-reach services in prisons. Many of the recipients of these services will have schizophrenia.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people suffer from cystic fibrosis in (a) the Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) Tyne and Wear, (d) the North East and (e) the United Kingdom. [47639]

Jacqui Smith: Data is not available in the form requested. Data on finished consultant episodes (FCEs) for cystic fibrosis by health authority area of residence is shown in the table. As of 1 April 2002, Gateshead and South Tyneside health authority, Newcastle and North Tyneside health authority, Sunderland health authority and Northumberland health authority became the new Northumberland and Tyne & Wear health authority; and County Durham and Darlington health authority and Tees health authority became the new County Durham and Tees Valley health authority.

Climate Change Levy

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the change in costs incurred by NHS trusts and health authorities as a result of the introduction of the climate change levy. [47566]

Yvette Cooper: The estimated cost of the climate change levy, paid by the national health service on national contracts, is almost £24.5 million inclusive of VAT.

The effects of the climate change levy were designed to be offset by a reduction in the employers' national insurance contributions.

Tuberculosis

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many reported cases there were of TB in (a) London and (b) West Sussex in each year since 1997. [47552]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The number of reported cases of human tuberculosis in the London region and to West Sussex health authority from 1997 to 2000 is shown in the table.

Year	Number of tuberculosis notifications in London (by region)	Number of tuberculosis notifications to West Sussex health authority
1997	2,411	36
1998	2,444	29
1999	2,493	32
2000	2,834	42
2001[1]	2,917	62

[1] Provisional

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the screening process for TB in children. [47537]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Children are not routinely screened for TB unless they are in a high-risk group such as a close contact of a new TB case.

A tuberculin skin test is carried out before BCG immunisation. The test assesses the individuals sensitivity to tuberculin protein. Those with a positive test are not given BCG. Those with strongly positive tests are referred to a chest clinic for assessment of the need for further investigation and treatment.

South West Yorkshire Mental Health Trust

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the benefits of the establishment of a South West Yorkshire Mental Health Trust. [47619]

Jacqui Smith: I considered the application made to establish the South West Yorkshire Mental Health National Health Service Trust and approved it on the expectation that it will improve the quality of services provided to the people of Calderdale, Kirklees and Wakefield districts.

Mental Health

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place for involving people with mental health problems in decisions about their care and treatment. [47627]

Jacqui Smith: People of working age in contact with specialist mental health and social care services have their care and treatment co-ordinated under the care programme approach (CPA). The key principles of the CPA are applicable to all service users: they have a right to the thorough assessment of all their needs, the development of a care plan and a review of the care by the professionals involved in their care. It is envisaged that written care plans should be drawn up with the involvement of the service users, and where appropriate their carer. Any refusal to accept treatment or medication should be noted in the care plan along with the service user's reasons for refusal. Service users should be given the opportunity to sign the agreed care plan and then receive a copy. Users or carers must also be able to ask for a review of care at any time and annual audit should ensure that reviews are carried out.

Further, any local audit of quality will need to include the views of service users, who should be given the opportunity to contribute to the setting of quality standards and measures. The views of service users are an effective indicator of the quality of services and must be included in any audit of service delivery.

Inquiries (Costs)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost of the (a) Ashworth high security hospital and (b) Victoria Climbié inquiries was. [48029]

Jacqui Smith: The direct cost to the Department of the inquiry into the personality disorder unit at Ashworth high security hospital was £2.3 million. This does not include the costs incurred by other statutory bodies involved in the inquiry, for example Ashworth hospital itself.

The Victoria Climbié inquiry is ongoing and final costs will not be known until the end of the year.

Residential Care Homes

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money he estimates will be required by local authorities to meet the demand for residential care homes in the next 10 years. [47621]

Jacqui Smith: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Aylesbury (Andrew Lidington) on 1 February 2002, Official Report, columns 626–27W. Gross expenditure by councils in England on residential care for adults was £3,557 million in 2000–01. Future expenditure will depend on changes in costs as well as in demand.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of elderly people in care are living in state-funded residential care homes. [47620]

Jacqui Smith: At 31 March 2001, there were 34,380 residents aged 65 and over supported by local authorities in local authority homes.

Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to revise the guidelines used by local authorities to determine charges for residential care in order to make the charges more reflective of the services provided. [48553]

Jacqui Smith: Government guidance on charges for residential accommodation is updated regularly. It is based on the principle that those people who are able to pay for their care should do so, while those who have limited income and assets contribute according to a fair financial assessment. Advice on the fees which local authorities should negotiate with care home owners is contained in "Building Capacity and Partnership in Care", an agreement between central government and the statutory and independent social and health care and housing sectors. The agreement states that fee setting should take into account the legitimate current and future costs faced by providers, the factors that affect these costs and the potential for improving performance and more effective ways of working.

Nursing Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 931W, on nursing staff, how many posts have been filled in April. [50501]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 17 April 2002]: Available information was published in a report, 'Modern Matrons in the NHS: a progress report', on 15 April 2002, showing that there are 1,895 nurses in modern matron posts across the NHS in England.

Social Services

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many local authority social services are in special measures. [47625]

Jacqui Smith: There are now 10 councils with social services responsibilities subject to special measures by the social services inspectorate: Coventry, Hackney, Haringey, Lambeth, Lancashire, Merton, Newham, North East Lincolnshire, Peterborough and Sheffield.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of social services staff posts are (a) filled by permanent staff, (b) filled by agency staff and (c) vacant. [47623]

Jacqui Smith: This information requested is not collected centrally.

Resource Allocation

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out the components of the weighted capitation formula used to allocate resources to PCTs. [50794]

Mr. Hutton: We currently allocate funding to health authorities, and they allocate funding to primary care trusts (PCTs), on the basis of the relative needs of their populations. A weighted capitation formula is used to determine each health authority and PCTs fair share of available resources, to enable them to commission similar levels of services for populations in equal need.

The formula has the following components: hospital and community health services; HIV/AIDS; general practice infrastructure, i.e. practice staff wages, premises and equipment; general practice prescribing, i.e. drug costs of prescriptions dispensed not dispensing fees; and general medical services non-cash limited.

In future the intention is that allocations will be made direct to primary care trusts. This is subject to the passage of legislation through Parliament. Allocations will continue to be based on the principle of weighted capitation.

Speech Therapists

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many speech therapists are employed (a) by the national health service and (b) by each NHS trust in England and Wales; what the equivalent figures were for the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [51058]

Mr. Hutton: Information relating to Wales is a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

The available information for England has been placed in the Library.

Between 1997 and 2001 the number of speech and language therapists working in the NHS has increased by 810 (11 per cent.) and the number of training places available for students has increased by over a hundred since 1998. There will be further increases in the number of students entering training as a result of the NHS Plan commitment to provide 4,450 more training places each year for therapists and other health professionals by 2004. The increased investment in training, work to make the NHS a better employer and encourage return to practice will result in a continued increase in the number of speech therapists available to work in the NHS.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the recruitment and retention of speech therapists. [51059]

Mr. Hutton: The Government are implementing a range of measures to improve recruitment and retention of all staff, including speech and language therapists. These include an increase in pay, encouraging the national health service to become a better employer through the 'Improving Working Lives' and 'Positively Diverse' programmes, increasing training commissions, reducing student attrition, running national and local recruitment and return to practice campaigns. Further information on 'Improving Working Lives' is available at www.doh.gov.uk/iwl.

Strategic Health Authority Personnel

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list names of the chairperson and chief executive of each strategic health authority in England. [50022]

Mr. Hutton: The names of the chairperson and chief executive of each of the new health authorities established on 1 April 2002 is shown in the table. Subject to legislation, it is expected that the new health authorities will be designated strategic health authorities from the autumn of 2002.

Cancer Plan

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much was spent on hospices and palliative care (a) by the voluntary sector and (b) by Government in the last 12 months for which figures are available; [45779]

(2) how much has been invested in hospices and palliative care under the Cancer Plan. [45780]

Yvette Cooper: Estimates by the National Council for Hospices and Specialist Palliative Care Services indicate total expenditure (1999–2000) on adult palliative care services to be approximately £300 million, of which £170 million was provided by the voluntary sector and £130 million by the national health service.

The NHS Cancer Plan set out our commitment to increase NHS investment in specialist palliative care (including hospices) by £50 million by 2004. This investment is intended to help tackle inequalities in access to specialist palliative care and enable the NHS to increase their contribution to the cost hospices incur in providing agreed levels of service.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the extra training of existing staff as identified in the Cancer Plan. [45769]

Yvette Cooper: Good progress is being made in extra training of NHS staff to help them extend their skills and offer increased support to people with cancer. A number of new initiatives are underway to develop existing NHS roles and to increase the number of training places available so that we meet the NHS Cancer Plan targets to increase the number of cancer specialists. New ways of working pilot projects have been set up in four breast screening centres and nine radiotherapy centres. These are testing and developing new ways to make the best use of the skills and abilities of staff. We are also developing a nationally accredited educational and training programme for cytology-screening.

£6 million has been made available over the next three years to support over 10,000 nurses in primary care (one in four of all district nurses) to take part in new training and support in the general principles and practice of palliative care. The training programme will help district and community nurses to support people with cancer in remaining at home for as long as possible during their illness. £2.5 million has also been made available to train additional staff in endoscopy procedures. We will also be introducing new joint training across professions in communication skills.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in the five-a-day programme under the Cancer Plan. [45771]

Yvette Cooper: Progress has been as follows:

The National School Fruit Scheme—the first pilots were launched in November 2000 covering 33 schools, the spring pilots were subsequently launched in February 2001, and covered 500 schools across the country. £42 million from the New Opportunities Fund will fund the expansion of the scheme from this month, when another 1,899 schools, within the west Midlands region will be included in the scheme, and thereafter on a termly basis further regions will come on board.

Five-a-day community initiatives—following the successful evaluation of the five-a-day pilot sites, a further £10 million has been provided from the New Opportunities Fund, to support more five-a-day community initiatives. The funds have been allocated to 66 areas, based on deprivation and need.

These schemes are being reinforced by the other measures set out in the NHS Plan and Cancer Plan, including involvement of the food industry and other Government Departments, a communications programme to increase awareness to the health benefits, and a means of monitoring the impact on the targeted population.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in recruiting the extra (a) cancer specialists, (b) nurses and (c) radiographers identified in the Cancer Plan. [45777]

Yvette Cooper: The table shows good progress in increasing the number of doctors and radiographers working in cancer services. This increase means the national health service is on track to hit the target set out in the Cancer Plan of nearly 1,000 extra cancer consultants by 2006. Separate figures are not available for cancer nurses, but the Department's Census shows that since the launch of the NHS Plan in September 1999 until September 2001 there was a net increase in nurses working in the NHS of 20,740. This increase will enable the recruitment of additional cancer-site specific nurse specialists, chemotherapy nurses, palliative care nurse specialists and additional nurses on cancer wards.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what trend data are available to measure progress against the PSA target for the reduction in the death rate from heart disease and stroke and related illnesses among people aged under 75 years. [47302]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Data to monitor the Public Service Agreement target to reduce the death rate from heart disease and stroke and related illnesses (all circulatory diseases) among people aged under 75 years are obtained from mortality data published by the Office for National Statistics. Data are for England.

This PSA target is the target published in 2000 in the NHS Plan and previously in 1999 in the White Paper 'Saving Lives: Our Healthier Nation' for a 40 per cent. reduction by 2010 against a baseline of the average age standardised mortality rate for the three years 1995–97.

The trend data are as follows:

Three-year average age standardised mortality rate per 100,000 population

Period
1995–97	139.60
1996–98	133.78
1997–99	127.00
1998–2000	120.53

Waiting Times

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the waiting times for chemotherapy and radiotherapy are in (a) Lincolnshire and (b) other counties in England; and what steps are being taken to improve these waiting times. [40463]

Yvette Cooper: The NHS Cancer Plan set out maximum waiting time targets for first definitive cancer treatment which will come into effect over the next few years. From December 2001 there is a one-month maximum wait from diagnosis to first treatment for breast cancer and a one-month wait from urgent general practitioner referral to first treatment for childrens testicular cancer and acute leukaemia. By 2005 there will be a maximum one-month wait from diagnosis to first treatment for all cancers. Data to monitor the December 2001 target are being collected and will be published in due course. Data on waiting times for treatment of other cancers will be collected as the targets are introduced.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what powers PCTs have to commission services from outside the NHS. [50804]

Mr. Hutton: Primary Care Trusts (PCTs) have a legal duty and freedom to secure the provision of locally relevant, high quality services for the populations they serve. This may be from the public (including local authorities) or independent sector. Commissioning decisions must be made on the basis of health care needs of the local community and should take into account of both clinical and cost effectiveness. PCTs may also legally secure the provision of services from countries in the European Economic Area for their patients. I also refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Woodspring (Dr. Fox) on 8 November 2001, Official Report, column 367W.

Acute Hospital Trusts

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of funding for acute hospital trusts will be (a) channelled through PCTs and (b) directly provided by his Department. [50795]

Mr. Hutton: Trusts receive the bulk of their funding via service agreements with Primary Care Trusts (PCTs).

PCTs will receive 100 per cent. of unified allocations which covers hospital and community health services, general practice prescribing, general practice infrastructure, in order to commission services for their populations.

Trusts also receive revenue funding from the Department for medical and non-medical staff and nurse education services and for research and development.

In addition trusts can charge staff, visitors or patients for services provided, such as catering or provision of private patient facilities.

Written Answers to Questions

PRIVY COUNCIL

Departmental Report

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council when the 2002 Departmental report will be published. [49586]

Mr. Robin Cook: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer that the Chief Secretary to the Treasury gave on 15 April, Official Report, column 774W.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Mr. Paul Keetch MP: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, which nations have contributed forces to (a) Operation Enduring Freedom and (b) ISAF; how many troops each of these nations has contributed; and if he will make a statement. [50000]

Mr. Hoon: Pursuant to the answer I gave on 16 April, Official Report, column 824W, I regret to inform you that there was an error in the table given. The nation of Poland should have read Portugal.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the target has been in each of the last five years for efficiency savings as a percentage of total running costs for each of the non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible; and if the target was met. [49638]

Dr. John Reid: No New Deal for Young People staff have been employed by non-departmental public bodies in the last four years.

Overtime Payments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his policy is on overtime payments for staff in his Department. [49133]

Dr. John Reid: Overtime work is paid for hours worked in excess of conditioned hours to qualifying grades below the Senior Civil Service at a rate determined according to their overtime band.

Staff in overtime band 1 (mainly junior grades) receive non-pensionable hourly payments at the rate of time and a half, Monday to Saturday.

Staff in overtime band 2 (more senior grades) receive non-pensionable hourly payments at plain time rate, Monday to Saturday.

Staff in grades eligible for overtime receive an additional pensionable payment of half the plain time rate for attendance between the hours of midnight Friday and midnight Saturday. Staff in overtime grades whose pay does not include an element for Sunday attendance, will receive an additional pensionable payment at plain time rate for attendance on Sundays in excess of conditioned hours.

Very senior staff who are required to work exceptionally long hours for a sustained period may receive an ex-gratia payment.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland. (1) how many staff were involved in each of the last three years in preparing draft answers to written parliamentary questions; [49145]

(2) what the cost was to his Department of answering written parliamentary questions in 2001; and how that cost was calculated. [49103]

Dr. John Reid: I refer the hon. Member to the answer provided by my right hon. Friend, The Leader of the House of Commons on 17 April 2002.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what notification was received by her Department concerning the possible death of cattle from foot and mouth-disease at Thornhill Farm, Cwymbach, Aberdare on 4 October 2000; and if she will make a statement. [51401]

Margaret Beckett: Inquiries made by the Department indicate that the farmer concerned first informed the National Assembly of Wales (NAW) of his belief that two cattle on his farm had died in August 2000 as a result of foot and mouth disease in a letter dated 3 November 2001 addressed to the First Minister. There is no record of the farmer having made this suggestion to the Department or to the NAW in October 2000, or at any other time prior to his letter of 3 November 2001:

There was no reason to suspect the presence of foot and mouth disease in the United Kingdom prior to the discovery of the first suspect case on 19 February 2001.

Ozone Depletion

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the economic viability of replacing ozone depleting substances with non-ozone depleting substances. [48073]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 10 April 2002]: In December 1998, the Department produced a Regulatory Impact Assessment of the EC's proposal for a Regulation which became EC Regulation 2037/2000. This considered two options; either to agree the proposal as it stood, or to argue for modifications to the proposed controls which went beyond the requirements of the Montreal Protocol where these would deliver no real environmental benefit or where the costs of compliance would be disproportionate. As a result of consultation with interested parties, the Government agreed to the proposal in broad terms following changes made during negotiations to some of the proposed controls that in the UK's view were disproportionate.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations her Department has made to other EU Governments regarding the length of period for which use of ozone depleting substances will remain permissible. [48071]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 10 April 2002]: My officials meet regularly with counterparts from other EC Member States to discuss issues arising from EC Regulation 2037/2000 on Substances that Deplete the Ozone Layer. Together with the European Commission, the UK and other Member States consider possible EC proposals for improving and strengthening the Montreal Protocol. EC Regulation 2037/2000 itself goes considerably further than the Protocol in controlling and phasing out ozone-depleting substances. For example, HCFCs are to be phased out under the Protocol by 2030 and under the Regulation by 2015.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she proposes to take to promote the use of non-ozone depleting refrigerants which have been developed in the UK. [48072]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The key measure is enforcement of EC Regulation 2037/2000 on Substances that Deplete the Ozone Layer as this puts pressure on producers, suppliers and users of refrigerants to use alternatives to CFCs through the ban on use and supply and HCFCs through use controls on new and existing equipment. The Department with DTI produced the guidance document, "Refrigeration & Air Conditioning—CFC and HCFC Phase Out: Advice on Alternatives and Guidelines for Users". It is available on the DTI's website, www.dti.gov.uk/access/ozone.htm.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria have to be met for sites of special scientific interest to be classified as in good condition. [48538]

Mr. Meacher: SSSIs are notified because of specific biological or geological features, and when those features are being managed in a way which maintains their nature conservation value, they are said to be in favourable condition. Sites are assessed against Common Standards, published by the Joint Nature Conservation Committee (JNCC) which are well established. This publication will be made available to the Library of the House.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures are being taken to ensure that 95 per cent of all sites of special scientific interest within the UK are brought into good condition by 2010. [48544]

Mr. Meacher: The target under the Department's public service agreement is that 95 per cent of SSSIs in England, by area, should be in favourable (or unfavourable and improving) condition by 2010. Nature conservation is a devolved matter. Some 60 per cent of sites in England are presently in favourable condition.

We are addressing the condition of SSSIs on several fronts. English Nature is working with owners and occupiers, advising on management and offering management agreements for positive management of sites. Where necessary, English Nature will also use strong new powers available under the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000, to tackle the condition of specific sites. With English Nature's advice, we will be looking carefully at the resources necessary to make good progress towards achieving the target.

We are also working with other Departments and public bodies, who own sites, or whose operations might affect sites, to ensure that their activities further the conservation of these special places.

Within DEFRA, we are looking at implementation of the Rural White Paper, the recommendations of the Commission on the Future of Farming and Food on sustainable farming and, in the longer term, CAP reform measures with a view to addressing some of the incentives to heavy stocking, which can cause damage, particularly to upland SSSIs.

Greenhouse Gas Emissions

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish (a) the base year emissions of the participants in the UK Greenhouse Gas Emissions Trading Scheme 2002, (b) their respective targets and (c) the reductions that they are committed to already, as a result of (i) legislation and (ii) public voluntary commitments. [48979]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 15 April 2002]: The Government will publish the baseline emissions (average over 1998–2000) for each of the direct participants in the UK Greenhouse Gas Emissions Trading Scheme once these have been independently verified by organisations accredited for this specific purpose by the UK Accreditation Service. The respective targets for each direct participant have already been have published on the Department's website. Emission levels required of direct participants through integrated pollution control regulation are already available on the public register. The Department of Trade and Industry's flare consent regime specifies limits on the volume of natural gas flared rather than an emissions level. The 2002 flare consents for British Petroleum plc installations and fields in the Emissions Trading Scheme allow 1,132.55 thousand standard cubic metres of natural gas flared per day. For Shell UK Ltd, the comparable number is 698.17 thousand standard cubic metres of natural gas flared per day. Whilst the Government welcomes any public voluntary commitment made by firms to reduce their greenhouse gas emissions, these are a matter for the firms themselves, and not for Government.

Plastics

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment she has made of degradable plastic technology; and what plans she has to promote it; [47575]

(2) what assessment she has made of (a) the availability and (b) the environmental merits of biodegradable plastic bags; and what plans she has to promote their use. [47577]

Mr. Meacher: We are aware that a number of companies are marketing degradable plastics technology and products manufactured from these materials. However these new technologies are based on modified plastics manufactured from mineral oil. I realise that there is a range of products and applications, for example in agriculture, where controlled degradability may be of benefit when considering disposal options, but it is not clear that this approach is a sustainable option to the general problem of managing plastics waste.

The waste strategy for England and Wales, Waste Strategy 2000, emphasises the need to gain more value from waste through re-use, recycling, composting and the recovery of energy. Degradable plastics based on fossil carbon resources, which are specifically designed for disposal with no beneficial recovery potential, run counter to this approach.

However I do support the development of biodegradable plastics from non-fossil sources. The Government Industry Forum on Non-Food Uses of Crops was set up in March 2001 to provide strategic advice to Government and industry on the development of non-food uses of crops.

The Forum has examined the UK potential to produce compostable packaging materials from mainstream agricultural crops and has concluded that there is a clear opportunity for both UK agriculture and industry to develop these materials. The Forum is developing a series of recommendations designed to encourage industry to respond and develop to supply an expanding market. These recommendations are likely to be published in the Forum's first Annual Report in the summer of 2002.

Air Quality Strategy

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress there has been in improving air quality in deprived areas to meet the objectives and targets prescribed in the Government's Air Quality Strategy; and whether the target the dates set out in the strategy have been met. [46606]

Mr. Meacher: The Government set out its targets for safeguarding people's health and protecting the environment from air pollution in the Air Quality Strategy for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland in January 2000. It includes health-based standards for the eight air pollutants of main concern and objectives for their achievement between 2003 and 2008. Good progress has been made towards achieving most of the targets as a result of the measures put in place by central Government and local authorities. We are, for example, broadly on track to meet our policy objectives for carbon monoxide, benzene, 1,3 butadiene, lead and sulphur dioxide, but more may need to be done in some areas to meet our targets for nitrogen dioxide, particles and ozone.

Local authorities have a duty to review and assess the local air quality in their area and to designate air quality management areas where it is likely that the air quality objectives will not be met by the relevant deadline. Out of the 88 deprived areas across England, 35 authorities have designated air quality management areas in respect of one or more pollutants. A full list of those authorities that have designated air quality management areas is available at www.aeat.co.uk/netcen/airqual/aqma/home.html

The majority of the air quality management areas have been designated due to likely exceedences of the NO_2 and PM_{10} objectives relating to pollution from traffic. These authorities have a duty to draw up an air quality action plan setting out those measures they intend to take in pursuit of the air quality objectives. They will also have to work closely with other local stakeholders, such as the Highways Agency, Environment Agency and local businesses, in order to deliver improvements in local air quality. The Government will continue to oversee this process to ensure that the objectives are met as far as possible in all parts of the country, including the most deprived areas, by the relevant target dates.

Risk Assessment

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action the Government are taking to ensure that scientific risk assessments are carried out before EU legislation is introduced banning or restricting the use of well established chemicals or metals that in her view are used safely and responsibly; and if she will make a statement. [46970]

Mr. Meacher: The main route to EU based restrictions on well-established chemicals is through the European Community's Existing Substances Regulation (793/93/EEC). The Regulation requires that risk assessments are prepared before proposals for restrictions or bans can be considered. The UK plays an active role in the operation of the Regulation, including carrying out a number of the assessments. Should unacceptable uses be identified by the risk assessment, the Member State Rapporteur will prepare a risk reduction strategy. This will include an analysis of the advantages and drawbacks of potential risk reduction measures and lead to a recommendation in the Official Journal for further Community action as appropriate. A small number of chemicals are also subject to restrictions through discussions arising from Member State notifications under the Technical Standards Directive 98/34/EC, concerns identified by the European Commission's scientific committees or other international programmes. Whenever these are debated the UK presses for an appropriate risk assessment to be carried out.

Endangered Species

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what checks are made on illegal imports of products made from endangered species; what plans she has to extend the ban on the import of products made from endangered species; and if she will make a statement. [50470]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 16 April 2002]: The United Kingdom is a Party to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES), which controls and monitors international trade in endangered species and products derived from them.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

CITES is implemented within the EU by Council Regulation (EC) No 338/97 and Commission Regulation (EC) No 939/97.

HM Customs and Excise enforce the controls imposed by these Regulations, targeting their checks on the importation of items covered by the legislation on the basis of assessed risk, or as a direct result of intelligence received (including advice from my Department). Any offences detected would result in seizure of the goods concerned and may result in the prosecution of the individuals or company involved where appropriate.

CITES does not ban trade in all endangered species. Over 30,000 animals and plants are currently listed in the three Appendices to CITES, of which only around 800 are listed in Appendix I, effectively banning them and their derivatives from trade except under exceptional circumstances. We have no plans to seek to include more species in Appendix I.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will support the labelling of animal feeds containing or derived from genetically modified organisms in the forthcoming European negotiations on traceability and labelling. [29502]

Mr. Meacher: The Government supports the labelling of feed that consists of, or contains, genetically modified organisms (GMOs). However, enforcement of a requirement to label feed derived from GMOs which does not contain GM material at detectable levels would be at present extremely difficult, because it is impossible to test such feed to distinguish it from its non-GM counterpart, and hence not practical to apply appropriate validation and enforcement measures.

Hazardous Waste

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to ensure that the United Kingdom will be able to reduce discharges of hazardous substances into water supplies to the levels required by the EU Water Framework Directive. [43601]

Mr. Meacher: So far as UK drinking water supplies are concerned, standards are laid down in the EC Drinking Water Directive and enforced through UK Drinking Water Regulations. Water is treated as necessary by the water companes to meet these standards. The Water Framework Directive does not set standards for drinking water.

As for the aquatic environment, discharges of dangerous substances are controlled under the existing EC Dangerous Substances Directive and parallel regulations in the UK. These will be superseded in due course under the provisions of the Water Framework Directive. Standards for "priority" dangerous substances will be set in new Water Framework Directive "daughter" directives due to be proposed by the end of 2003.

Correspondence

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the letters of 10 and 14 January from the hon. Member for Totnes about the (a) Totnes and District Show and (b) Kingsbridge Show regarding the range of measures put in place by her Department since the foot and mouth outbreak; and if she will make a statement. [43138]

Mr. Morley [holding reply 19 March 2002]: A reply was sent on 19 March covering both letters. I am sorry that the honourable member's Parliamentary Question was not answered as soon as the letter was sent.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the hon. Member for Shrewsbury and Atcham's letters dated 30 January, 12 February and 14 March and the letters from the Shrewsbury Chronicle dated 11 January, 15 March and 22 March concerning the Bale Us Out campaign sent to the Secretary of State for the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions. [830]

Mr. Morley: We have been unable to trace copies of the correspondence referred to.

Recycling

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to encourage the recycling of (a) waste plastic and (b) waste silage film from farms. [48260]

Mr. Meacher: Waste plastic packaging, of which some 1.7 million tonnes is expected to arise in the UK waste stream this year, is one of the materials covered by the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997 (as amended). Since the introduction of these Regulations in 1997, and in particular the recovery and recycling targets for packaging waste which took effect in 1998, the amount of plastic packaging waste recycled has risen from 7 per cent in 1998 to 12 per cent at the end of 2000. Final outturn figures for 2001 are not yet available, but we expect this to have risen to around 15 per cent last year.

We will be addressing the question of how to deal with waste non-packaging farm plastics, including waste silage film from farms, in the forthcoming consultation document on agricultural waste. We will consider whether a statutory scheme should be introduced in the light of responses to this consultation exercise.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Press Officers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many press officers there were in her Department on (a) 1 May 1997 and (b) the latest available date. [46881]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding reply 10 April]: The average number of staff within the Department for Education and Employment/Department for Education and Skills Press Office for 1997 and 2002 are:

Year	Press Office Total
1997–1998	20.5
2001–2002*	23.0

*Excludes five members of staff transferred to the Department for Work and Pensions as part of the Machinery of Government changes following the general election.

Graduate Earnings

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the average level of graduate earnings, broken down by social class. [49804]

Margaret Hodge [holding reply 17 April]: The table below shows the estimated average gross weekly earnings of graduates with a first degree and in full-time employment. The figures include all graduates who are currently in the labour market and employed full-time, irrespective of age and how long ago they graduated.

Current socio-economic classification	Average gross weekly earnings of graduates in full-time employment
Higher managerial and professional	£730
Lower managerial and professional	£520
Intermediate occupations	£310
Lower supervisory and technical	£410
Semi-routine occupations	£270
Routine occupations	£240
Never worked, unemployed and not elsewhere classified	£230
All	£570

Business Development Unit

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many civil servants are employed in the Business Development Unit in her Department; what the Unit's annual budget is; and if she will make a statement on the Unit's activities. [50598]

Mr. Timms: The Business Development Unit operates under contract to my Department and is staffed mainly by non-civil-servants, but currently includes one civil servant on secondment from the Department. Its budget for 2002–03 is £482,278. The Unit's role is to manage and develop relationships with appropriate key business partners, promoting their understanding of and responses to our educational policies, and securing sponsorship and other support for specific national projects particularly for the schools sector.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many staff were involved in each of the last three years in preparing draft answers to written parliamentary questions; [49154]

(2) what the cost was to her Department of answering written parliamentary questions in 2001; and how that cost was calculated. [49112]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 17 April, Official Report, column 929W by my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House of Commons. Since the election the hon. Member has tabled 225 questions to this Department.

Advertising

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost was of media advertising in each of the past five parliamentary Sessions including the current session, for her Department in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Northern Ireland; and for the last two parliamentary Sessions and the current parliamentary Session, what the media advertising expenditure was per month in (i) England, (ii) Wales and (iii) Northern Ireland. [37414]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department does not target Wales and Northern Ireland with its advertising. This means that regional media outside England is not used for Departmental advertising. However, our campaigns do unavoidably receive some coverage in Wales and Northern Ireland through the use of national newspapers, satellite television and other national media which reaches outside England.

It is not possible to provide the information as requested by Parliamentary session, or by month, except at disproportionate cost. The figures by financial year are as follows:

1997–98	9,992
1998–99	15,673
1999–00	11,900
2000–01	29,066
2001–02 (to date)	17,665

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Departmental Events

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer of 26 March, Official Report, column 795W, on departmental events, how many such events have taken place on departmental premises in each of the last four years; and at what cost to public funds. [50395]

Ms Hewitt: No central records are kept that would enable the information to be supplied, and it could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Publicity Expenditure

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer of 26 March 2002, Official Report, column 793W, on publicity expenditure, how much money her Department has spent on advertising since May 1997. [50396]

Ms Hewitt: DTI spending on advertising through the Central Office of Information from 1 April 1997 to 31 March 2002 has been £29,614,332.

Bankruptcy

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the percentage change was in the unit cost of administering bankruptcy and compulsory liquidation in December 2002 by comparison with (a) December 2000 and (b) December 1999. [47339]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The unit cost of case administration in December 2001 had (a) increased by 2.7 per cent in comparison with December 2000 and (b) increased by 2.6 per cent in comparison with December 1999. The increase was principally the result of the cost of IT investment and change.

National Australia Bank

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make representations on behalf of Clydesdale Bank employees and other UK staff whose jobs are under threat from plans by National Australia Bank to cut its European workforce; and if she will make a statement. [50573]

Alan Johnson: Whilst job losses are always of great concern, this is a commercial matter for the firm concerned and I have no plans to make representations.

Biotechnological Co-operation (Israel)

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the objectives are of the Britech programme of biotechnological co-operation with Israel; how many (a) British and (b) Israeli companies are involved; what the cost is of the programme; and what monitoring is undertaken to ensure that companies and individuals located in the illegal Israeli settlements in the West Bank and Gaza are not involved. [49736]

Ms Hewitt: The Britain-Israel Technology Fund "Britech" was established by an intergovernmental Agreement between the UK and Israel in May 1999 and each country is contributing £7.75 million over five years. The objectives are to encourage and support alliances between private sector businesses in the UK and Israel, for joint industrial research and development and subsequent joint management and marketing of new products. To date, 12 projects, each involving one UK and one Israeli company have been approved and £4.74 million have been committed. Of these, 4 projects are in the area of biotechnology and £1.71 million have been committed. Project proposals are presented to the Britech Board for approval and details of the location of the participants are included. The Britech Chief Executive advises the Board of potentially sensitive projects. No projects are located in settlements in the West Bank or Gaza.

Assisted Areas

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the rates averaged over the three years used for the purpose of formulating the assisted areas map were for (a) the Isle of Wight, (b) the Isle of Thanet, (c) England and (d) the United Kingdom of (i) employment, (ii) residence-based unemployment, (iii) workforce-based unemployment and (iv) manufacturing employment share; and what the standard deviation was for each of the purposes of the European Commission's regional aid guidelines. [51004]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 18 April 2002]: The following figures were calculated for the purposes of the regional aid guidelines:

Per cent.

	Estimate of employment rate	Estimate of residential unemployment	Estimate of workforce unemployment	Manufacturing employment share
Isle of Wight	69.4	10.2	10.4	17.4
Thanet, Sandwich and Worth	72.8	10.7	12.5	20.0
Great Britain	73.6	7.7	6.9	18.3
Great Britain excluding Article 87(3)(a) areas	74.2	7.6	6.6	18.1
Standard deviation	6.0	2.6	2.6	8.2

These numbers are not National Statistics, though they were derived from National Statistics sources. The calculations for Thanet also included Sandwich and Worth wards in Dover, and total figures were calculated for Great Britain rather than for England or the United Kingdom.

Supermarket Competition

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will investigate the competition implications of supermarkets' refusal to accept meat from UK-registered low throughput abbatoirs. [48269]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Product sourcing decisions are normally a commercial matter for the company concerned. However, if these do raise competition concerns, they should be put to the Director General of Fair Trading, who is responsible for investigating complaints about anti-competitive behaviour.

Food Safety (Toys)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will set up a joint working group of her Department and the Food Standards Agency to undertake a risk assessment of toys embedded in foodstuff items. [45764]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have no plans to do so. Research commissioned by my Department provided no evidence to suggest that toys marketed with foodstuffs pose a greater risk to children than other small toys. The European Commission has also looked at this issue and reached the same conclusion.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures she has taken to encourage retailers to make an assessment of the risk of toys embedded in foodstuff items. [45763]

Miss Melanie Johnson: It is for suppliers—manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers—to take appropriate measures, within the limits of their activities, to ensure that the products they supply to consumers are safe. Risk assessments are generally carried out by the manufacturer of the final product.

All toys supplied in the UK must satisfy the essential safety requirements of the Toys (Safety) Regulations 1995 which implement the European Directive on the safety of toys. The Directive is under review and we will give careful consideration to any proposals put forward regarding toys supplied with foodstuffs and warning labels.

Business Mergers

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what changes to UK law she is considering following the merger between P&O Princess and Royal Caribbean Cruises. [45362]

Miss Melanie Johnson: This is a proposed merger which is presently being considered under the merger provisions of the Fair Trading Act 1973. Further comment would not be appropriate at this stage.

Postal Services

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions have taken place with the Dutch Postal Service about the future of Consignia; and if she will make a statement. [48635]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Consignia took part in discussions about a possible merger of Consignia's postal activities with the Dutch Postal Service (TPG). However, no satisfactory agreement was reached and Ministers therefore agreed with the company that discussions should cease. It has been the policy of successive Governments not to go into the detail of such commercially confidential matters.

Since the government has given Consignia commercial freedom, within the public sector, it is entirely appropriate that Consignia has been considering its commercial strategy, including the possibility of relationships or ventures with other operators.

Chemical Industry

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her policy is towards the proposals contained in the EC White Paper, Strategy for a Future Chemicals Policy; and if she will make a statement. [48928]

Ms Hewitt: The UK Government supports the aims and objectives of the EU Chemicals Strategy. We wish to see a workable strategy that protects the environment and human health by targeting chemicals of most concern through the authorisation process while at the same time minimising animal testing, encouraging innovation and maintaining the competitiveness of the chemicals industry. We support the addition to the authorisation process of chemicals that are at the same time persistent, bioaccumulative and toxic (PBTs) and that are very persistent and very bioaccumulative (vPvB), once the necessary criteria for identification of PBTs and vPvBs are established; and also the inclusion of known endocrine disruptors when agreed scientifically valid test methods and criteria are established to identify these substances.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the impact on the UK chemicals industry of the EC White Paper, Strategy for a Future Chemicals Policy. [48929]

Ms Hewitt: The White Paper estimates that testing costs to industry in the EU would be 2.1 billion euros over 11 years and that 190 extra staff will be needed at the European Chemicals Bureau. No extra costs are envisaged for regulatory authorities and the Commission argues that a saving in industry human resources can be expected. An initial Regulatory Impact Assessment carried out on behalf of the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs suggests that the costs to the UK might be in the order of £760 million (about 1.2 billion euros). The consultants Risk and Policy Analysists Limited are currently carrying out a Business Impact Assessment on behalf of the Commission for the whole of the EU. This report is due to be published next month.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the terms of reference are for the Chemical Innovation and Growth Team; and if she will make a statement. [49856]

Ms Hewitt: The terms of reference for the Chemicals Innovation and Growth Team are that it will evaluate the key factors that will impact on the chemicals industry globally and identify the opportunities and challenges for the UK; formulate a vision of what the future chemicals industry might look like and how to get there; and make recommendations to industry, Government and others for specific actions.

The Chemicals Innovation and Growth Team consists of representatives from the chemicals industry and other key stakeholders and is chaired by Byron Grote of BP Chemicals. It is focusing on four major areas: innovation; regulation and reputation; customers and markets; and skills and competences. It will report later this year.

Data Protection Act

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she is taking to control the activities of businesses which represent themselves as public agencies enforcing the requirements of the Data Protection Act 1998. [49903]

Mr. Wills: I refer the hon Member to my replies to the hon. Member for Batley and Spen (Mr. Wood) of 5 February 2002, Official Report, columns 906–907W; and the hon Member for Weston-super-Mare (Mr. Cotter) of 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 196W.

WALES

Consultants

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many contracts the Wales Office has with consultants; what level of professional indemnity insurance is standard in contracts with small consultants; whether he can make exceptions to the level of professional indemnity insurance; and what recent discussions he has had with other Government departments about the level of professional indemnity insurance. [50835]

Mr. Murphy [holding answer 18 April 2002]: My Department currently has one contract. There is no standard level of insurance required, it would depend on the nature and purpose of the contract.

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the cost-effectiveness of the Environment Act 1995 (Commencement No. 20 and Saving Provision) (Wales) Order 2001; and if he will make a statement. [51127]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The essential purpose of the Order was to bring into force, in Wales, the provisions of the Environment Act 1995 relating to the remediation of contaminated land. As such, and having regard to information I received from the National Assembly for Wales, I was satisfied that it raised no untoward financial implications.

The detailed implementation of these provisions is a matter for the National Assembly.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the cost-effectiveness of the Artificial Insemination of Cattle (Emergency Licences) (Wales) Regulations 2001; and if he will make a statement. [51128]

Mr. Paul Murphy: That is a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

General Affairs Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the outcome was of the General Affairs Council held in Brussels on 15 to 16 April; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if he will make a statement. [50858]

Peter Hain: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs represented the UK at the General Affairs Council (GAC) in Luxembourg on 15 April. The Council adopted the "A" points listed in document 7057/02. It also noted the resolutions, decisions and opinions adopted by the European Parliament listed in the documents 7059/02, 7060/02 and 7061/02. Copies of these documents will be placed in the Library of the House. No formal votes were taken. Council Conclusions were adopted by consensus.

Work in other Council formations

The Council noted recent developments in the Transport, Telecommunications and Agriculture Councils.

Enlargement

The Council welcomed progress made in the accession negotiations. It underlined the importance of establishing EU Common Positions on the remaining chapters in order to keep to the timetable for conclusion of the negotiations.

Staff regulations

Commission Vice-President Kinnock outlined progress on EU institutional personnel policy reform and reminded the Council of the reform objectives: to introduce a more streamlined career structure, modernise pay and pension systems, and to safeguard ethical and professional standards.

The Council supported the Commission's aims to make its personnel policy more efficient, transparent, accountable and meritocratic and congratulated the Commission on work done so far.

EU Action Plan on the fight against terrorism

The Presidency briefed Partners on progress in implementation of the EU Action Plan. In particular, it focussed on implementation of UNSCR 1373, improving links between police and the judiciary in Member States (including Europol and Eurojust) and co-operation with third countries.

Illegal immigration

The Council discussed methods of combating illegal immigration including policing sea borders more effectively. This followed presentations by Italy and the Commission. The Council stressed the need for close, effective co-operation with countries of origin. Conclusions on these lines were adopted. It was agreed that the EU should strive to improve the speed and effectiveness of its actions and should implement the measures outlined in the Comprehensive Plan, adopted in February 2002, by harnessing all external relations instruments available in addition to those provided by the immigration policy framework. The Council welcomed the Commission's proposal to convene a high level meeting to address these issues. It highlighted the gravity of the situation, and the human rights violations which resulted from illegal immigration and trafficking in human beings.

Wider Europe: relations between the future enlarged EU and its Eastern neighbours

At the Presidency's invitation I outlined the case for the EU to consider how it could make more effective its relations with the EU's post-enlargement eastern neighbours, Ukraine, Belarus and Moldova. The need for further thinking on this was widely endorsed. The Commission agreed to come forward with a Communication, in co-operation with the High Representative. The Council welcomed Commission and High Representative plans to contribute to the debate on strengthening relations during the second half of 2002.

India/ Pakistan

At UK request, the Council discussed the continuing India-Pakistan tensions and expressed concern at sectarian violence in Gujarat. It welcomed the prospect of early visits to the region by the High Representative, Javier Solana, and Commissioner Patten.

EU/ Switzerland relations

The Council welcomed the Commission's adoption of draft positions on the outstanding negotiating mandates for sectoral agreements between the EU and Switzerland and called for them to be finalised as swiftly as possible. The Council urged the Swiss authorities to make progress quickly in negotiations on combating fraud and called on the Presidency and Commission to pursue these aims also at senior levels.

European Security and Defence Policy (ESDP)

The Council reaffirmed its commitment to overcoming outstanding issues on EU-NATO co-operation, including "Berlin-plus". It also debated the possibility of a future EU operation in the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

Middle East

Ministers discussed at length the latest diplomatic efforts to achieve a cease-fire and withdrawal of Israeli troops from Palestinian-controlled areas. Ministers reiterated their support for the US Secretary of State's mission to the region.

Western Balkans

Commissioner Patten presented the first annual report on the Stabilisation and Association Process for South East Europe.

The Council adopted Conclusions welcoming the Commission's presentation of this work and covering the countries of the region. In particular, the Council was encouraged by the willingness of the Serbian and Montenegran parliaments to restructure their bilateral relations and to draft a new constitutional charter by June this year. The EU offered its assistance to aid these objectives. The Council welcomed progress toward concluding a Stabilisation and Association Agreement, but noted that continuing co-operation with the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY) remained crucial to Serbia and Montenegro's EU aspirations.

Bosnia and Herzegovina

The Council welcomed agreement reached by Bosnia and Herzegovina political leaders on the Constitutional Court decision on constituent peoples and called for urgent adoption of the amendments in full compliance with the agreement.

The Council also requested full and prompt compliance by the Bosnian authorities with the remaining elements of the road map, in the context of the Stabilisation and Association Process. It also asked authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina to co-operate fully with the International Criminal Tribunal.

Right of return

The Council requested governments across the region to step up efforts to allow for the return of displaced persons.

EU relations with Central American and Andean community countries

The Council agreed with the Commission's intention to submit a proposal for negotiating directives, aimed at deepening the bilateral relationships between the EU and these regions through the conclusion of political dialogue and co-operation agreements.

Euro-Mediterranean Partnership

The Council endorsed the Presidency's proposals for EU positions for the Valencia Euro-Mediterranean conference of 22–23 April.

Afghanistan

Ministers met Afghan Foreign Minister, Dr. Abdullah Abdullah briefly at the GAC.

The Council reiterated that international assistance to Afghanistan should be based on territorial integrity and be conditional on implementation of the Bonn agreement objectives (peace, representational governance, elimination of terrorism and of drug production/ trafficking). The EU emphasised the necessity of conducting the Emergency Loya Jirga selection process in political neutrality.

Zimbabwe

The Council expressed deep concern at reports of continuing state-sanctioned violence against opposition supporters and condemned continuing widespread human rights abuse.

The Council agreed to impose a moratorium on bilateral ministerial level contacts with Zimbabwe until further notice, exempting political dialogue intended to promote democracy, human rights and the rule of law. It awaits with interest the report from the Troika visit to the SADC region and signs of a clear commitment by the Government of Zimbabwe to ending political violence, respecting basic democratic norms, and engaging quickly and constructively in efforts at national reconciliation.

Zimbabwe

James Purnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Zimbabwe was discussed during the EU General Affairs Council on 15 April. [51811]

Mr. Straw: On 15 April, the EU General Affairs Council imposed a moratorium on bilateral ministerial level contacts with Zimbabwe until further notice, except for the conduct of political dialogue intended to promote democracy, human rights, and the rule of law in Zimbabwe, and on issues relating to regional security or for addressing humanitarian needs. The Council decided to defer consideration of additional targeted measures against the Government of Zimbabwe until its next meeting in May. An EU Troika will visit Southern Africa soon, to discuss the situation in Zimbabwe with SADC countries (not Zimbabwe itself).

We have made clear that the people of Zimbabwe have been denied their fundamental right to choose by whom they are governed. We support efforts by South Africa and Nigeria to facilitate dialogue between ZANU(PF) and MDC, to try to restore democracy and the rule of law in Zimbabwe. We remain in continuous contact with our EU, US, Commonwealth and SADC partners.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Ministerial Private Offices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General what the running costs were of (a) her Ministers' private offices, separately identifying expenditure on staff and (b) her Department in each year from May 1997 to the nearest date for which the information is available. [41034]

The Solicitor-General: Of the Departments for which the Attorney General is responsible, only my own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, has a small private office of four staff which serves both the Attorney General and me. The cost of running the private office cannot be separated from the cost of running the Department as a whole and so the figures provided below relate only to part (b) of the question. The figures provided below include staff costs.

Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers

1997–98	2,477,000
1998–99	2,292,000
1999–00	2,150,000
2000–01	2,327,000

Treasury Solicitor's Department (including Government Property Lawyers)

1997–98	23,751,000
1998–99	25,016,000
1999–00	29,160,000
2000–01	27,989,000

Crown Prosecution Service

1997–98	368,018,000
1998–99	368,411,000
1999–00	381,683,000
2000–01	406,864,000

1997–98	9,301,000
1998–99	10,685,000
1999–00	11,223,000
2000–01	12,159,000

Sex Abuse Investigations

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General how many (a) complaints and (b) items of correspondence have been received by (a) the Attorney General, (b) the Solicitor-General and (c) the Crown Prosecution Service in relation to historical sex abuse investigations in the United Kingdom in (i) 1999, (ii) 2000 and (iii) 2001. [49830]

The Solicitor-General: Correspondence and complaints sent to the Law Officers are recorded primarily by the name of the sender. They are not categorised by recipient nor by subject in the manner set out in the question. The CPS has no central records of complaints or correspondence. The information requested could only be obtained by examining all correspondence received since 1998. This would incur disproportionate costs.

Departmental Report

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General when the 2002 Departmental report will be published. [49594]

The Solicitor-General [holding reply 17 April 2002]: The 2002 Departmental Reports will be published by 31 May 2002.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General, pursuant to her answer of 11 February, Official Report, column 1112W, on mobile phones, how many staff of the Crown Prosecution Service were provided with mobile telephones and other associated equipment in (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000, (c) 2000–01 and (d) 2001–02. [50552]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 18 April 2002]: The Crown Prosecution Service provided the following numbers of mobile phones with associated equipment in 1998–9, and subsequent financial years.

	Phones In Circulation Throughout Year
1998–1999	131
1999–2000	336
2000–2001	404
2001–2002	507

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Solicitor-General how many special advisers there were in her Department; and what their salaries were in each of the last five years. [46956]

The Solicitor-General: [holding answer 9 April 2002]: None of the departments for which the Attorney General is responsible employ special advisers or have done so in the last five years.

TREASURY

Taxation

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) audits and (b) investigations have been conducted by the Inland Revenue of taxpayers with a gross annual income of (a) £15,000 or less, (b) £15,001 to £25,000, (c) £25,001 to £50,000, (d) £50,001 to £100,000, (e) £100,001 to £200,000, (f) £200,001 to £500,000, (g) £500,001 to £1,000,000 and (h) more than £1,000,000, for the most recent available accounting period. [49297]

Dawn Primarolo: [holding answer 15 April 2002]: The Inland Revenue does not have figures analysed in this way. The Board of Inland Revenue publishes the results of its work tackling non-compliance in its annual report, which is available in the Library. The latest figures are in Appendix 2 and cover the year to 31 March 2001.

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated annual total cost of non-compliance with Inland Revenue laws and rules in each of the last five years. [49294]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 April 2002]: There is no reliable measure of the total income tax and national insurance contributions lost to evasion. In his report, published in March 2000, Lord Grabiner QC commented on the scale of the hidden economy and said:

"By its nature, the size of the informal economy is hard to measure. Most estimates are based on analysing high-level economic aggregates, such as labour market statistics or income and expenditure surveys, and calculate the result as a percentage of GDP. However there is research which suggests that these estimates tend to be exaggerated."

"It would be impractical to arrive at a precise and meaningful figure as to the scale of the problem without a considerable investment of time and resources."

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Royal Family

Norman Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what his duties are in relation to Royal issues. [49938]

Mr. Wills: None of the Parliamentary Secretaries in the Lord Chancellor's Department has delegated responsibility for Royal matters.

Energy Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on energy costs incurred by his Department in each of the last 10 years. [42434]

Mr. Wills: I apologise for the delay in answering this question. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Rural Affairs on 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 268W.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for the five largest PFI contracts let by his Department in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement; [45598]

(2) what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for PPP contracts let by his Department in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [45613]

Mr. Wills: The only private finance initiative (PFI) or public private partnership contract signed by this Department in the last four years to have gone through a preferred bidder stage was the PFI contract for the Probate Records Centre. There was no change in contract value between the preferred bidder stage and contract signature in July 1999. PFI contracts for magistrates' courts have not been included in this reply because they are let by local authorities.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the public service agreement targets which have been revised and those which have been introduced since the publication of the 2001 departmental report. [43260]

Mr. Wills: The 2001 departmental report provides details of progress against Public Service Agreement targets developed under the Comprehensive Spending Review 1998 and lists the published Public Service Agreement targets for Spending Review 2000. From 1 April 2001 the Spending Review 2000 Public Service Agreement, which covers the work of the Lord Chancellor's Department until March 2004, replaced the Comprehensive Spending Review targets.

Since the publication of the 2001 departmental report, no further Public Service Agreement targets have been introduced. In the first year of Spending Review 2000, one Public Service Agreement target has been updated (WA 349, 8 May 2001).

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Support Agency

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to seek compensation from the Affinity Consortium for the delay to the Child Support Reforms New Rules Implementation IT project. [46316]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 26 March 2002]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 18 April 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply by me.

You ask what plans the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions has to seek compensation from the Affinity Consortium for the delay to the Child Support Reforms New Rules Implementation IT project.

We will take stock of the position when testing is complete and we are able to recommend to the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions a revised commencement date for the next phase of Child Support Reforms.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many CSA cases have been referred to the Parliamentary Ombudsman in each year since the creation of the agency from (a) the Angus constituency, (b) Scotland and (c) the UK. [31582]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Michael Weir, dated 18 April 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply by me.

You have asked how many CSA cases have been referred to the Parliamentary Ombudsman in each year since the creation of the Agency from (a) the Angus Constituency, (b) Scotland and (c) the UK.

The Table on the attached annex provides this information.

The Parliamentary Ombudsman started recording CSA details late 1995. As details are validated on completion of the cases, due to the backlogs at that time, the first year the Office was confident of accurate figures was 1997 when Agency details were first published in its Annual Report. Therefore figures listed prior to 1997 should be viewed as incomplete records of those years.

I hope this is helpful.

Annex 1

Number of CSA cases referred to Parliamentary Ombudsman

Year	Angus (Constituency cases)	Scotland cases	Total UK Cases
1993–1994	0	1	7
1994–1995	1	8	88
1995–1996	0	34	118
1996–1997	1	28	102

Annex 1
Number of CSA cases referred to Parliamentary Ombudsman

Year	Angus (Constituency cases)	Scotland cases	Total UK Cases

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people are registered with the Child Support Agency; how many people registered in (a) January and (b) February; and how many are forecast to register in April. [45344]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Nigel Evans, dated 18 April 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child support Agency promised a substantive reply by me.

You ask how many people are registered with the Child support agency; how many people registered in (a) January and (b) February; and how many are forecast to register in April.

The live and assessed caseload for the Agency up to February 2002 was 1,077,800 cases. The number of parents with care who made an application for a maintenance assessment to the Agency in January and February 2002 was 34,086 and 29,681 respectively.

We forecast that a further 30,000 parents with care will make an application to the Agency in April 2002.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the new CSA computer system was subject to OGC Gateway reviews. [47970]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Mark Todd, dated 18 April 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply by me.

You ask whether the new CSA computer system was subject to OGC Gateway reviews.

The development of the CSA computer system is part of a broader programme to implement the Child Support Reform programme. Two OGC Gateway reviews of that programme have taken place. The first was from the 23 to 27 April 2001 and the second was from the 22 to 25 January 2002.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many departures from Child Support Agency assessments have been (a) applied for and (b) approved in each year since the scheme's inception. [51061]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Andrew Turner, dated 18 April 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply by me.

You ask, how many departures from Child Support Agency assessments have been (a) applied for and (b) approved in each year since the scheme's inception.

The table set out below shows the number of Departure applications and awards from the inception of the Departures scheme in December 1996.

Figures are for year ending March unless otherwise specified.

Year ending	December 1996 to March 1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	April 2001 to February 2002	Total
Departure Applied for	3,648	21,918	14,889	14,853	17,100	11,840	84,248
Departure Awarded	114	2,360	3,162	6,393	7,049	6,116	25,194

Since April 2000 the Agency has been recording figures of departure applications through the computer system. Figures prior to April 2000 were recorded manually and may be less accurate.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many parents without care have failed to pay the necessary maintenance to parents with care for (a) six to 12 weeks, (b) 12 to 26 weeks and (c) more than 26 weeks in each year since the creation of the Child Support Agency; and what proportion they represent of all parents against whom maintenance orders are kept. [51063]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

I am sorry but information is not available in the format you have requested.

The table set out below shows the numbers of full, partial and non compliant non-resident parents for each year end (March). I am unable to supply the same information for earlier years as we did not gather information in that way.

Non-Resident Parent Case Compliance

	2000	2001	2002
Full Compliance	165,820 (49.3%)	185,900 (52.9%)	211,000 (60.9%)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the (a) planned cost was and (b) current estimated cost is of the Child Support. Reforms New Rules Implementation IT project. [46315]

Malcolm Wicks [holding reply 26 March 2002]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 18 April 2002:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in replying to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply by me.

You ask what the (a) planned cost was and (b) current estimated cost is of the Child Support Reforms New Rules Implementation IT project and

The planned total cost of the project to implement Child Support Reform over the 10 year period of the business case was £651 million.

I am sorry that I cannot provide the planned and current estimated cost of the IT component as it is commercially confidential. As this is a PFI contract and subject to performance criteria the amount of payment will be affected by the level of performance achieved.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

ITV Digital

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the implications for future broadcasting rights contracts of ITV Digital's stated inability to meet the terms of its agreement with the Football League. [50897]

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the implications for future broadcasting rights contracts of ITV Digital's stated inability to meet the terms of its agreement with the Football League. [50898]

Dr. Howells: Subject to the requirements of the 1996 Broadcasting Act, relating to "listed events", contracts for the broadcasting rights to sports events are matters for commercial negotiations between the rightsholders and the broadcasters concerned.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what meetings she has had with representatives of (a) Granada plc and (b) Carlton Communications plc since ITV Digital's entry into administration; [50710]

Siobhain McDonagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received from the Chairmen and chief executives of (a) Granada plc and (b) Carlton Communications plc since 27 March. [50668]

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with representatives of Granada plc and Carlton Communications plc since ITV Digital went into administration. [50847]

Dr. Howells: Over the past weeks I have been kept closely in touch by all sides involved in the ITV Digital negotiations. However the decisions taken by ITV Digital are commercial decisions for them, and them alone, to take.

Professional Indemnity Insurance

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many contracts her Department has with consultants; what level of professional indemnity insurance is standard in contracts with small consultants; whether she can make exceptions to the level of professional indemnity insurance; and what recent discussions she has had with other Government departments about the level of professional indemnity insurance. [50825]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 18 April 2002]: The DCMS does not maintain a register of contracts under £5,000 in value. Over that value there are fifteen current contracts in which contract conditions stipulate "that policies of insurance should be effected and maintained providing an adequate level of cover in respect of all risks". To date there have been no discussions with other Government Departments concerning levels of professional indemnity insurance.

Religious Broadcasting

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport by what criteria she will assess the continuing need for the statutory ban on Christian broadcasters holding different categories of broadcasting licence when reaching a conclusion on these issues prior to the publication of the Communications Bill. [50579]

Dr. Howells: In considering whether to restrict religious bodies holding broadcasting licences, the Government takes into account, amongst other things, the need to promote the efficient use of scarce resources in order to safeguard pluralism, cater for a variety of tastes and interests and avoid discrimination between the many different religions practised in the United Kingdom.

Television Licences

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the circumstances under which a television licensing officer can enter a private dwelling. [51073]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 18 April 2002]: TV Licensing officials may enter a private dwelling only with the consent of the occupier or if authorised to do so by a warrant issued by a magistrate. Under section 15(1) of the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1949 (as amended), a magistrate may issue such a warrant if satisfied, by information provided on oath, that there is reasonable ground for suspecting that an offence under the Act has been or is being committed.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the circumstances in which the owner of a television in the United Kingdom (a) does not and (b) does require a television licence. [51072]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 18 April 2002]: A television licence is required to instal or use television receiving apparatus to receive television programme services, as defined by section 2(4) of the Broadcasting Act 1990. The BBC, as Licensing Authority, has responsibility for determining television licensing requirements in individual cases, subject to the ultimate authority of the courts.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many private finance initiative projects have been subject to refinancing after the contracts have been signed; and what has been the financial effect in each case. [50279]

Dr. Howells: None.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the target has been in each of the last five years for efficiency savings as a percentage of total running costs for each of the non-departmental public bodies for which she is responsible; and if the target was met. [49640]

Dr. Howells: Information about the efficiency targets and performance of the Department's sponsored bodies can be found in their published Annual Reports, which may be obtained from the Library of the House.

Creche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her answer of 22 March 2002, Official Report, column 575W, regarding creche facilities, how many places were taken up in 2001–02 at the four central London sites to which she refers. [50427]

Dr. Howells: During 2001–02 a total of five places were taken up at the four central London sites referred to.

Non-Departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost in 2001–02 was of the pay increase to staff in her Department, agencies and the non-departmental public bodies for which she is responsible; and what the cost of the forthcoming increase will be in 2002–03. [50403]

Dr. Howells: With regard to pay settlements made in 2001 by the sponsored bodies for which information is available, estimates of the annual cost of the pay increase at the time of the settlement are set out below. The average headline settlement was 3.48 per cent. The Department cannot give costs for 2002–03 because pay increases have not yet been agreed.

Televised Music

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will introduce proposals in the Communications Bill for the Government to take responsibility for reviewing the amount of televised music on terrestrial television. [48737]

Dr. Howells: The Government's proposals for the future regulation of communications will be set out in a draft Communications Bill which we expect to publish shortly. It is, however, a long-standing principle that the Government does not itself take responsibility for the scheduling or content of broadcasting and we do not propose to do so.

Bishopsgate Goods Yard

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what communication she has received from the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions since 20 January about Bishopsgate Goods Yard. [37872]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and DCMS officials have had contact with DTLR Ministers and officials since 20 January about Bishopsgate Goods Yard.

Discussions centred on the impact of any listing of the Braithwaite Viaduct or the buildings in the Goods Yard on the new East London Line Extension project. The Secretary of State's decision to add the Braithwaite Viaduct to the list of buildings of special architectural or historic interest was announced on 8 March.

HEALTH

Overseas Treatment

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients received treatment abroad at the direction and expense of the NHS in (a) 2002 to date and (b) each of the last three years. [47648]

Mr. Hutton: Under the pilot scheme to treat NHS patients overseas 181 patients received treatment overseas between 18 January and 12 April 2002.

The E112 scheme is the process through which patients may receive treatment in other European Economic Area (EEA) countries at the expense of the NHS. Applications are almost always instigated by patients rather than at the direction of the NHS. 310 applications for treatment were approved between 1 January and 12 April 2002. The figures for the last three years were as follows:

2001	1140

All the above figures are for Great Britain and rounded to the nearest 10. They relate to applications approved during the relevant period, rather than individuals treated; some applications will have been in respect of the same individual. Moreover, some treatments approved in one year may have taken place the following year.

Websites

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 27 February, Official Report, column 1405W, concerning the Departmental website, what the reasons are for the increase in (i) hosting and maintenance charges and (ii) website development costs. [48251]

Yvette Cooper: The increase in hosting and maintenance charges for the Departmental website between 1998 and 2002 was caused by two factors:

(a) the number of databases made available increased from one at the beginning of 1998 to around sixty in 2002. Hosting for each is charged separately; and

(b) Office of Government Commerce's charging arrangements for website hosting and maintenance changed annually during the period 1998 to 2002.

The increase in website development costs was due to the following factors:

(a) The increase in size of the site from 100 to over 80,000 pages in the six years since its launch, and the increase in use of the Internet as a publishing vehicle for departmental publications, has meant that the information has had to be substantially reorganised.

(b) Other changes have been made in order to meet the Office of the e-Envoy's "Guidelines for UK government websites" on Accessibility and Usability.

(c) User research and ongoing customer and stakeholder feedback has prompted redesign work to improve the site's navigational structure, the search engine and the choice of document format available.

Violent Patients

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which health authorities have implemented schemes to provide safe havens in which violent patients can be treated. [47858]

Mr. Hutton: The Department issued Health Service Circular 2000–01 "Tackling violence towards GPs and their staff" to health authorities on 28 January 2000. Health authorities were asked to audit levels of violence, assess risk and put appropriate plans into place which address safer working, in close consultation with local medical committees (LMCs).

A recent survey of fifty LMCs found that 22 health authorities had provided advice on how to deal with violent patients; 10 had provided secure facilities for consultation and treatment of violent patients; 4 had other successful schemes in place; and 9 health authorities and LMCs had discussions in progress.

The following health authorities have secure facilities or other schemes in place:

Health Authority areas where secure facilities are provided:

Southampton

Suffolk

South Derbyshire

Liverpool

Avon

Nottingham

North Warwickshire

Hillingdon

Camden and Islington

Hampshire & Isle of Wight

Health Authority areas where other related schemes are in place:

East and West Kent

Lincolnshire

Wirral

Gloucestershire

Workforce Numbers Advisory Board

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what resources are used to enable the work of Workforce Numbers Advisory Board to continue. [47844]

Mr. Hutton: The Workforce Numbers Advisory Board (WNAB) is part of the Department's new workforce planning structures. It plays a key role in determining future commissioning levels and engaging the NHS in planning the future workforce.

It does not have a budget but is supported by civil servants and may call upon the resources of the Department to commission work as required.

Neo-natal Units

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many positions in neo-natal units in each health authority area have been vacant for over three months. [47872]

Mr. Hutton: Information about the number of vacant positions in neo-natal units is not collected. Staff for neo-natal units comprises neonatal nurses, midwives, paediatric nurses, other nursing staff and paediatricians. Vacancy information is only available for midwives and paediatric nurses and this is shown in the table.

Three month vacancies are vacancies as at 31 March 2001 which trusts are actively trying to fill, which had lasted for three months or more (wte).
Three month vacancy rates are three month vacancies expressed as a percentage of three month vacancies plus staff in post from the September 2000 non-medical workforce censuses (whole time equivalent).
Vacancy and staff in post numbers are rounded to the nearest ten.
Percentages are rounded to one decimal place.
* = figures where sum of staff in post and vacancies is less than 10.
Totals may not equal sum of component parts due to rounding.
HA figures are based on Trusts, and do not necessarily reflect the geographical provision of healthcare.
Due to rounding calculating the vacancy rates using the above data may not equal the actual vacancy rates. Staff in post is as at 30 September 2000.
Due to organisational changes between September 2000 and March 2001 the totals for East Surrey HA and West Sussex HA may not equal previously published data.
Due to a different method of rounding, figures may not equal previously published data.

Property Sales

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money has been raised through the auction of (a) empty and (b) surplus NHS property since the publication of the NHS National Plan. [47822]

Mr. Hutton: The "one-off auction of empty and surplus NHS property" referred to in the NHS Plan is currently proceeding as a Public Private Partnership disposal of the majority of the Department's retained estate which was left following establishment of National Health Service Trusts and the transfer of property to them.

This disposal has been advertised through the Official Journal of the European Community process, and an "Invitation to Negotiate' has been issued to four prospective partners.

In the meantime, since publication of the NHS Plan, disposals of empty and surplus property have realised some £280 million.

Cardiology Services

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were waiting for in-patient cardiology treatment in each quater since March 1997. [47842]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Inpatient Waiting List by Quarter—Cardiology & Cardiothoracic Surgery Specialties

Chlamydia

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the population of England has access to opportunistic chlamydia screening. [47849]

Yvette Cooper: The information is not collected centrally. A national chlamydia screening programme will start to be phased in later this year to reduce undiagnosed infections. The details of the programme are still being developed but will build on learning from the successful pilots in Portsmouth and the Wirral. The programme will involve opportunistic screening in healthcare settings such as community contraception and genitourinary medicine clinics.

Health Action Zones

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the performance of health action zones is monitored against the local priorities identified when the establishment of the first wave of health action zones was announced on 31 March 1998. [47021]

Mr. Hutton: Health Action Zones (HAZs) were initially set up to focus on local geographical or client group priorities. Until 31 March 2002, these were monitored by the lead health authority for the HAZ. From April 2002 onwards, principal responsibility for performance management of the National Health Service will be undertaken by the 28 new strategic health authorities.

Cancelled Operations

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he intends to take to broaden the definition of a cancelled operation. [47857]

Mr. Hutton: Data on cancelled operations are currently collected for last minute cancellations, where a hospital cancels a patient for non-clinical reasons on the day the patient is due to arrive or after arrival in hospital, and on where a hospital cancels a patient for non-clinical reasons on the day of surgery.

Data are also collected on the number of patients readmitted within 30 days of cancellation (Patients Charter standard) and within 28 days of cancellation (NHS Plan guarantee).

There are no current plans to broaden the definition of a cancelled operation.

NHS Local Improvement Finance Trust

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the activities of the NHS Local Improvement Finance Trust. [47821]

Mr. Hutton: The NHS Local Improvement Finance Trust (NHS LIFT) initiative was announced in the NHS Plan. The objective of this initiative is to contribute to the overall NHS Plan targets of refurbishing or replacing up to 3,000 premises and 500 new one stop primary care centres by December 2004.

The NHS LIFT approach will bring together a number of individual developments providing a more co-ordinated approach to service development as well as helping to reduce procurement costs. New buildings provided under LIFTs will also enable the co-location of GP and community services, and wherever possible the location of social care agencies.

As a first step, a new public private partnership, Partnerships for Health (PfH) was established between the Department and Partnerships UK in September 2001. PfH will help localities develop and establish local LIFT companies. These local companies will be owned jointly by PfH, the local health economy and the private sector, and will build and develop premises, which will be leased to GPs and other primary care users.

In February 2001 the Department prioritised an initial six LIFT schemes, and in January 2002 a further twelve LIFT schemes were identified. Further announcements will be made later this year about a third wave of sites.

Two of the first-wave schemes (East London and the City and Camden and Islington), recently issued tender documentation, and it is expected that the other four first-wave schemes will issue their documentation in the near future. The value of the initial investment requirement in East London & City is £62.5 million and in Camden & Islington is £17 million.

General Practitioners

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 March, Official Report, column 806W, on general practitioners, what amount of time he expects a GP appraiser to spend on appraisals every year which would otherwise be spent on patient care. [47444]

Mr. Hutton: The introduction of General Practitioner appraisal will not be to the detriment of patient care. Indeed, over time we expect GP appraisal to contribute towards improving the quality of National Health Service primary care services offered to local communities. Research suggests that it is reasonable for a primary care trust to expect a GP appraiser to undertake between 10 and 25 appraisals annually. GPs' contractual frameworks include provision spend time on activities other than direct patient care. It will, of course, not always be possible to accommodate all appraisal activity without reducing the time available to the individual GP appraiser for direct patient care. In such cases detailed arrangements will need to be agreed between the primary care trust, the GP appraiser and his/her practice or personal medical services pilot provider. But we have made it clear that all primary care trusts should have a funded policy on the provision of locum cover, to support the implementation of GP appraisal.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of the National Survey of GP Services. [46996]

Mr. Hutton: The cost of the National Survey of NHS Patients: 1998 General Practice survey was £788,000.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to complete his discussions with the Academy of Medical Royal Colleges to establish an evaluation process for international general practitioner recruitment; and when he expects such evaluation to commence. [47027]

Mr. Hutton: Discussions are underway with the Academy of Medical Royal Colleges. We aim to begin a full evaluation of the whole International Recruitment process later this year.

Overseas Recruitment

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) total number and (b) percentage is of overseas nurses working in the UK as a proportion of nursing staff, by regional health authority in (i) the NHS and (ii) agencies in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [48033]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

In order to practise as a nurse overseas applicants must register with the Nursing and Midwifery Council (NMC), formerly the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing Midwifery and Health Visiting. Overseas nurses registered with the NMC do not necessarily work in the National Health Service. The number of entrants to the register in the last three years are in the table below.

Overseas trained nurses and midwives registering with the UKCC

	1998–1999	1999–2000	2000–2001
Overseas nurses registered with the UKCC	3,621	5,945	8,403

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many overseas doctors there were working in the UK as a proportion of all doctors practising on NHS patients, broken down by regional health authority in (a) the NHS and (b) agencies in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [48034]

Mr. Hutton: Regional health authorities were abolished in 1996 and replaced by regional offices, the data has therefore been broken down by regional office. The Department does not collect data on the number of overseas doctors working in the UK broken down by agencies.

Available information is shown in the tables. One table contains headcount figures, the other table contains percentage figures.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much funding the Government plans to make available for research into a cure for cystic fibrosis; [47641]

(2) how much funding was made available for research into cystic fibrosis in each year from (a) 1992 to 2001. [47640]

Jacqui Smith: The Medical Research Council (MRC) is the main Government agency for research into the causes of and treatments for disease and receives its funding via the Department of Trade and Industry. The expenditure figures from 1992 to 1997 are not available. The MRC spend in each year from 1997 to 2001 is shown below:

1997–1998—£1.8 million
1998–1999—£1.9 million
1999–2000—£1.8 million
2000–2001—£1.5 million

The Department funds research to support policy and the delivery of effective practice in health and social care. The Department's expenditure since 1995 on directly commissioned research projects relating to cystic fibrosis is as follows:

1995–1996—£143,100
1996–1997—£50,300
1997–1998—£40,800
1998–1999—£8,300
1999–2000—£113,900
2000–2001—£71,700

In addition to specific projects, the Department also provides support funding for research commissioned by charities and the research councils that takes place in the NHS. Management of much of the research supported by National Health Service research and development funding is devolved and expenditure at project level is not held centrally by the Department but the total investment is considerably greater than just the spend on directly commissioned projects.

The MRC current support for cystic fibrosis includes work on gene therapy for cystic fibrosis.

It is not possible to predict what the future total level of Government expenditure will for cystic fibrosis research as new research proposals are regularly being considered and commissioned.

The MRC always welcomes high quality applications for research into any aspect of human health and these are judged in open competition with other demands in funding. Awards are made according to their scientific quality and importance to human health.

Blood Safety

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on blood safety in the NHS. [48577]

Yvette Cooper: About three million blood components are transfused to over a million National Health Service patients in the United Kingdom each year. This blood meets standards of safety that are among the best in the world. However, almost every medical treatment or intervention, including blood transfusion, is associated with some risk.

The recent annual study from SHOT (Serious Hazards of Transfusion) published on 10 April 2002 is extremely valuable in assessing the safety of blood transfusion and demonstrates that blood transfusion in the UK is very safe and becoming even safer with improving technology and clinical audit. Copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

The SHOT report demonstrates that serious adverse events associated with blood transfusion are rare. However many of them are avoidable. Improving patient safety, including reducing unintended harm to patients, is a major Government priority. The Department will be working with SHOT, the National Blood Service and the new National Patient Safety Agency on strategies to reduce the level of avoidable incidents associated with blood transfusion.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has conducted into transfusion-related acute lung injury with particular regard to blood donated by women who have had multiple births. [48578]

Yvette Cooper: The Department has not conducted specific research in this area. However, the National Blood Authority is investigating cases of transfusion related acute lung injury to inform research in this area. The National Blood Authority is also currently evaluating options for reducing the risk to patients from this syndrome.

NHS Managerial Staff

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many managerial staff are working in the NHS. [47652]

Mr. Hutton: The number of managers working within the Hospital and Community Health Services (HCHS) of the NHS is shown in the table.

The annual Department of Health census of General and Personal Medical Services staff does not provide a breakdown of managerial staff.

Mental Health

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he has taken to manage diversity within care services for (a) the elderly, (b) children and (c) people with mental health problems. [47626]

Jacqui Smith: Through the National Service Framework for Older People (published in 2001), "Quality Protects" (launched in 1998), and the National Service Framework for Mental Health (published in 1999), and related initiatives, the Government is ensuring that services for older people, children and adults with mental health problems respectively are developed so that all people who need support, no matter their background and personal characteristics, can be provided with appropriate and effective help. In addition, the Government has announced that a National Service Framework for Children is being developed.

Counselling Services

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of GP practices have a counselling service attached. [47733]

Mr. Hutton: Information about the number of counsellors employed in Primary Care is not collected centrally.

Information is available from independent research to show that approximately half of all GPs have access to counselling and psychological therapies.

Social Services

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what strategies his Department has in place to reduce the number of temporary staff working in the social services sector. [47624]

Jacqui Smith: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State launched a £1.5 million social work recruitment campaign on 19 October 2001. The campaign consists of national advertising, information leaflets, posters, local and national public relations activity, a help line which those interested in learning more about social work can contact for further information, and a dedicated website. It has three aims, to:

raise the number of people applying for social work training by 5000 by 2004; inform the public about what social workers actually do; make existing social workers realise that their work is valued.

As the aim of the campaign is to attract more people to work in social care, this should in the long term reduce vacancy rates and therefore the use of agency staff to cover vacancies.

The help line has so far received over 14,000 calls, and the website has had over 11,000 visitors. The second phase of the campaign will be launched in May.

Delayed Discharges

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital beds are occupied by elderly patients waiting to be transferred to residential care homes. [47622]

Jacqui Smith: The latest information about the numbers of hospital beds occupied by older people awaiting transfer to a residential care home has been placed in the Library.

Foster Carers

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reforms he is planning to the revenue support grant in relation to foster carers. [48696]

Jacqui Smith: The Government recognises that there are limitations to the existing Standard Spending Assessment system. That is why work is being carried out to develop a new system for 2003–4 that will be fairer and easier to understand. We have commissioned research to inform this review and we are at the early stages of discussing the findings with local government representatives. We will be consulting widely on a range of options before final decisions are taken.

Food Standards Agency

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Food Standards Agency is taking to tackle the food hygiene knowledge gap across the population. [49070]

Yvette Cooper: A key element in the Food Standard's Agency's target to reduce UK foodborne disease by 20 per cent by 2006 is a nationwide food hygiene campaign, launched on 11 February 2002, to help improve standards of food hygiene in catering premises and in the domestic setting. The campaign, which will have a five year duration, is aimed initially at the catering industry and will subsequently broaden out to include the general public.

The Agency is also actively involved in promoting food hygiene with teachers, school children and students. The Agency and a consortium of other bodies has been involved in the development of a new web based food hygiene education package for 14–24 year olds (www.Good2Eat.info) which was launched on 15 April and has benefited from European Union financing (as part of a Europe-wide campaign on food safety). The Food Standards Agency also houses the website for two other food hygiene teaching resources, originally developed by the Health Education Authority: "Aliens in Our Food"—aimed at children at secondary schools, and "Safe T and the H Squad"—aimed at children in junior schools.

A stakeholder workshop will be held on 7 May to consider the current level of knowledge about foodborne disease and hygiene in the home, to review current or recent Agency work and to identify any gaps in research or surveillance. The workshop will also provide an opportunity to consider how hygiene messages can be effectively targeted towards consumers.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the new Food Standards Agency-specific conference framework, referred to on page 41 of the 2001 report of the Food Standards Agency, was introduced by the summer of 2001. [49216]

Jacqui Smith: A competence framework specific to the Food Standards Agency was introduced in October 2001. This reflects the Agency's values and way of working.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the tailored management development programme of the Food Standards Agency referred to on page 41 of the 2001 report of the Food Standards Agency. [49215]

Yvette Cooper: The Food Standards Agency (FSA) management scheme, which was launched in October 2001, is a major part of the Agency's general training and development programme. It has been prepared to help equip all managers in the FSA with the relevant knowledge, skills and behaviours required to support the Agency's way of working and its core values.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the establishment of the baseline, referred to on page 41 of the 2001 report of the Food Standards Agency, in the context of the first staff survey conducted by the Agency. [49231]

Yvette Cooper: The first Food Standards Agency staff attitude survey was carried out in October 2000. The results were used as a baseline for comparison with the 2001 staff attitude survey, which took place at the end of 2001.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Service Delivery Agreement target to develop and implement a cost-effective strategy to reduce the incidence of food-borne illness in humans has been met. [49078]

Yvette Cooper: Yes. The strategy was agreed by the Food Standards Agency's board at the public board meeting held on 9 May 2001 and has been published on the Agency's website. Six monthly updates on progress are presented to the board and these papers are also published on the Agency's website.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Service Delivery Agreement target of the Food Standards Agency to contribute to the renegotiation of the European Meat Hygiene Directive so as better to protect public health and produce a more efficient enforcement system has been met. [49249]

Yvette Cooper: The European Meat Hygiene Directive is being consolidated into four new European Union Food Hygiene Regulations. The Food Standards Agency has contributed to the negotiations that have taken place to date on the proposals and also on a Commission decision, agreed last April, which requires the introduction of Hazard Analysis and Critical Control Point (HACCP) based controls in licensed meat plants. It is considered that the introduction of HACCP based controls will provide better protection for public health. The Commission, having withdrawn earlier proposals on official controls, is expected to publish new proposals shortly and the Agency will take part in the subsequent negotiations with a view to achieving a legislative base for a more efficient enforcement system.

Photodynamic Therapy

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is regarding photodynamic therapy and its availability on the NHS. [49022]

Jacqui Smith: At present, photodynamic therapy is not routinely available under the National Health Service. The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) is carrying out an appraisal of the use of photodynamic therapy in the treatment of macular disease, which they expect to complete in July, providing there are no appeals.

The Department has asked NHS bodies to continue with local arrangements for the managed introduction of new technologies where guidance from NICE is not available at the time the technology first became available. These arrangements should involve an assessment of all relevant factors including the available evidence on effect.

Equipment Assistance (Personal Care)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on providing people on income support with special equipment to help with personal care. [49842]

Jacqui Smith: People on income support who need equipment to help with personal care have it provided on the same basis as other people with the same needs. Equipment provided by the National Health Service is free of charge to all. Equipment provided by local councils may attract a charge according to local policy.

Fluoride

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are to distribute fluoridated milk in schools. [50607]

Yvette Cooper: Decisions on whether to offer fluoridated milk in schools are taken locally following consultation between the community dental service, the school and parents. There are currently seven fluoridated milk schemes at schools in the North West and Yorkshire.

Scanners

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of cancer were detected using (a) x-rays and (b) CT scanners in each hospital trust in the last 12 months. [50614]

Yvette Cooper: This information requested is not available. Information on the numbers of diagnostic tests undertaken annually does not record the clinical outcome of each individual test.

NHSnet

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the PSA target to connect all GP surgeries to NHSnet by the end of 2002 will be met. [47294]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 10 April 2002]: We are on track to meet target. There are likely be some dispensations agreed with Health Authorities for a small number of surgeries where it would not be practical or cost-effective to install a connection for a short period (e.g. where the GP is about to retire, or working from temporary premises).

Equal Treatment

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what progress he has achieved in establishing a baseline for policy appraisal against which to measure progress on equal treatment; [48010]

(2) will list the subject of each gender impact assessment drawn up by his Department since June 1997, indicating in each case whether the outcome has been (a) put out to consultation and (b) published. [48012]

Jacqui Smith: [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The Department of Health is committed to providing equality of opportunity in all aspects of its work and gender is one aspect to be considered along with race, disability, age and sexual orientation. All policy development must support of the core principles in the NHS Plan, one of which states that the NHS of the 21st century must be responsive to the needs of different groups and individuals within society and challenge discrimination on the grounds of age, gender, ethnicity, religion, disability and sexuality. The Department has been working with the Women and Equality unit on the production of the health section of its forthcoming publication "Key Indicators of Women's Position in Britain".

The Department has also been working in collaboration with the Women and Equality Unit at the Cabinet Office on two case studies to test out the methodology developed by the Unit for assessing gender impact. These are the development of the National Service Framework for Diabetes and the implementation of the National Service Framework for Mental Health. These case studies are nearing completion.

The Diabetes National Service Framework was announced in April 1999 and the standard document to support the NSF was published in December 2001. The report of the use of the Gender Impact Assessment tool in the production of these standards is expected to be published via the Cabinet Office website in the near future. The Diabetes National Service Framework: Standards were developed with the help of an expert reference group with a wide range of representative interests, including service users. The Delivery Strategy will be published later this year and consultation on the contents is being undertaken through the department's website.

Gender impact assessment has been used in developing a strategy around women's mental health. The development of a strategy was announced in March 2001. A consultation document on the women's mental health strategy is to be published in the next few months. A three month formal consultation period will follow.

Press and Public Relations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer given to the hon. Member for the Isle of Wight (Mr. Turner) of 20 March 2002, Official Report, column 436W, how much the increase in personnel employed in a press or public relations function in his Department since 1997 has cost. [47554]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 April 2002]: The annual costs of personnel employed in the Departments Communications Directorate since 1997–98 are shown in the table below (£,000):

Year	News	Publicity	NHS Communications	Total
1997–98	1,062	1,216	399	2,677
1998–99	1,239	1,122	496	2,857
1999–02	1,253	1,276	543	3,072
2000–01	1,233	839	1,159	3,231
2001–02	1,265	904	1,182	3,351

1. It is not possible to provide a comparable breakdown of costs. The figures provided include all Communications Directorate staff (staff and staff related costs).
2. For the financial year 2001–02 the annual budget figures are shown as the final expenditure figures are not yet available.

Illegal Meat Imports

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures the Food Standards Agency is taking to detect infected meat which has been imported from abroad and (a) is unsafe for human consumption and (b) could pass the infection to a farm animal; and if he will make a statement. [48175]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 11 April 2002]: European Union (EU) food hygiene legislation on meat for human consumption requires that all meat sold on the single market must be fit for human consumption, and free from animal diseases. It must have passed the specified health checks under veterinary supervision, and have been awarded the appropriate health mark.

Meat produced within the EU may circulate freely on the single market, and is not subject to border controls. However, imports of meat from other EU states are subject to random checks by the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) at meat cutting plants, or by local authorities in meat plants under their supervision. Following problems over the presence of Specified Risk Material in contravention of BSE rules, the Food Standards Agency has instructed the MHS to inspect every single consignment of imported carcass beef.

All meat imports from third countries also have to satisfy the conditions set out in EU food hygiene and import legislation. The latter includes prior notification and importation through EU authorised Border Inspection Posts (BIPs). In the BIP, the meat is subject to a 100 per cent check of identity and documentation, and a random physical check. The controls cover both public and animal health aspects with responsibility resting respectively with the Food Standards Agency and the Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA). Local authorities, including port health authorities, have day-to-day responsibility for enforcement of the import legislation in BIPs.

Agency officials are exploring proposals made in a report approved by the Board of the Food Standards Agency with a view to making a number of improvements to controls on imports at ports, and have already issued written guidance to port health authorities and local authorities to ensure there is continued vigilance and checks on imported products both at the point of import and at the retail level. In addition the Food Standards Agency is taking an active role in interdepartmental initiatives led by DEFRA aimed at co-ordinating action across Government concerned with illegal imports of meat.

Sussex Ambulance Service

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the total cost to public funds since 1 May 1997 from the work carried out, including consultation processes, on the future configuration of the ambulance service serving Sussex. [49278]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 15 April 2002]: The information is not held centrally.

Treatment Costs

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he collates on (a) the cost of procedures in NHS hospitals and (b) the charges for procedures in private hospitals and private beds in NHS hospitals. [50063]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 16 April 2002]: Reference costs data is the main source of cost data on individual treatments and procedures in the National Health Service. This information is collected annually from NHS providers (including primary care trusts) and is analysed to produce national average costs which are published.

The level of detail is dependent on the services. Inpatient and day case episodes are sub-divided into over 500 Healthcare Resource Groups (HRGs). HRGs are groups of clinically similar procedures and treatments which are iso-resource. They are developed by clinicians, and signed off by the respective Royal Colleges.

Outpatient attendances are, at a minimum, analysed on the number of first and follow up attendances for each specialty. Some specialties are analysed using more sophisticated workload measures. Full details can be found on the Department's website and copies of the Reference Costs 2001 publication are in the Library.

The Department does not collect information on charges for procedures either in private or NHS hospitals for private patients. It has, however, carried out a survey of NHS health authorities and trusts on the acute elective activity they commissioned from the independent sector last year and the related costs, and will make available key results shortly.

NHS Finance

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what deficit or surplus was carried forward by each NHS trust, health authority and primary care trust and group in England at the beginning of financial years (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (c) 2002–03. [50064]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 16 April 2002]: Information relating to NHS trust surpluses and deficits for the 2000–01 financial year has been placed in the library. The NHS trust information requested for 2001–02 and 2002–03 will not be available until the annual audited accounts are completed and published for those financial years.

In anticipation of the introduction of Resource accounting and budgeting across all Government departments from April 2001, a change made to the format of the annual accounts from 2000–01 means that health authorities (including Primary Care Groups) and primary care trusts, are no longer required to account on an income & expenditure basis. The concept of income and expenditure deficits and surpluses is, therefore, no longer applicable, having been replaced by a measure which seeks to ensure that health authorities and primary care trusts live within the approved resource limits set by the Department.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what powers regional NHS officials have to claw back (a) unspent allocations at the end of the year for which they have been allocated and (b) ring-fenced allocations and special purpose grants during the year for which they have been allocated. [50067]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 16 April 2002]: HM Treasury allows the Department to carry forward under spends from one year to the next. In turn, the Department allows the NHS this same flexibility.

Section 97(6) of the NHS Act 1977 as amended provides for the Secretary of State to issue directions to ring fence specific allotments of funding. Ring fenced funding may only be used for the purposes specified in such directions. The Secretary of State may, under section 97(5) of the NHS Act 1977 as amended, claw back under spends of ring fenced funding. However this has not been the recent practice.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for the five largest PFI contracts let by his Department in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [45591]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer Monday 25 March]: The information requested is shown in the table (all figures are expressed in cash terms). Attention is drawn to the footnotes to the table as a lot of these early PFI schemes changed in functionality terms after the appointment of the preferred bidder.

1998	Preferred Bidder Price	Final Contract Price
Greenwich	£15,355,000 (annual unitary charge)	£17,327,000 (annual unitary charge)[1]
Calderdale	£17,500,000 (annual unitary charge)	£14,500,000 (annual unitary charge)[2]
South Manchester	£539,000,000 (total cash flows over 45 years)	£519,000,000 (total cash flows over 35 years)
Norfolk and Norwich	£28,825,000 (annual unitary charge)[3]	£35,300,000 (annual unitary charge)
North Durham	£14,660,000 (annual unitary charge)	£11,960,000 (annual unitary charge)[4]
1999
South Tees	£20,300,000 (annual unitary charge)	£21,900,000 (annual unitary charge)[5]
Swindon and Marlborough	£8,575,000 (annual availability charge only)[6]	£10,914,000 (annual availability charge only)[7]
Worcester	£15,557,000 (annual unitary charge)	£18,302,000 (annual unitary charge)[8]
Hereford	£9,471,000 (annual unitary charge)	£9,517,000 (annual unitary charge)
King's	£6,439,000 (annual availability charge only)[9]	£7,211,000 (annual availability charge only)
2000 (only 4 major schemes signed contracts in 2000)
St George's	No change in annual unitary charge between preferred bidder stage and final contract price	£6,804,000 (annual unitary charge)
Leeds Community	£9,090,000 (annual unitary charge)	£8,130,000 (annual unitary charge)[10]
Hull and East Yorks	£320,000 (annual unitary charge)	£1,400,000 (annual unitary charge)[11]
UCLH	Construction price for the 2 phases of the development was £153,000,000	Construction price for the 2 phases of the development was £225,000,000[12]
2001 (only 3 major schemes signed contracts in 2001)
West Berkshire	£4,019,512 (annual unitary charge)	£4,020,000 (annual unitary charge)
Dudley	£27,484,000 (annual unitary charge)	£25,954,000 (annual unitary charge)
West Middlesex	£8,595,000 (annual unitary charge)	£8,875,000 (annual unitary charge)

[1] Final contract price includes interest rate adjustment.
[2] Initial proposal was for all new build; this was negotiated by the Trust to be a mix of new build and refurbished buildings, hence the reduction in price.
[3] Preferred bidder price for initial specification of 701 beds; final contract price for 809 beds.
[4] Sterile services was removed after the preferred bidder stage; the design also underwent some changes.
[5] Project underwent considerable service/build variations before contract close.
[6] The figures in both columns for Swindon and Marlborough exclude facilities management costs because at preferred bidder stage the range of services to be included in the scheme had not yet been decided.
[7] The scheme at preferred bidder stage was for the redevelopment of the existing Princess Margaret Hospital, whilst the charge at financial close is for a new build on a green field site i.e. a completely different type of project. The former had a substantial element of refurbished building and was around 10 per cent smaller.
[8] Incorporates addition of 74 beds at Kidderminster and equipment.
[9] Includes an adjustment to exclude the benefit of a capital sale receipt of £2.8 million to ensure a like-for-like comparison with final contract price.
[10] The reduction was due to negotiations with the bidder, reduction in interest rates of 1.7 per cent and the sale of land which reduced the unitary charge by £492,000 per annum.
[11] The scheme cost increased from £3.9 million to £8.1 million due to inclusion of additional facilities and "hard FM" services.
[12] Scheme cost increased due to addition of more beds to the scheme following the National Beds Inquiry Report in February 2000.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for the Crawley Hospital Energy Management for the Surrey and Sussex Health Care NHS Trust by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49516]

Yvette Cooper: The Crawley scheme was set in April 1999 on a ten-year contract. It is a cost-neutral scheme (i.e. the costs of the scheme are offset by the energy savings generated).

The public sector comparator was made and showed the Honeywell Scheme to cost the Trust £400,000 less than pursuing a non-PFI alternative over the life of the scheme.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the PSA target for efficiency and other value for money gains in Departmental operations of 2.5 per cent was met in (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01. [47281]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer Wednesday 10 April 2002]: Information about progress on meeting this PSA target in was published in the Department's 2001 Departmental Report, a copy of which is in the Library. This recorded that we were on course to deliver the target.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he had made of whether the target to bring sickness absence levels down to 6.8 days per staff year by 2003 will be met. [47361]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 10 April 2002]: Information about progress on PSA targets will be published in the Department's 2002 Departmental Report.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many auditors have been trained since April 2001 in pursuit of the Service Delivery Agreement target to protect consumers through improved food safety and standards. [49241]

Yvette Cooper: The targets published in the 2000 spending review delivery agreement were achieved. By April 2001, 6 auditors in England, 3 in Scotland and 2 in Northern Ireland were trained to audit local authorities. Since April 2001, 1 auditor has been trained in Wales and a further 2 auditors have been trained in England, with a further 2 to be trained during 2002–2003. More will be trained as the programme of audits requires.

Departmental Report

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the 2002 Departmental report will be published. [49584]

Mr. Hutton: The 2002 Departmental Reports will be published in spring 2002. The dates will be announced shortly.

NHS Direct

Mr. Simon Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what is the average time it takes to get through to NHS Direct over the last month for which figures are available. [46715]

Mr. Hutton [holding reply 10 April 2002]: The information requested is not collected centrally. However, the average time it takes for NHS Direct to answer the telephone is approximately thirty seconds after the confidentiality message finishes.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many staff were involved in each of the last three years in preparing draft answers to written parliamentary questions; [49144]

(2) what the cost was to his Department of answering written parliamentary questions in 2001; and how that cost was calculated. [49102]

Mr. Leslie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the member for Livingston on 17 April 2002, Official Report, column 929W.

Performance Targets

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the target has been in each of the last five years for efficiency savings as a percentage of total running costs for each of the non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible; and if the target was met. [49637]

Mr. Leslie: Details of the Equal Opportunities Commission's expenditure and accounts are published in their combined annual report and accounts, which is available in the Library of the House. Efficiency savings for my Department's Advisory NDPBs are those applicable to the Department as a whole.

Consultation Documents

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many of its consultation documents published in 2001 in electronic or printed form the Cabinet Office has monitored and evaluated in accordance with its Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [49952]

Mr. Leslie: All five Cabinet Office consultation documents published in 2001 that are subject to the Code of Practice were monitored to ensure compliance with the Code. No evaluation of the consultations has been undertaken so far.

The Cabinet Office's Centre for Management and Policy Studies is developing a "consultation toolkit" to help officials within the Cabinet Office and throughout central government consult more effectively. It will include a section on evaluation.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which consultation documents published by the Cabinet Office in 2001 were not made available as paper copies. [49951]

Mr. Leslie: All five Cabinet Office consultation documents published in 2001 that are subject to the Code of Practice were made available as paper copies.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister in respect of which of its consultation documents published in 2001 in electronic or printed form the Cabinet Office allowed less than the recommended minimum 12 weeks' consultation period; and what explanation for this departure from the Code of Practice on Written Consultations was given. [49950]

Mr. Leslie: None of the five Cabinet Office UK national public consultation documents published in 2001 that are subject to the Code of Practice allowed less than a 12-week consultation period.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which mechanisms the Cabinet Office uses for monitoring and evaluating the quality of its consultation documents in electronic and printed form. [49953]

Mr. Leslie: The Cabinet Office Consultation Co-ordinator monitors departmental consultations that are subject to the Code of Practice and advises officials on compliance when required. The Cabinet Office's Centre for Management and Policy Studies is developing a "consultation toolkit" to help officials within the Cabinet Office and throughout central government consult more effectively. It will include a section on evaluation.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many complaints the Cabinet Office has received about its 2001 consultations in electronic or printed form. [49947]

Mr. Leslie: Two complaints were received and responded to in relation to one of the five Cabinet Office consultation documents published in 2001 that are subject to the Code of Practice.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if the Cabinet Office has published the results of all its 2001 written consultations in electronic or printed form. [49948]

Mr. Leslie: Results have been published for one of the five Cabinet Office consultations published in 2001 that were subject to the Code of Practice. Results have been published both in print and electronic form, for the consultation on "The Future of Emergency Planning in England and Wales" (August 2001). Details are available from the House of Commons library and on the Civil Contingency Unit's website at www.ukresilience.info.

Information on the results for the four other Cabinet Office consultations is as follows:

Young Runaways (March 2001)

The formal written consultation was part of a wider consultation process that included field visits, internationally and in England, as well as further consultation with young people through focus groups. The written consultation replies will be reflected in the final report to be published in Autumn 2002 on the Social Exclusion Unit website at www.socialexclusionunit.gov.uk.

Raising the Educational Attainment of Children in Care (July 2001)

The analysis of responses will be published on the Internet as part of the project's "Knowledge Pool", which is due to be launched on 23 April 2002. The Knowledge Pool will be on the Cabinet Office's Social Exclusion Unit website at www.socialexclusionunit.gov.uk.

Transport and Social Exclusion July 2001

The results of the consultation will be published in the Summer on the Social Exclusion website at www.socialexclusionunit.gov.uk.

Licensing of Crown Copyright (HMSO—Cabinet Office Agency) (October 2001)

The results will be published on the HMSO's website at www.hmso.gov.ukonce the analysis of responses is complete.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which Government departments and agencies have appointed designated consultation co-ordinators in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations. [49955]

Mr. Leslie: The following departments and agencies have appointed designated consultation co-ordinators:

Main Departments

The Cabinet Office
Department for Culture, Media and Sport
Department for Education and Skills
Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs
Department of Health Department for International Development

Refurbishment

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library the certificates showing that timber used for replacement doors and windows in the refurbishment of the Cabinet Office has been certified as coming from sustainable sources. [51417]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary at column 1251.

My Department is currently, with Balfour Beatty, undertaking a full investigation and will report back to the House.

Llew Smith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his policy is on the use of wood from sustainable sources in the refurbishment of the Cabinet Office. [49490]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary at column 1251.

My Department is currently, with Balfour Beatty, undertaking a full investigation and will report back to the House.

Ms Walley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what organisation or company provided the certification for the doors and windows for the refurbishment of the Ripley and Kirkland buildings to show that they were produced from sustainably managed sources; and if he will place a copy of these certificates in the Library; [41345]

(2) who provided, or is providing, the (a) windows and (b) doors for the refurbishment of the Ripley and Kirkland buildings. [41346]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary at column 1251W.

My Department is currently, with Balfour Beatty, undertaking a full investigation and will report back to the House.

Ms Walley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, (1) how much has been spent on timber for the refurbishment of the Ripley and Kirkland building; [35686]

(2) how much certified timber has been used in the refurbishment of the Ripley and Kirkland building; and what proportion of the total timber purchased for this refurbishment this represents; [35685]

(3) what action was taken by his Department to ensure that timber procured for the refurbishment of the Ripley and Kirkland building was sourced (a) sustainably and (b) legally. [35684]

Mr. Leslie [pursuant to the answer I gave on 14 February, column 558]: I regret to say that the information I provided was incorrect. The contract used with the main contractor for the refurbishment of 22 Whitehall (comprising the Ripley and Kirkland Buildings) did not specify that all timber should be supplied from certifiable sustainably managed sources upon which certificates are to be made available. The contract does require that timber for the doors and door frames in the Ripley Building should be "supplied from a certified renewable source. Certificates to be provided." The contract did not specify the source of any other timber to be used in the buildings.

I provided the original answer to the House in good faith on the basis of information provided to Cabinet Office officials. I am grateful to my hon. friend the Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North for her interest in this matter. As a result of her investigations, we are currently, with Balfour Beatty, undertaking a full investigation in to all circumstances surrounding this matter and will report back to the House.

Civil Contingencies Secretariat

Mrs. Claire Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, if he will list the members of the Civil Contingencies Secretariat. [49827]

Mr. Leslie: Mike Granatt is the head of the Civil Contingencies Secretariat, of which there are currently 123 members.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Residential Care

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his estimate is of the number of (a) residential and (b) nursing home places available to the elderly in each of the last three years. [49923]

Jacqui Smith: I have been asked to reply.

The requested information is shown in the table.

Number of places in homes for elderly and elderly mentally infirm people England

Rounded Numbers

31 March	1999	2000	2001
Residential Care	265,090	263,430	260,070
Nursing Care	150,370	149,960	142,520

Dungavel Detention Centre

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the hunger strike by asylum seekers at Dungavel detention centre; [50513]

(2) how many children are detained at his Department's Dungavel centre; how many of that number have special needs as a result of disability or health problems; and what level of education and healthcare is provided for these children; [50438]

(3) if he will make a statement on his assessment of the management of the Dungavel detention centre in Scotland; [50436]

(4) what medical care is available to asylum seekers detained at the Dungavel centre. [50437]

Angela Eagle: Dungavel Removal Centre is managed and operated by Premier Services Ltd. All removal centres must provide for the safety and care of detainees in compliance with the Detention Centre Rules 2001. The Rules set out the rights and responsibilities of those held in removal centres and of those who operate such centres. The contract with Premier reflects the requirements of the Rules.

The number and profile of detainees, including the number of children, at an immigration removal centre changes from day-to-day. Internal management information records that on the morning of Monday 15 April 2002 there were 15 children at Dungavel Removal Centre and of these, two had special needs as a result of disability or health problems.

A programme of modular education is provided at Dungavel for all school age children.

There are excellent medical facilities at Dungavel in the dedicated healthcare unit. This unit includes two hospital beds. There is a full time doctor and five full time nurses. There is a 24-hour on call facility to both doctors and nurses. There is a weekly visit by a dentist and an optician visits the centre fortnightly. These medical facilities are available to all detainees including children.

Reports that have recently been circulating suggesting that there has been a hunger strike by a number of detainees at Dungavel are completely unfounded.

On Tuesday 9 April a number of detainees announced their intention to stage what they termed a "non-compliance" day. Detainees refused to get out of bed, take part in removal centre activities such as education or sport activities or eat in the centre's dining hall. They did, however, continue to buy food from the centre's shop.

Most detainees ate lunch and supper the next day and the centre has been operating normally since.

Asylum Seekers

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what proportion of asylum seekers held in removal centres are waiting for an initial decision on their application; and if he will make a statement. [48699]

Angela Eagle: I regret that the information requested is not available and could be obtained only by examining individual case files at disproportionate cost.

Asylum And Immigration Act

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there were under section 8 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996 in (a) 2000 and (b) 2001; and if he will make a statement. [50809]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 18 April 2002]: Information from the Home Office Court Proceedings database on a principal offence basis indicates that in 2000, 32 persons were prosecuted under section 8 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996. More recent information is not yet available. Information on the number of prosecutions in 2001 is due to be published in the Command Paper "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom 2001" later this year.

The Government set out its proposals for tackling illegal working in Chapter 5 of the White Paper, "Secure Borders, Safe Haven: Integration with Diversity in Modern Britain" (CM 5387). These proposals included suggested amendments to section 8 of the 1996 Act, which now form part of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Bill, introduced in the House of Commons on 12 April 2002.

Special Advisers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number and expected cost to his Department of special advisers in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [43284]

Mr. Blunkett: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Grieve) on 23 October 2001, Official Report, column 211W.

With regard to the pay of special advisers, I refer the Hon Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 10 April 2002, Offical Report, column 11W.

Secondments

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff were seconded between (a) PWC Consulting and Pricewaterhouse-Coopers, (b) Ernst & Young, (c) Deloitte & Touche, (d) KPMG and (e) Andersen and his Department in (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–01 and (iii) April 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available. [33868]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 26 February 2002, Official Report column 1266W.

Police Reform

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers he will gain under the proposed Police Reform Bill; if police authorities will be involved in directions given to chief officers and in the suspension of chief constables under the proposed reforms; what the role of the community support officers will be; what police powers will be given to accredited persons and what their responsibilities will be; what estimate he has made of how much the proposals on police reform will cost; and if he will make a statement. [48850]

Mr. John Denham [holding answer 17 April 2002]: I refer my hon. Friend to Explanatory Notes published with the Bill.

Asylum Cases

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average time taken was from first application to initial decision in asylum cases in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [50808]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 18 April 2002]: I refer the hon Member to the reply given on 3 April 2002, Official Report, column 1066W which gives the latest available information.

Information for the 12 months to March 2002 will be available on 30 May 2002.

Vehicle Clamping

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what estimate he has of the number of vehicles clamped in the last full year for which figures are available; what was the (a) total number and (b) monetary amount of fines levied; what proportion and what amount of the fines levied were collected; and if he will make a statement; [49908]

(2) what regulations govern private clamping companies; [49910]

(3) what was the largest fine that could be imposed in respect of an uncollected vehicle, which had been towed away after it had been clamped, in each of the last five years. [49909]

Mr. Denham: There are no regulations relating to clamping on private property and we do not collect any information about the number of vehicles clamped or the fines levied. The Private Security Industry Act 2001 creates the Security Industry Authority. The authority, which will regulate the industry through licensing, will begin operations in 2003 and will have wheel clamping as one of its priority areas.

Experience Corps Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 595W, regarding the experience corps initiative if the initiative has been launched. [50399]

Angela Eagle: The Experience Corps Company began this initiative in November 2001. This is across the nine English government regions, seven of which have operations under way. I understand that the Experience Corps Company will launch in the South East, which includes Buckingham, and South West Regions by June 2002.

Yarl's Wood Detention Centre

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his statement of 25 February 2002, Official Report, column 441, on the Yarl's Wood fire, whether fatalities have been discovered since 25 February. [50018]

Angela Eagle: No fatalities have been discovered to date.

Immigration

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average waiting time for determination of applications for indefinite leave to remain in the UK on the basis of marriage was in the last 12 months. [49943]

Angela Eagle: I regret that there are no published data on decision times for individual types of applications for indefinite leave to remain. Our aim is to decide 65 per cent of all straightforward applications on initial consideration within three weeks. Due to the exceptionally high number of applications received over the past year, and process changes which are being introduced to improve our longer term performance, it is at present taking up to six weeks to decide an application on initial consideration. We are working to reduce this to three weeks or less as soon as possible. Information on expected processing times for straightforward cases is provided to applicants on the Immigration and Nationality Directorate web site at http://194.203.40.90/default.asp?PageId=113

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Immigration and Nationality Directorate received the application from Mrs. F. N. M., a Jamaican national living in Aylesbury, for leave to remain in the United Kingdom as the wife of a person with indefinite leave to remain (ref M1005958); when he intends to notify the applicant of his decision; and if he will make a statement. [50039]

Angela Eagle: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate received Mrs. M's application on 14 February 2000. She was notified on 16 April 2002 that she had been granted leave to remain. I am sorry that this application was overlooked whilst a waiting a hearing date for her outstanding appeal.

Football Hooligans

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals, by club, who purport to support English Nationwide and Premier League football teams are classified as football hooligans within Home Office categories. [49931]

Angela Eagle: Those housed in Accommodation Centres will receive a small cash allowance for incidental expenses, which could include public transport.

Asylum Services (Edinburgh)

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions his Department has had with representatives of the City of Edinburgh Council following its decision to pull out of negotiations with the National Asylum Support Service. [42730]

Angela Eagle: The City of Edinburgh Council has advised officials from the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) that they wish to suspend formal negotiations regarding a contract to supply accommodation for dispersed asylum seekers.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for Rainsbrook (Onley) Secure Training Centre by comparison with a non-Private Finance Initiative alternative. [49650]

Beverley Hughes: The estimated total savings to public funds of the Private Finance Initiative contract for Hassockfield (Medomsley) Secure Training Centre by comparison with a Public Sector alternative is £29.5 million (exeluding VAT).

The contract was amended on 9 August 2001 to provide an additional 36 trainee places. The estimated total savings to public funds of these additional places by comparison with a Public Sector alternative is £10.5 million (excluding VAT).

Certificates of Identity

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which European Union countries do not accept the Home Office Certificate of Identity as a valid travel document; what reasons each of them has provided his Department for this policy; how he has addressed each of these reasons; when he expects the Certificate of Identity to be accepted throughout the EU; and if he will make a statement. [48891]

Angela Eagle: The Home Office Certificate of Identity (CID) is a travel document issued to foreign nationals, other than refugees, who are resident in the United Kingdom and cannot obtain a passport from their national authorities.

The CID is issued on a discretionary basis, not under an international convention. European Union Member States are not obliged to recognise the document. Those Member States which do not do so, and generally do not issue travel visas to CID holders, include France, Belgium, Germany, Greece and Spain.

The stance taken by all these countries is largely influenced by the fact that CID holders have no absolute right of re-admission on return from travel abroad. In response we have explained that this does not cause difficulties in practice, as CID holders are entitled to return to any United Kingdom port on a date within the CID's validity, and a visa is not required. Under the Immigration Rules, re-admission after examination by an immigration officer is not an automatic entitlement, but would normally be granted, on the basis that residency here is to be resumed. There are no plans to give CID holders an absolute right of re-admission. To do so would put them in a more favourable position than other foreign nationals who are resident here. Only British citizens, and Commonwealth citizens who have the right of abode here, have an unconditional right of re-entry.

Positive efforts will continue to be made by the Home Office with a view to achieving full acceptance for the CID, including giving consideration to alteration of the standard wording of the CID to meet Schengen concerns.

Documents (Croydon)

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what records are kept regarding the whereabouts of documents sent to the Home Office facility in Croydon. [49683]

Angela Eagle: All packages received by recorded or special delivery are recorded on a database on the date of receipt. There is an audit trail of the subsequent movement of those packages. All applications and their movements are recorded on a case information database. Details of the passports submitted by applicants are recorded in their individual case records on that database. These systems are supported by local manual records recording the movement of passports and any other valuable documents.

Leave to Remain Applications

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what monitoring systems are used to track applications by non-UK citizens to remain in the UK on the basis of marriage. [49682]

Angela Eagle: All new applications for leave to remain in the United Kingdom, including those lodged on the basis of marriage, are recorded on a case information database, together with any subsequent actions that may take place concerning that application.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average time was to process an application for a non-UK citizen to remain in the UK on the basis of marriage over the last 12 months. [49684]

Angela Eagle: I regret that there are no published data on decision times for individual types of spouse applications. Our aim is to decide 65 per cent of all straightforward applications on initial consideration within three weeks. Due to the exceptionally high number of applications received over the past year, and process changes which are being introduced to improve our longer term performance, it is at present taking up to six weeks to decide an application on initial consideration. We are working to reduce this to three weeks or less as soon as possible. Information on expected processing times for straightforward cases is provided to applicants on the Immigration and Nationality Directorate web site at http://194.203.40.90/default.asp?PageId=113.

Passports (Return)

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average length of time was for a passport to be returned to United Kingdom citizens from the Home Office facility in Croydon over the last 12 months. [49685]

Angela Eagle: This information is not available and could only be obtained at a disproportionate cost. However, United Kingdom passports are received only in those cases where the sponsor is a British citizen and where a passport is required as evidence of that status. They are normally returned with any other documents submitted by the applicant when an application is decided. Over the last 12 months, the majority of applications for leave to remain in the United Kingdom were decided within three weeks, but over recent months this has been nearer to six weeks due to high levels of intake.

Asylum Seekers (Throckmorton Airfield)

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the additional funding required for (a) policing and (b) fire services if an asylum seekers centre were to be established at Throckmorton airfield; [48727]

(2) what assessment he has made of the additional funding required for (a) transport and (b) housing if an asylum seekers centre were to be established at Throckmorton airfield. [48725]

Angela Eagle: In making final decisions on preferred sites, we will take all the relevant factors into account including those to which the hon Member refers. These assessments have not yet been made.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum cases have been dealt with over the last three years; how many cases have succeeded after the appeal process; how many cases have been refused; how many of those refused did not seek appeal; how many of those denied asylum have been removed from the UK; how many left voluntarily; how many are awaiting removal; and if he will make a statement. [47390]

Angela Eagle: Information for 1999 to 2001 on applications for asylum, and initial decisions made, is shown in Table 1. However these initial decisions do not all relate to applications made between 1999 and 2001.

[3] May exclude some cases lodged at Local Enforcement Offices between January and March 2000.
[4] Information is of initial decisions, excluding the outcome of appeals or other subsequent decisions.
[5] Cases considered under normal procedures may include some cases decided under the backlog criteria.
[6] Cases decided under measures aimed at reducing the pre 1996 asylum application backlog.
[7] Includes some cases where the application has been refused on substantive grounds.
[p] Figures for 2000 and 2001 are provisional and subject to change.

Information on the numbers of appeals allowed and dismissed at the adjudicator stage is given in Table 2.

[2] Appeals to the Tribunal can be brought be the appellant or the Secretary of State against a decision of an adjudicator. The figures do not distinguish and will include appeals brought by appellants and the Secretary of State.
[3] Total of these figures will not equal total determined in final column as these figures relate to cases for which information is known by the Home Office.
[4] Based on data supplied by the Lord Chancellor's Department.
[p] Figures for 2000 and 2001 are provisional and subject to change.

Information on the numbers of Judicial Reviews which were allowed, dismissed and withdrawn, for which data are available, is given in Table 4.

Table 4: Outcome of Asylum Appeals at Judicial Review, 1999–2001[1,2]

Number of principal appellants

Total[p]	625	360	160	1,145

[1] Figures rounded to the nearest 5.
[2] Figures refer to substantive judicial reviews (exclude permission applications). The figures also exclude asylum support judicial reviews.
[p] Figures for 2000 and 2001 are provisional and subject to change.

Information on the numbers refused at the initial decision stage who did not appeal is not available for the last three years and could only be obtained by examination of individual case files at disproportionate cost. However analysis of electronic data based on cases where data are available, indicated that around 50–60 per cent of refusals result in an appeal.

It is not possible to determine how many persons, denied asylum in this period, have been removed or await removal. The total number of asylum seekers (excluding dependants) removed in the last three years is given in Table 5. These figures include persons applying for asylum prior to 1999, and those departing voluntarily. The table identifies persons leaving voluntarily under Assisted Voluntary Return programmes. Others departing voluntarily after enforcement action has been initiated are included within the total numbers removed but cannot be separately identified. It is also not possible to say how many persons depart without informing the Immigration Service.

Table 5: Asylum applicants removed from the United Kingdom, 1999–2001

Number of principal applicants

	Principal asylum applicants removed[1,2]	Of which, Assisted Voluntary Returns[3]
1999	7,660	50
2000[r]	8,980	550
2001[r,4]	9,285	995
Total[r,4]	25,925	1,595

[1] Figures rounded to the nearest 5.
[2] Includes persons departing "voluntarily" after enforcement action had been initiated against them and persons leaving under Assisted Voluntary Return Programmes run by the International Organisation for Migration.
[3] Persons leaving under Assisted Voluntary Return Programmes.
[4] Figures exclude 1,055 dependants of asylum seekers who were removed in the period April to December 2001. Data on dependants removed have only been collected since April 2001.
[r] Figures for 2000 and 2001 are provisional and subject to change.

Information on initial decisions, asylum appeals and removals is published quarterly. The next publication will cover the period up to March 2002, and will be available from 31 May 2002 on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate web site at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether residents of accommodation centres for asylum seekers will be able to go to and fro as they wish. [48939]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 15 April 2002]: I refer the hon Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Edinburgh West (Mr. Barrett) on 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 98W.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what sum his Department will transfer from its budget to the Ministry of Defence in respect of land vacated by the Ministry of Defence logistics at Bicester if such land is used by his Department as an accommodation centre for asylum seekers; and by whom, and how, such sums have been calculated. [48949]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 15 April 2002]: Ministry of Defence and Home Office officials are in contact on this issue, although no agreement has as yet been reached.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 11 February to the hon. Member for Mid Worcestershire (Mr. Luff), Official Report, column 57W, on asylum accommodation centres, what further sites his Department has identified through procurement competition as possible sites for accommodation centres for asylum seekers; and if he will specify the sites and the criteria used in their selection. [48952]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 15 April 2002]: I refer the hon Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Mid Worcestershire (Mr. Luff) on 7 February 2002, Official Report, column 1134W.

No further sites have as yet been identified.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in relation to land vacated by Ministry of Defence Logistics at Bicester, what consultations (a) have taken and (b) will take place with members of the local community; and how consultation has been or will be carried out in respect of the proposal to establish an accommodation centre for asylum seekers on this land. [48943]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 15 April 2002]: Officials are discussing with relevant planning authorities the best way of consulting the public and other interested parties in the areas identified as having potential accommodation centre sites.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in respect of the establishment of accommodation centres for asylum seekers, if there will be compensation payable to householders living nearby whose property may be reduced in value as a consequence of the setting up of such accommodation centres. [48935]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 15 April 2002]: We do not anticipate grounds for compensation of this nature.

Asylum Seekers (Education)

Mr. James Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what representations his Department has made to French officials on the situation at the Sangatte refugee camp in Northern France. [46983]

Angela Eagle: The United Kingdom and French Governments have developed close working relationships at all levels on bilateral asylum and immigration issues. There are frequent discussions of the problems of cross Channel illegal immigration and the situation at Sangatte in particular.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and the French Prime Minister discussed Sangatte and the situation in Northern France during the United Kingdom/French Summit on 29 November 2001. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary (Mr. Blunkett) also discussed the issue with French Social Affairs Minister Elizabeth Guigou on 21 January 2002, and has raised it on a number of occasions with Interior Minister Daniel Vaillant. Officials from both sides are in regular contact on the issue and a Cross Channel Commission subgroup is dealing specifically with the issues surrounding Sangatte. The group met in Paris on 13 February and in London on 18 March to discuss possible ways forward. A further meeting is due to take place in Paris shortly.

Prisons (Education)

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money was spent on literacy lessons in prison in each of the last 10 years. [48913]

Beverley Hughes: Information is not collected centrally on the amount of money spent on individual subjects areas. However, the table shows education spend from 1992–93 to 2001–02.

Financial Year	Education Expenditure (millions)
1992–93	£31.22
1993–94	£31.08
1994–95	£36.75
1995–96	£36.95
1996–97	£34.50
1997–98	£36.17
1998–99	£39.04
1999–00	£40.89
2000–01	£41.87
2001–02	£52.60

Special Advisers

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many special advisers there were in his Department; and what their salaries were in each of the last five years. [46942]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 10 April 2002]: From 1997 to 2001 there were two special advisers in the Home Office.

In relation to special advisers since June 2001, I refer the hon Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Grieve) on 23 October 2001, Official Report, column 211W.

With regard to the pay of special advisers, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 10 April, Official Report, column 11W.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many special advisers were employed by him (a) between 1 May and 31 December 1997 and (b) in each year from 1998 to 2001 inclusive; and what the total amount spent on special advisers by the Department was in each of those years. [41260]

Mr. Blunkett: From 1997 to 2001 there were two special advisers in the Home Office.

In relation to special advisers since June 2001, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Grieve) on 23 October 2001, Official Report, column 211W.

With regard to the pay of special advisers, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 10 April, Official Report, column 11W.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 383

SESSION 2001–2002

10th April—19th April 2002

Printed indexes to Hansard

The volume index is one of three printed indexes to Commons Hansard produced from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Indexing Service (POLIS). It contains references to material in the bound volumes of Hansard. The other indexes produced are:

- The fortnightly index to Hansard. This covers the same date range as the volume index but references are to the column numbering in the daily parts and weekly edition of Hansard.
- The sessional index to Hansard. This contains references to material in the bound volumes for a whole session.

Indexes on the Parliamentary website

Fortnightly, volume and sessional indexes covering material from the beginning of the 1999/2000 session will also appear on the Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk with links to the full text of Hansard.

SCOPE

The indexes include entries covering:

- The content of all material recorded in Hansard, including debates, procedural motions and questions.
- The names of all Members contributing to the Parliamentary business recorded in Hansard.
- The names of some types of Parliamentary business whenever they occur in Hansard. These are 'Ministerial statements', 'Business statements', 'Opposition days' and 'Estimates days'.

ARRANGEMENT

- All headings are in one word-by-word alphabetical sequence, with Members' contribution entries distinguished from other entries by italics.
- Where a Member contributes to Parliamentary business and is the subject of Parliamentary business there are separate contribution and subject entries, the subject entry coming first.
- Entries beginning 'Mac' and 'Mc' are sorted in one sequence as 'Mac'.
- 'St', when abbreviated for Saint, is filed as 'Saint'.
- Numbers are filed as if spelt out, e.g. '10 Downing Street' as if 'Ten Downing Street'.

HEADINGS

Choice of headings

- Specificity—Entries summarise the overall content of a debate or question as specifically as the various POLIS thesauruses allow. For example, Education, Higher education, Universities or the name of a particular university is used depending on the breadth of the item.
- Name headings—Specific entries are included for the names of people, places, institutions, organisations, committees, programmes, initiatives, publications and legislation when these constitute the overall subject of an item.
- Organisations and subjects—Organisation entries are preferred for material about the general performance, administration and staffing of an organisation (for example, United Kingdom Passports Agency, Standards). Subject entries are preferred for what organisations do as part of their duties (for example, Passports, Fees and charges).

Geographical coverage

- Subject headings—Subject headings are assumed to refer to the whole of England, Great Britain or the United Kingdom unless otherwise stated.
- Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales—Material relating to the whole of Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales is indexed under these headings.
- Places within the UK—Material about specific towns, areas and institutions is entered under the name of the specific town, area or institution.
- Foreign countries—Most material relating to foreign countries is collected under the name of that country. Some additional material may be found under the names of—groups of countries, areas within countries, geographical features, place names associated with particular issues, politicians and heads of state, international bodies, and institutions and companies operating in those countries.
- EC/EU material—General material about the European Communities and European institutions as bodies is entered under 'European Communities' and 'EC institutions'. Organisational material about specific communities and institutions is entered under the name of the body, for example 'European Coal and Steel Community' or 'European Parliament'. Material about what the Communities and institutions are doing or propose to do is entered under various subject headings beginning 'EC' such as 'EC environmental policy'.

Parliamentary material and business

- Material about Parliament—This is indexed under 'Parliament', the names of the two Houses, the 'Palace of Westminster' and parts of the Parliamentary estate (such as 'Portcullis House').
- Committees—Material about committees is indexed under 'Committees', types of committee (such as 'Select committees') and the names of individual committees (such as 'Home Affairs Select Committee').
- Parliamentary proceedings/procedures—Material discussing these is indexed under the specific type of proceeding (such as 'Parliamentary questions' or 'Oral questions'), procedure (such as 'Calling of Members') or issue (such as 'Unparliamentary expressions').
- Legislation—Entries for Parliamentary proceedings on bills and statutory instruments are entered under their titles. Where the lead word of the bill or statutory instrument does not provide a full or clear indication of the subject there are additional subject entries when the bill or instrument is debated. For example, debates on the 'Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill' have entries under 'Pensions' and 'Social security benefits' as well as under the title of the Bill.
- Members' names—These are given in the form by which the Member prefers to be known.
- Speaker and Chair—Contributions by the Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker and deputies'. Contributions from the chair during Committees of the Whole House are brought together under 'Chairman of Committee of the Whole House'. Significant rulings and statements (as opposed to routine comments) are indicated by the sub-heading 'Rulings and statements' in both cases.

Guidance on headings

- Cross references—'See' references indicate all the material has been entered under another heading. 'See also' references indicate that additional information may be found under another heading.
- Concept thesaurus—A copy of the subject thesaurus to POLIS, listing the concept entries used in the index, is available on the Parliamentary website. A hard copy is available from the Head of the POLIS Unit, House of Commons Library, 1 Derby Gate, London, SW1A 2DG (020 7219 6456).

REFERENCES

- References in the indexes are to columns rather than pages.
- References to debates, but not questions, are accompanied by the date of the item.
- There are separate sequences in Hansard for the material taken on the floor of the House, Westminster Hall sittings and written questions:
  - References consisting of a number by itself indicate material taken on the floor of the House.
  - References ending in 'wh' indicate Westminster Hall sittings.
  - References ending in 'w' indicate written questions.
- References under all headings except the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in one numerical sequence irrespective of whether the material is taken on the floor of the House, is discussed at a Westminster Hall sitting or is a written question.
- References under the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in numerical sequence under the following headings:
  - Debates etc. (which includes interventions and points of order as well as significant contributions to debates);
  - Sittings in Westminster Hall (covering all debates held as part of the Westminster Hall sittings); and
  - Questions (which includes written, oral and private notice questions).

ABBREVIATIONS

The following abbreviations are used in connection with the progress of bills:

- 1R=First reading
- 2R=Second reading
- Com=Committee stage
- Rep=Report stage
- 3R=Third reading
- res=resolution
- amendt(s)=amendment(s)
- *=matter taken formally without debate or division.
